ON the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the Reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

In compliance with the order of the Treasury, the Master of the Rolls has selected for publication for the present year such works as he considered best calculated to fill up the chasms existing in the printed materials of English history; and of these works the present is one.

PREFACE.

I.—OF THE ERA EMBRACED IN THE WORK.

OUR volume commences with the arrival and settlement of the Franciscan,<sup>1</sup> Minorite, or Gray Friars in England, in 1226, two years before the death of their founder, St. Francis, in the 9th year of the reign of Henry III., and of Honorius III., successor to Pope Innocent III.

It was a stirring and important epoch in the history of Europe. When the policy of Innocent III. seemed on the eve of being crowned with success, a new and more potent influence had started up to threaten the faith of Christendom. The genius of the papacy had provided for all other contingencies ; not for this.

dicet adhuc, 'Minor sum.' Si David, 'Mendicus sum et pauper, immo, 'vernix sum, et non homo,' Franciscus, 'Minor sum.' Si Solomon, 'Stultissimus sum virorum,' Franciscus, 'Minor sum.' . . . Si D. Franciscus de Paula cum suis dicat, 'Nos Minimi sumus,' noster Franciscus dicet, 'Minores Minimis sumus.'"

Slowly had it come to be recognized as the central and supreme authority of the West. The ideal of Gregory VII. had been wrought into a system; Italian policy was playing a successful game in all the courts of Christendom. But a new difficulty had arisen; the Crusades, fostered by the Popes to support the papacy had ended, as all violent antagonisms do end, in producing the most opposite results to those which the promoters of these expeditions had anticipated. The conversion of the Saracens had not been secured;—it seemed much more likely that the converters would become converted. Oriental habits, tastes, and sciences, Oriental modes of thought, and with them the moral and physical diseases of the East, were advancing with a fascination and rapidity not easily described. The simpler people were falling before the more cultivated and subtle. The danger was not the less because the causes and progress of the mischief were scarcely seen or understood.

More especially in the towns.

Contemporary with this new influence, gaining life from it, and lending strength to it in return, the mercantile communities (if yet they deserved that name) were rapidly gaining an importance hitherto unknown. The commercial energies of the Venetians, quickened into life by the Crusades, had reacted on all similar communities in Christendom. Italian legates at the courts, Italian prelates in every town of importance, covered the West with a sympathetic network of communication, diffusing Italian influence and the love of Italian art and luxury through every corner of Europe. Hitherto the towns had been little better than cities of refuge for the slave from feudal oppression. Successive invasions, from the fifth to the eleventh century, had trampled out the ancient aristocracy of the city; the invaders had thrashed out the treasure, not to settle, but to carry their spoils into the country and leave the refuse behind. In vain did the law hold out encouragement to trade, and a promise of nobility to the trader. Life in the town was intolerable to the free spirit of the German; it was everywhere a badge of disgrace.

But the preference thus given to the country where the baron was paramount, and his will unrestrained, drove from the fields into the town whatever remained unsubdued of the spirit of freedom and energy. In the town the Anglo-Saxon thane or alderman could shut his eyes and his gates upon his oppressor. Utterly destitute of social comfort or civilization, except what the Roman had left him, he felt himself secure behind his walls and ditches from the reach of feudal tyranny. He was in equal degree secure from ecclesiastical supervision and interference. Monasteries had provided for the spiritual rule and welfare of the country; for the towns there was no such provision.

Nor, if there had been, was the inhabitant of the town likely to derive advantage from it. At this day we contrast the superiority in point of intelligence and education of the town over the country. In the thirteenth century these advantages were reversed. Schools and libraries, all that survived of art and science from the Teutonic and Norman deluge, existed only in the great monastic societies. Like colleges or Universities spread throughout the country, monasteries diffused learning and education, habits of order and economy among the tenants of the soil. The inhabitant of the town, deprived of these benefits, had to struggle on to light and order, self-taught and self-sustained. He learned from early times, as best he could, habits of independence. The same spirit which animated the great manufacturing cities in the south of France, and made them the centres of opposition to the feudal baron and equally feudal bishop, constituted them also the centres of all freedom of opinion, of all subtle and obstinate heresies ; subtle, because the clergy did not understand them ; obstinate, because they could feel no sympathy for those who entertained them. If the towns sympathized with any faith, or any forms of philosophy, the Oriental had for them the greatest temptation. It was most opposed to that authority which they disliked ; it was most intimately connected with their commercial prosperity.

The Franciscan a missionary to the town.

It was fortunate, then, that the efforts to carry Christianity among the masses of the towns proceeded from one who was not an ecclesiastic, and had received no ecclesiastical education. Happily for the objects of his mission, St. Francis had been brought up as a factor for his father, a wealthy merchant. He had early opportunities, through his mercantile occupations, of coming into contact with the manufacturing population ; and his whole life shows, as well as the rule which he gave to his followers, that he understood better than most men (whatever else might be his failings) the true nature of his mission and the character of the people with whom he had to deal. He had to strip Christianity, in the first instance, of the regal robe in which Popes and prelates had invested it ; to preach it as the gospel of the poor and the oppressed. It was not to be a trap for men's obedience ; it was not to demand a surrender of that independence which the commons of the towns had guarded so jealously, and purchased at such costly sacrifices. He caught the poorest in their poverty ; the subtle in their subtlety ; sending among them preachers as ill-clad and as ill-fed, but as deep thinkers in all respects as themselves. Like other reformers of his age, his earliest thoughts were directed to the Saracens. Among them he proposes to labour. But his purposes right themselves and find their due employment in a larger and more important field. His followers are to visit the towns two and two; in just so much clothing as the commonest mendicant could purchase. They are to sleep at nights under arches, or in the porches of desolate and deserted churches, among idiots, lepers, and outcasts; to beg their bread from door to door; to set an example of piety and submission. "If," he said, "I had as much wisdom as Solomon, and happened to find the poorest, simplest priests in the world, I would not preach in the parishes, wherein they dwell, contrary to their will." And this doctrine of poverty he carried to an excess which would seem fanatical and extravagant, if viewed apart from the circumstances of the times and the object he sought to attain.

But his caution on this point, excessive as it seems, can scarcely be thought unnecessary. It was the only sure method of reaching the large and neglected classes in the town, to whom the wealth of the clergy appeared intolerable, not without reason, if we may trust the denunciations of Grostete and Adam de Marisco. In the utter absence of discipline during the first half of the thirteenth century, livings were becoming hereditary in the hands of an unmarried clergy; the gross disorders and licentiousness of the times justified the exclamation of St. Bernard: "It is no longer true that the priests are as bad as the people; for the priests are worse than the people." Such a clergy were ill suited to gain influence among the miserable population of the towns in the middle ages, had they been willing to attempt the task. But how were they to be supported, if they had? No institutions existed, as in the country, where the abbot presiding over a college of monks held at once the position of a wealthy intelligent landlord and a spiritual ruler of a numerous tenantry? If the poor Franciscan

friar was an interloper, he was an interloper in a province which nobody except himself had cared to occupy; and for a reward which none valued but himself.

It is important that these facts should be borne in mind by those who desire to understand the history of this period. It is of no less importance for understanding the sphere in which the labour of the Franciscan was to be exercised, and how he himself was formed by that society which he was moulding. The Franciscan is the missionary of the town; he has nothing whatever to do with the country. He belongs to the rising community of the town. He is their representative in many particulars, as well as their teacher. Like them he assumes different characters; he appears under different forms; unlike the monk, who is stable and uniform. If he departs from the primitive institution of his founder, it is so because he is raised with the population among whom his lot is cast. With their wealth he must in some measure grow wealthy also. Still, he is the poor missionary preaching to the poor; dependent entirely on their sympathies; disappearing when those sympathies are withdrawn. Never a landowner; never so far removed from his primitive condition as to cease to be a mendicant. Out of this dependence sprung his strength and his errors. He is the genuine product of the voluntary system.

The necessity of his mission ;

It may be difficult, perhaps impossible, at this distance, to realize the social condition of the towns of Europe in the thirteenth century, and consequently, the importance of this new movement. The evidence for the history of the land is complete; for the towns it is meagre and unsatisfactory. Their municipal institutions are in full vigour long before history affords the least insight into their social condition or material prosperity. A political order is established among them, has been working harmoniously for centuries, in a state of society utterly inadequate, in all appearance, to the creation of such wise laws, of authority so judiciously modified. In these communities we trace not the germs, but the fully developed forms of self-government, at a time when, in material comforts, the towns of Western Europe differed little from the rudest mud hovels or shanties of the remotest country village in Ireland or the West of Scotland. If it be true that the English artizan stepped out of his mud-hovel into a more muddy street, when the Moor at one corner of Europe and the Florentine at the other were enjoying the luxury of palaces and the civic improvements of a polished capital; equally true it is that the English mechanic was living in the enjoyment of municipal institutions and privileges, which, with all the advantages of imitation and the lapse of five centuries, his predecessors in the arts have yet failed to realize.

Notwithstanding, then, the many material discomforts, and the absence of all due means of cleanliness and health, requisite for preserving large masses of population, crowded into narrow streets, from degenerating into brutality, the town populations of England and of Europe were preserved in some measure from that moral degradation which might have been anticipated from their social condition. Perhaps the exertion necessary for defending their privileges may have secured this happy result; still a vast amount of squalor and wretchedness, of ignorance and poverty, existed in the towns without any adequate means for counteraction. Improvement could not keep pace with the rapid increase of population. Fever and plague, strange and destructive epidemics, spread with unexampled rapidity. Whole quarters of the city suffered from the scourge, without adequate means of prevention ;<sup>1</sup> without remedy or reparation for the evil when it had occurred. Markets were scantily and irregularly supplied ; roads intercepted by a feudal aristocracy or a discontented sovereign ; an entire population as in the industrious towns of the Low Countries exposed to periodical starvation. The narrowness and intricacy of the streets, serving as a protection against the mounted knight and his men-at-arms, served also a worse enemy, the plague or the sweating sickness, and decimated the population, to whom sanitary precautions were unknown. The lazy ditches and stagnant ponds, into which ran the refuse and garbage of the shambles,—a poor protection to the various quarters of the town,—sent up their fetid odours, rank with fever and ague, into the stifled chamber and open booth of the artizan. Upon the higher ground, as may be seen in many towns in England at the present day, stood the Guildhall and the Ward of the Aldermen, distinguished by houses partially built of stone pilfered from the old Roman monuments, forming a striking contrast to the outer circle and the suburbs, where, down to the water's edge, and straggling beyond it, in an uncertain and precarious tenure, rose wooden sheds, rudely plastered or white-washed, on the edge of the town-ditch, sheltering the last new settlers that had flocked into the town for occupation or protection ; a mixed race, of whom little inquiry was made ; tolerated, not acknowledged ; of all blood, all climates, and all religions ; permitted to live or die, as it pleased God or themselves, provided only that they yielded due obedience to the proper civic authorities. Here the leprosy and the plague were certain to enter first; here infection did its worst. In the higher city there might be parish churches and schools; a skilful leech to look after the welfare, bodily and spiritual, of the inhabitants. In defect of these, the different guilds established in the City proper provided in some measure for the instruction and comfort of the master and his apprentices. The city ponds and rivulets yielded fresh water to those who were willing to fetch it; the chaplain of the guild, its church or chapel, provided for the common worship and spiritual welfare of its members; the common purse of the guild furnished relief against sudden misfortune, and paid for the funeral obsequies and masses of the defunct brother. But for the unguilded population, who resided in the suburbs, and increased daily and rapidly in the unsettled condition of the country, or as the oppression or harshness or stern justice of the feudal baron made the town a more safe and desirable abiding place than the country; for these there were no such advantages. Imagination can only conceive their condition; history is silent.

Now, it was to this class of the population, in the first instance, that the attention of the Franciscan was directed; in these wretched localities his convent and Order were seated. I have not been able to examine the primitive position of all their religious houses in England; but a glance at the more important will show the general correctness of this statement. In London, York, Warwick, Oxford, Bristol, Lynn, and elsewhere, their convents stood in the suburbs and abutted on the city walls. They made choice of the low, swampy, and undrained spots in the large towns, among the poorest and most neglected quarters. Unlike the magnificent monasteries and abbeys, which excite admiration to this day, their buildings, to the very last, retained their primitive squat, low, and meagre proportions. Their first house, at their settlement in London, stood in the neighbourhood of Cornhill, where they built cells, stuffing the party-walls with dried grass.<sup>1</sup> Near the shambles in Newgate, and close upon the city gate of that name, on a spot appropriately called Stinking Lane, rose the chief house of the Order in England. In Oxford the parish of St. Ebbe's, in Cambridge the decayed town gaol, in Norwich the water side, running close to the walls of the town, are the special and chosen spots of the

<sup>1</sup> My readers must disabuse their minds of the grand conventual buildings which they are accustomed to associate with the history of all religious orders. They must remember also that I am speaking of the English Franciscans in the 13th century. The pages of Eccleston show that the English Minorite adhered with unusual strictness to the rule of St. Francis, and contended for a literal interpretation of his commands. In the Speculum Vitæ we have his own directions how his brethren were to proceed. "St. Francis said to Bonaventure, who had given the friars a farm to build a convent near Sienna, 'Shall I tell you how the settlements of the friars ought to be built? When the brethren go to any city where they have no place, and find some one who is ready to give them so much land as is sufficient for a building, a garden, and the like, they must, above all things, be cautious not to grasp at more than is necessary, always having regard to holy poverty, and that good example which they are bound to exhibit on all occasions. When,' he continued, 'they have a competent piece of ground, they are to go to the bishop of the city, and notify to him.' 'My lord, such a one for the love of God and safety of his soul, is willing to give us a competent piece of ground to build a place. We, therefore, come to you, because as you are the father and lord of all the flock committed to you, so you will be lord of all of us who settle in that place. We wish, therefore, with your blessing to build there.' Having obtained his blessing, they shall go and make a deep ditch all round the land on which they propose to build, and a good fence instead of a wall, as an emblem of their poverty. Then they shall build poor cottages of mud and wood, and some few cells for the friars to pray in and labour in for the eschewing of idleness. They shall have small churches and not large ones, either for preaching or on any other pretence. And if ever prelates or clerks, or religious or secular men visit the brethren, their poorhouses, cells, and churches shall prove to them the best sermons, and they shall be more edified by these things than by words.'" P. i. 10.

Franciscan missionary. In all instances the poverty of their buildings corresponded with those of the surrounding district: their living and lodging no better than the poorest among whom they settle. At Cambridge their chapel was erected by a single carpenter in one day. At Shrewsbury, where, owing to the liberality of the townsman, the dormitory walls had been built of stone, the minister of the Order had them removed and replaced with mud. Decorations and ornaments of all kinds were zealously excluded. At Gloucester, a friar was deprived of his hood for painting his pulpit, and the warden of the same place suffered similar punishment for tolerating pictures. Their meals corresponded with the poverty of their buildings. Mendicancy might encourage idleness, but it also secured effectually the mean and meagre diet of the friars. It kept them on a par with the masses among whom their founder intended them to labour. They could not sell their offerings; they were not permitted to receive more than their actual necessities required; meal, salt, figs, and apples; wood for firing; stale beer or milk. Whatever the weather, however rough the way, they threaded the muddy streets and unpaved roads barefooted and bareheaded, leaving the prints of their bleeding feet upon the ground, in gowns of the coarsest cloth, which an economical vestryman of this nineteenth century would be ashamed to offer to the most refractory pauper in a parish workhouse. St. Francis had provided carefully for the poverty of his Order. If the Gospel net, woven out of purple and fine linen, had hitherto rather scared than caught the fish it was intended to inclose, the founder of the mendicant orders took care that it should be as coarse and home-spun as poverty itself could make it.

In Italy, where poverty from time immemorial has preserved a dignity not readily conceded to it among the northern nations, where tradition loved to describe a Cato or Cincinnatus in the garb of a Franciscan friar, the material and social objections to this new rule are less obvious. Scanty clothing, beggarly and meagre food, unsheltered dormitories, are slight restraints in the South, compared with the rigours of a northern climate. Had Popes and the founders of religious orders been Germans or Englishmen, the case might have been otherwise. As it was, the test of the worth of these reforms came when they had to be applied to latitudes for which they had not been calculated. To the German and the Englishman mendicancy was a sore trial, mentally and bodily. It was a sorer discipline than any of the rules imposed by other religious orders; for the German nations had no greater toleration for poverty at that time than now; no greater tenderness for bodily distress or infirmity.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> That poverty, rigid poverty to the last, continued to be the rule rather than the exception with the Minorite Friars, is clear from the inventories of their houses taken at the dissolution by the Royal Commissioners.

Here are one or two instances, which might be easily multiplied:—

“Memorandum this vth day of August, in the 30th year of King Henry the VIIIth, that I, Richard Bishop of Dover, and visitor under the Lord Privy Seal for the King’s grace, was in Bridgenorth, where that the warden and his brethren, in the presence of Master Thomas Holle and Master Randolphe of the said town, gave their house with all the pertenance into the visitor’s hands to the King’s use; for the said warden and brethren said that they were not able to live; for the charity of the people was so small that in three years they had not received in alms in ready money to the sum of 10s. by the year, but only live by a service that they had in the town, in a chapel on the bridge. Thus the said visitor,” &c. —Chapt. House Books, No. 309, p. 65.

“Memorandum this 13th day of August, in the 30th year of our most dread Sovereign Lord King Henry VIII. Richard Bishop of Dover, and visitor under the Lord Privy Seal for the King’s grace, was in Shrewsbury, where that in presence of Master Edmund Cole and Master Adam a Mytton, bailies there, the said visitor was in all the three places of friars, and there according to his commission visited the said houses, and there took in each place an inventory of all their

There was a sorer discipline behind, and it showed how St. Francis calculated on the patient heroism of mankind; how justly he estimated its importance in meeting the evils of the times, beyond ascetical rules and precepts of self-denial. The leprosy, fostered by bad diet, wretched lodging, and squalid clothing, was a bitter scourge to the town population. The disease, imported from the East, fostered by the increasing communication between East and West, consequent upon the Crusade, had broken out in the 13th century with unusual virulence. Loathsome and infectious in the highest degree, it spared none. It appeared equally without warning in the king's court or council chamber, and in the degraded purlieus of the city. Once a leper always a leper. The medical skill of that age knew no cure. Political economy could devise no precautions; none, except the most necesgoods, and committed the same to the before-named bailies' custody till the King's pleasure be further known. And as touching the Gray Friars, in presence of the said bailies, [they] gave their house into the visitors' hands by one assent, without any counsel or condition. As touching the Austin Friars, there were no more but a prior and two Crysche Friars, and all utensils gone, and no thing there to help the friars, not so much as a chalice to say mass; and no man durst trust the prior to lend him any, so that all that was in all the house could not be priced at 26s. 8d.; no bedding nor meat, bread nor drink. Wherefore the said visitor discharged the said prior of that office, and assigned the said two Cryschemen into Ireland, into their native convents," &c.—Ibid, No. 309, p. 83.

Nor would they fare better in the large towns. The practice of vesting property for their use in the mayor and corporation left the friars at the mercy of men who, sooner than any others, embraced the doctrines of the Reformation; who had the power and generally the will to refuse payment. How common this practice was is evident from the Registrum Fratrum, at p. 493 of this volume. In fact, the civil wars of the 15th century must have been fatal to any religious body dependent upon mendicancy like the Franciscans. And to this exigency, we may charitably attribute the sale of their MSS. and magnificent libraries, of which Leland complains with so much bitterness.

sary, as the most cruel, the dismemberment of the infected limb. The leper was driven from home and occupation, from family and township; he was disqualified from approaching house or city; deprived of all civil rights; incapacitated from making a will; excommunicated from the Church. The political economist of the 13th century had skill enough to accomplish thus much, no more; leprosy like pauperism was made penal; but the bitterest penalty that man could inflict did not extinguish lepers or paupers; they still continued to cumber the face of God's earth, to the discomfiture of the Mediæval economist and his political regulations.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> According to the ancient law of England, says Mr. Hardy, in his preface to the "Close Rolls," p. xxxi. leprosy was an impediment to descent. A grant made by a person after he fell sick of the leprosy was void. In the "Abbreviatio Placitorum," p. 19, leprosy was pleaded and allowed in the reign of King John; and the land thereupon adjudged from a leprous brother to the sister.

Even in the poor and inadequate provision made for the leper by the charitable, the tone in which their rules are conceived, show the total degradation in which the infected was held. The pious benefactor to the Lazar hospital of St. Julian's, Hertford, Mon. ii. 376, begins thus:—"Seeing that among all infirmities the disease of the leprosy is more disgusting than any, and they who are visited with this disease, at all times and places ought to present themselves in more humble garb and gesture, as more contemptible and humble than the rest of their fellow men, according to the words of the Lord in Leviticus; 'Whosoever is stained with the leprosy shall rend his garments and go bare-headed,' &c.

"Yet ought they not on that account to despair or murmur against God, but rather to praise and glorify Him who was led to death as a leper, according to the testimony of Isaiah, who says; 'We did account him stricken of God and afflicted,' calling to memory the example also of Job, who was so smitten with the leprosy, 'that from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head there was no soundness in him,' &c.—Ib. 377.

It is enjoined among the rules that if a married man entered the hospital he should separate from his wife and make a solemn vow of chastity. He is not to stray beyond bounds—not to touch anything in the brew-house or the bake-house, &c.

Had St. Francis followed the example of the economists of our days, it is not improbable that he and his order might have stood higher in the estimation of those who have remained faithful to the traditions of this ancient school. Here was a great and tremendous social evil which set at defiance the skill and philosophy of the age. The utmost men could do was to banish it, to shut it out, to ignore its existence and close their eyes; not, however, without misgivings that it might break out, like God's vengeance, among their own sons and daughters;—that Miriam and Aaron might perchance be excluded from the camp, and leave their families plague-spotted and despised.<sup>1</sup> But St. Francis was a simple-minded man; he adopted those means for grappling with the evil that none but an enthusiast and a visionary would have taken. That generous enthusiasm and self-denial which have won eternal honor by visiting the sick and ministering to the dying in the fever hospitals of the Crimea will not be charged with romance, because the greater the danger the greater the heroism and devotion in encountering it. Yet theirs was bodily peril at the most, no more. The sick was ennobled by the cause in which he had been engaged. Not so the leper;—the object of vengeance from God, of fear and loathing from man; cityless, houseless, wifeless, childless, cast out, excommunicated; he was exposed to all the calamities which make misery loathsome and deprive wretchedness of the few shadows of its dignity.

“When I was in the bondage of sin,” says St. Francis, “it was bitter to me and loathsome to see

<sup>1</sup> Instances occur in the Patent Rolls of grants of small pensions made to the King's own valets who were suddenly struck down | by the leprosy in the walls of the palace, and within the very sight of the Sovereign.

 “ and changed to me into great sweetness and comfort “ both of body and of soul.”<sup>1</sup>

Two instances are mentioned in the “Mirror of his Life”<sup>2</sup> too characteristic of the disease itself, and the sentiments inspired by it, to be omitted here. I translate the passages literally. “St. Francis on one “ occasion visiting the house of St. Mary de Porti“ uncula, found a simple friar named James, to whom “ he had entrusted the office of tending the lepers.
 “ Seeing the friar consorting with a leper on the “ road from the hospital to the church of St. Mary, “ St. Francis rebuked him, telling him that he ought “ not to conduct his Christian brethren, the lepers, “ in that manner, as it was not becoming to him “ or to them. For though St. Francis was willing “ that his friars should serve the lepers, he did “ not like to have them taken out of the hos“ pital when the plague was upon them; as men “ could not endure the sight of them. He had “ scarcely uttered the words when his conscience “ smote him, thinking that the leper had coloured at “ his remark; therefore, wishing, to make satisfaction “ to God and the leper, he confessed his guilt to “ Peter Cataneus, the minister-general, and begged “ him to confirm the penance he intended to impose “ upon himself. Then said St. Francis this is my “ penance; to eat out of the same dish with this “ Christian brother. When all were seated at table
 “ a single dish was placed between St. Francis and

“ the leper. He was a leper all over, disgusting for “ his open ulcers; especially as his fingers were “ covered with sores and blood; insomuch that as “ he dipped his fingers in the dish and carried the “ morsels to his mouth, the gore and blood dripped “ into the dish. As the friars looked on they were “ greatly grieved and pained at the sight. But for “ the reverence they bore him, not one dared utter “ a word.

“ He that saw these things bore record of them and “ wrote them.”

Again, in the same work,<sup>1</sup> his solicitude for this forlorn and unhappy class is thus manifested. “ He ap“ pointed,” says the author, “ that the friars of his “ order, dispersed in various parts of the world, should “ for the love of Christ diligently attend the lepers “ wherever they could be found. They followed this “ injunction with the greatest promptitude. Now there “ was in a certain place a leper so impatient, fro-“ ward, and impious that every one thought he was “ possessed by an evil spirit. He abused all that “ served him with terrible oaths and imprecations, “ often proceeding to blows. What was still more “ fearful, he uttered the direst blasphemy against “ Christ, and His most holy Mother, and the “ holy angels. The friars endured this ill-usage “ patiently; but they could not tolerate his blas-“ phemies; they felt they ought not, and therefore “ they resolved to abandon the leper to his fate; “ having first taken counsel with St. Francis. Brother “ Francis visited the leper, and upon entering the room
“ said to him, in the usual salutation: ‘ The Lord “ ‘ give thee peace, brother.’ ‘ What peace,’ exclaimed
“ the leper, ‘ can I have, who am entirely diseased?’

“ ‘ Pains that torment the body,’ replied St. Francis, “ ‘ turn to the salvation of the soul if they are borne “ ‘ patiently.’ ‘ And how can I endure patiently,’ “ rejoins the leper, ‘ since my pains are without inter“ ‘ mission night and day? Besides my sufferings are “ ‘ increased by the vexation I endure from the friars
 “ ‘ you have appointed to wait upon me. There “ ‘ is not one of them who serves me as he ought.’
 “ St. Francis perceived that the man was troubled “ by a malignant spirit, and went away and prayed “ to God for him. Then returning he said, ‘ Since “ ‘ others do not satisfy you, let me try.’ ‘ You may “ ‘ if you like, but what can you do more than “ ‘ others?’ ‘ I am ready to do whatever you please,’ “ replied St. Francis. ‘ Then wash me,’ replied the “ leper, ‘ because I cannot endure myself. The stink “ ‘ of my wounds is intolerable.’ Then St. Francis “ ordered water to be warmed with sweet herbs, and, “ stripping the leper, began to wash him with his own “ hands, whilst a friar standing by poured water upon

In conformity with his own practice, the same author tells us that St. Francis enjoined his friars to dwell in the leper hospitals, and there learn a lesson of humility. Whoever desired admission into his Order, noble or ignoble, was commanded an attendance on leprous patients.<sup>2</sup> If by the establishment of leper hospitals, and a general improvement of the towns, that terrible scourge has so completely disappeared,

<sup>1</sup> The reader of “ Doctor Antonio” will be at no loss to appreciate the delicate manipulation and skill of the Italian gentleman in that exquisite tale, who, like St. Francis, had devoted his life to the care and comfort of the poor. I take this opportunity of stating my conviction that a perusal of that tale will do much to realize St. Francis, his reforms, his object, the people whom he loved, and for whom he prayed and laboured. It will account for the popularity of the Order in Italy.

that its very name is disarmed of all meaning, it was no phantom then; "no poor paper-lantern with a candle end in it." Mankind gained truer notions of it and of their duty towards those who were afflicted by it; but St. Francis set the example.

In thus bringing the noble into common sympathy and service with the poor and ignoble, St. Francis was but repeating the experiment made at different times and in different forms, in mediæval Europe. We make rather shabby and unsuccessful attempts in these days to bring opposite classes together; to find a true answer to that call for fraternity which is ever and anon causing its voice to be heard across the gulf of centuries, and displaying its energy and vitality in all kinds of grotesque and incoherent shapes. In the total disorganization of all society, and the disruption of the old Roman world, St. Benedict, the founder of Western monkery, found a way for bringing together the rude rough Goth and the polished Roman patrician, on the common field of manual labour. A gentleman may now dig his garden or farm his own estate without losing caste; he may thread the pavement unattended by twenty slaves and lictors without dreading the taunt of sordid meanness. He may build schools for his tenantry, or ask them to dinner, preserve his rank whilst he acknowledges their services and receives their rent; though he possess not a single advantage over them in education, in skill, or even antiquity of descent. What would farms be worth in England if the English homestead, like the Roman, resembled a West Indian sugar estate; and the degraded condition of the labourer, extending to his work, made a country life disreputable? What a deal of thought and time were required to weld into one harmonious mass the stout heart and hand of the Northern comer, with the polished, quick, order-loving, refined Roman or Romanized occupier, and bring it out in the form now seen in the broad acres of England? There came a second attempt in the founding of the military orders, where the knightly spirit of Europe was drawn forth in all its strength and tenderness, by committing to the strong the care of the weak, to the soldier the protection of the widow and the orphan. Last, and harder than all, came the experiment of St. Francis; to devote to the poor and neglected outcast of the large towns of Europe, to the untended leper, the abandoned beggar, the sickly mechanic, to their wives and children, whatever of piety and gentleness could be controlled to this purpose. Repulsive as that service was in all respects, especially to men of gentle blood and education, to these he looked for converts, and in this he was eminently successful. Unlike other and earlier founders of religious orders, the requisites for admission into his fraternity point to the better educated, not to the lower classes. "He shall be whole of body and prompt of mind; not in debt; not a bondsman born; not unlawfully begotten; of good name and fame, and competently learned."<sup>1</sup> Such were the early disciples of his Order.

Their training for the simple and ignorant. St. Francis opposed to the learning of the age.

The effect of such men upon the neglected masses of the population may be easily imagined. That influence was much greater than if it had emanated directly from the clergy, or even from that body which it sought to improve. Lessons of patience and endurance fell with greater persuasion and tenderness from the lips of men who were living and voluntary examples of what they taught. Dressed in a long robe of coarse cloth, surmounted by a mantle of the same material, bareheaded, barefooted, begging his bread from house to house, the voluntary poverty of the friar removed the scandal under which Christianity laboured from the excesses and the superfluities of its privileged teachers.

But the poverty thus strictly enjoined had another and not less important object. It was intended to prevent the friars from giving themselves up to the popular studies of the age. Logic and the canon law monopolised the clergy. The example of Abelard had found numerous admirers; little suited, however, for the requirements of the age.

What beneficial effects could dialectic subtleties or disputations at the Universities exercise over the hearts and actions of men engaged in the real battle of life? Possibly the secular training and occupations of St. Francis in his earlier years may have kept him from those ecclesiastical influences under which he must of necessity have fallen, had he at first proposed to himself the career of a preacher against heresy like the Dominican. He had no temptation to magnify pursuits in which the clergy of his days universally engaged; he must have seen how little suited they were for his Order, how little calculated to accomplish the object he desired. Therefore he set his face against learning; he would have his followers like the poor, not in dress only, but in heart and understanding. Total, actual poverty secured this; it was incompatible with the possession of books, or the necessary materials for study. When the stringency of the rule had been in some measure relaxed, much of its ancient severity remained. Roger Bacon had to carry on his researches and experiments without books, or instruments, except what he could procure from his friends. He tells the Pope, to whom he dedicated his works, that he possessed no MSS., that he was not permitted the use of ink or parchment, that nothing but a distinct order from his Holiness could dispense with the stringency of the rule.

In the letters of Adam de Marisco the reader will see other instances of the penuriousness of the general ministers, and their reluctance to furnish the members of their Order engaged in teaching and lecturing with the requisite means for study.

Forbidden
the use of books.

On one occasion a provincial minister wished to argue the point with St. Francis, and to learn from him the sense of the words, "Take nothing with you on the way." Was it absolutely nothing? "Nothing," said St. Francis, "except the habit allowed by the rule; and, if indispensable, the friar may carry shoes." "What then am I to do?" rejoined the provincial, "I have books beyond the value of 50*l*." "I will not, I ought not, I cannot allow that which is contrary to my conscience and the profession of the gospel we have both embraced," was the only reply. On another occasion a novice who had learned to read the psalms, though not very correctly, obtained leave from the minister-general to have a psalter; but as he had heard that St. Francis did not like his friars to be solicitous for books and learning, he was not satisfied with the licence of the general minister, but took occasion to apply to St. Francis himself, saying: "Father, it would be a great comfort to me to have a psalter; and the minister-general permits it; but I should not like to use it without your conscience." "Charles the Emperor, Roland and Oliver," (he replied,) "and all the Paladins, and all other stout men in battle, pursued infidels to the death with great sweat and labour, and gained their memorable victories. The holy martyrs died in the fight for the faith of Christ. But now-a-days there are some folks who, by the mere talk of their exploits, seek for glory and honour among men; and so there are some among you who take more pleasure in writing and preaching about the works of the saints than in imitating their labors." Some days after, as he was seated by the fire, the same novice repeated his request. Says St. Francis to him: "When you have got a psalter, then you'll want a breviary, and when you have got a breviary you will sit in your chair as great as a lord, and you will say to your brother, 'Friar, fetch me my breviary.'" Saying this with some warmth, he took ashes from the hearth, and laying them on his head, rubbed his hand round and round, as if he had been washing his head, repeating, all the while, "I am your breviary, I am your breviary (Ego breviarium, ego breviarium,)" until the novice was dumb-founded and surprised. Then turning to him, St. Francis said: "Brother, I too was once tempted as you are by the possession of books; and wishing to know the Lord's will in this matter, I took the Gospels and prayed to Him that He would show me His will in the first passage to which I should turn. And when I had finished my prayer, and opened the book, I met with these words: 'To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of God; but to others in parables.' How many gape after knowledge! How much happier he, who has made himself barren for the love of God." After some days the same novice spoke to him again about the psalter in the Church of St. Mary de Portiuncula, to whom the holy man replied: "Go, do as the minister tells you." As the novice went his way, St. Francis, after a minute's consideration, ran after him, crying aloud: "Stop, brother, stop." And when he had overtaken him: "Return with me," he said, "to the spot where I said to you, 'Do with the psalter as the minister told you.'" And returning to the spot, he bent his knee before the novice, saying, "Mea culpa, brother, mea culpa. Whoever will be a Friar Minor must possess nothing more than his habit, or carry shoes if necessary." And such was his uniform answer to all who consulted him on this subject. "A man's

Other instances occur of his anxiety to counteract the growing passion for books, and turn the attention of the friars to works of meditation. These, he told them, were the only ways of securing their own salvation and the improvement of others. “ Many “ friars,” he said, “ who bestow all their time and “ thought on the acquisition of philosophy, forsaking “ their proper vocation, and wandering in mind and “ body from the way of prayer and humility, when “ they have preached to the people, and have turned “ some to repentance, are inflated and conceited at the “ result, as if it were their own and not another’s work.
 “ Whereas it happens not unfrequently that all they “ have done is to preach to their own prejudice and “ condemnation. In the conversion of men they have “ really done nothing ; they have been no more than “ the instruments of those by whom the Lord has “ truly reaped the fruit.” He predicted that the time would come when they who had left their calling to indulge in the pursuits of science, and gratify a vain curiosity, would find their hands empty in the day of tribulation.<sup>2</sup> “ Such a day will come,” he said, “ when “ men will throw their books out of the window as “ useless.” And, not to multiply proofs, when news had been brought to him that a great doctor<sup>3</sup> at Paris had been received into his Order, greatly to the joy

<sup>1</sup> It is impossible to preserve the pithiness and point of these words in English : “ Tantum religiosus est bonus orator quantum est bonus operator.”

A similar sentiment is attributed and edification of the clergy and the city, "I am afraid, my sons," he said, "that such doctors will be the destruction of my vineyard. They are the true doctors who, with the meekness of wisdom, exhibit good works for the improvement and edification of their neighbours.<sup>1</sup> A man has no more know-

<sup>1</sup> There are numerous other indications in the volume of his sound and practical good sense. Unlike the other religious orders, who had multiplied the rules of asceticism until they had become an intolerable snare, St. Francis retained only the ordinary vigils, and fasts of the Church. On other days the friars had licence to eat flesh or other food indifferently. St. Francis used to say that the body was created for the soul, and the flesh ought to be subdued to the spirit. The servant of God ought therefore to eat, sleep, drink, and satisfy his bodily requirements with discretion, that the body may have no occasion of complaining that it can not stand erect or pay attention to prayer because its wants are not satisfied. (Ib. 87.) He was a great advocate for cheerfulness, saying that it was the sign of a clean heart, and a great defence against the devil. "Why," said he to one of his friars, "do you wear that sad and gloomy countenance because of your offences. It is enough that your sorrow should be known between you and your God. Pray for His mercy to spare you, and restore that cheerfulness to your soul which you have lost by your own demerits."

In the following advice on the choice of a minister-general of the Order, there is the same vein of good sense and sagacity: "A minister-general ought to be of irreproachable life, of great discretion, spotless character, and free from partiality, lest by showing too great an affection for one party he bring a scandal on the whole. He must be studious in prayer, apportioning certain hours for his own soul, and others to his flock. He must begin the day with mass, and with devout obedience commend himself therein and his flock to the Divine protection. After prayers he is to present himself to his brethren, and standing in the midst of them, he is to hear the questions of all and reply to all, and provide for all, with charity, patience, and kindness. He is not to be an acceptor of persons; not to care less for the simple and uninformed than for the learned and the wise. If he has the gift of knowledge, he is all the more to show himself a pattern of piety and simplicity, of patience and humility. Let him foster virtue in himself and others, not ceasing to preach it assiduously, attracting others more by his example than his words. Let him anathematize money, the chief corruptor of our profession and perfection; and, therefore, as an example to be followed by all, let him have no purse and no coffers. His habit and one little book shall content

“ledge than he works, and he is a wise man only “in the degree in which he loves God and his neigh“bour.”<sup>1</sup>

Their preachings founded on experience.

A style of preaching, founded on meditation and experience, was precisely adapted to the requirements of those classes of the community for whose improvement and welfare St. Francis felt the deepest sympathy. Considering the education and logical studies of the secular clergy in those days, it is not easy to discover how they could have made themselves intelligible to the ordinary population of the towns; still less, him; a pen-case, seal, and writing materials, his associates. He is not to be an accumulator of books; not very intent upon reading, for fear that he should derogate from his office the time he devotes to study. He shall piously comfort the afflicted, lest, as he is their ultimate refuge in trouble, if they find not relief and remedy from him, the disease of desperation should grow too strong for them. To win the perverse and proud to meekness, let him humble himself, and abate somewhat of his own right to gain a soul. To the runaways of his Order let him open the bowels of mercy, as to sheep that have been lost; let him never refuse to pardon them, well knowing that their temptations are very strong, and if the Lord permitted him to be tried he might perchance fall worse than they. As the vicar of Christ, I would have him honoured with devout reverence by all, and that provision be made for him by all, and in all things with all benevolence, in proportion to the exigence of his need and the situableness of our state. He ought not to be exalted by honours and favours shown him more than he is delighted by injuries, or to let honours change his manners, except for the better. If ever he requires more ample or generous fare, let him not take it in secret, but openly. To him it appertains to discern the secret conscience, and elicit the truth from hidden veins. Therefore, let him regard all accusations with suspicion at first, until the truth shall be known by diligent inquiry. Let him give no heed to gossipers, and particularly suspect all accusations proceeding from such persons, and be slow to credit them. Let him not from desire of retaining popularity, refuse or relax the forms of justice and equity; nor, on the other hand, let him suffer souls to perish from over much rigor; let not torpor arise from excessive kindness, nor the relaxation of discipline from over indulgence; and so let him be feared by all who love, and loved by all who fear him.” Ib., i., p. 90.

how they could have carried the truths of Christianity to the hearts of the ignorant and the poor. By education unfitted for the task, they could know but little of the population whom they had to address ; and their vow of celibacy kept them apart from their flocks. The necessities of the class for whom they laboured brought out in the Franciscan a style of living and preaching suitable to his auditory ; he had to speak to the hearts of men and women who were not learned ; he had to study those hearts and what was in them, before he could hope to address them with success. His poverty enabled him to accomplish the first and most difficult portion of his task, by throwing him upon the help and sympathy of those for whom he laboured. The necessity of alms from day to day, the stringent rule imposed by his founder, forced him from a life of mere study or contemplation into a life of activity. He was compelled to move among those on whom he was thus made dependent, however rough and insulting the treatment he received. Preaching must become the great object of his life, quite as much as poverty ; but it was a new style of instruction, very different from that which had hitherto prevailed. Whether the clergy liked the change or not, a body of laymen (for it must be remembered that the friars were to all intents and purposes laymen, bound by certain religious vows,) had come forward to the help of the Church, to carry out those functions which the Clergy could not, and visit those whom the Clergy found it impossible to visit. A less formal but not less effective style of preaching prevailed, suited to an audience consisting as much of women as of men, appealing more directly to the feelings ; more popular and more dramatic. This is one of the common accusations brought against the Friars by the Clergy, partly jealous of their new influence, partly suspicious of the result.<sup>1</sup> They are loudly condemned by their opponents for magnifying preaching,

<sup>1</sup> In the answer by Thomas Aquinas to the objections of William de St. Amour and others of the Gallican clergy, we have a brief summary of the complaints made against the Mendicant Orders. After referring in the outset to the charge that mendicancy was contrary to Scripture, he proceeds in,— Ch. I. To a general vindication of the religious orders and the vows imposed by them. In Ch. II. He answers the objection "that the religious had no right to teach." In

Ch. III. "That the religious had no business to communicate with secular persons in matters pertaining to study; that there ought to be no union of persons whose pursuits and occupations were so opposite as those of the religious and the secular." In

Ch. IV. "That they had no right to preach or hear confessions, as having no licence for so doing, or any fixed cure." "It is a particular mark of heresy," says St. Thomas, "to suppress preaching in the Church." In

Ch. V. "That they were bound to employ themselves in manual labour, and when that was impossible, in psalms, prayers, and reading." In

Ch. VI. "That for a person to sell his goods and enter a Mendicant Order was contrary to Holy Scripture, unless he did so with a view of supporting himself by manual labour; because he despised what God had given him, and exposed himself to needless temptations." In Ch. VII. "That to live by alms was contrary to Christianity, and subtracted what was due to the poor. It was, moreover, unmanly and illiberal."

He then proceeds to consider the objections in Ch. VIII. made to the sordid dress of the friars as indicative of singularity. In Ch. IX. Their intermeddling with what did not concern them.

Ch. X. Their wandering from place to place.

Ch. XI. Their devoting the time to study and philosophy;—"ever learning and never coming to the knowledge of the truth."

Ch. XII. Their study of eloquence and method in the composition of their sermons; transgressing the precept of the Apostle:—"Not with the wisdom of words."—1 Cor. i. 17.

Next he answers the complaints made against them in

Ch. XIII. "That they commended themselves and their Order, and so were guilty of the sin of the Pharisees."

Ch. XIV. "That they resisted their detractors."

Ch. XV. "That they appealed to the civil tribunals."

Ch. XVI. "That they punished their persecutors."

Ch. XVII. "That they sought to please men." And rejoiced

Ch. XVIII. "At the great things God had wrought by them in the conversion of others."

Ch. XIX. "That they frequented the courts of princes." [Finally and declining, like the older Orders, to confine themselves exclusively to manual labour, to reading and prayer. They are accused of studying eloquence and the art of rhetoric in the composition of their sermons, of making their addresses agreeable to the people, of communicating with secular persons, of derogating from the dignity of the clerical office and bringing a scandal on the Church. And, undoubtedly, not only the matter and style of their teaching, but their dress, their mode

Finally in

Ch. XX. He adverts to the reasons which induced him to reply to these calumnies, and the insinuations thrown out by their opponents against the previous lives of the friars. He condemns the sweeping calumnies directed against the whole body drawn from the loose examples of a few, the hasty inference that the friars were false apostles, because they sought more luxurious hospices, in which they might be more comfortably entertained, and intermeddled in other men's business, in order to gain property. In

Ch. XXI. The insinuations against the sincerity of the friars, as if they sought the favour of the world and not the good of mankind. He condemns also the uncharitable anticipation of God's judgment, of which free use had been made by the Sorbonists, in saying that the friars would eventually become corrupt in morals and reprobates in the faith.

Ch. XXII. - XXVI. And not satisfied with these imputations, they had endeavoured to make the friars odious to the world, by asserting that they were the false apostles denounced in the primitive church, thieves, robbers, and spoilers, who entered houses and wasted the fold, against whom the church was warned; the forerunners of Antichrist, of which their charity, studies, and fastings were so many evident signs, being nothing better than a cloak for hypocrisy.

Such a mode of reasoning, though recommended by the respectable authority of William of St. Amour, and adopted without any suspicion by modern historians, would have seemed monstrous and incredible, were it not as fashionable in this nineteenth century as in the thirteenth, only substituting for the friars any body of Christians more than usually active, and therefore particularly obnoxious. I am surprised to see a late writer repeating the old and exploded scandal of the Franciscan John of Parma being the author of "The Eternal Gospel." The University of Paris in their manifesto against the Mendicants (De Periculis Ecclesie), written before 1256, state positively that this book had been written fifty-five years before; that is, before the Franciscan Order existed. Ch. viii. See also Will. St. Amour's 2d Sermon, p. 52 in Brown's Fasc. and St. Thomas, l. l. ch. xxiv.

of living, their dependence upon almsgiving, their intimate intercourse with the lower orders, must have appeared intolerable innovations on the ancient usages and established maxims of the secular and monastic clergy. Men had hitherto been taught that the clergy and the laity were distinct elements, as opposite and distinct as wine and water (a favourite illustration), but now the wine was mixed with water; every adventitious distinction, which had kept them apart, and been so frequently and emphatically insisted on, was broken down. Here was a body of religious teachers, supported by the head of the Church, as like the poorest of the laity in all respects, learning excepted, as could possibly be conceived. The Church, hitherto standing apart, was brought home to the people. Cold, and distant, and far removed from their sympathies, it now appealed to them directly; occupied by abstract discussions and formal statements of doctrine, it passed at once into the human, the sentimental, and the personal. A new impulse this, of the most vital importance; a great advance towards the sixteenth century.

nence given by them to the human and the practical in our Lord's life.

The lively imagination and quick sensibilities of St. Francis, characteristic of his nation, realized for him, in a way unappreciable by the colder nations of the North, the earthly life of our Lord and his human relationships. The way in which he strove to conform himself literally to our Lord's precepts and example indicate the direction of his thoughts; and the practical tone of his mind led him to value almost exclusively what he considered to be the human and the practical side of Christianity. Hence the prominence given by him and his followers to the bodily sufferings of Christ. Hence, too, their anxiety, as has been justly observed,<sup>1</sup> to exalt the Virgin Mother, to present her as an actual woman, endowed with every grace and beauty, to the degraded population whom they addressed ; to set her before men as an actual object of faith, hope, and devotion, as sympathizing in human sorrow and human evils, in sorrows which have pierced through her own heart, in evils from which she is entirely free. Is it strange that this should have seemed to men a blessed escape from the dryness and formality of the theological maxims and controversies of the age? that in the dress of its new teachers, Christianity should have appeared to the masses, as it never yet had appeared, radiant in attractiveness and beauty?

Further, it must be remembered, that the increased communication between the West and the Eastern world had brought out in a greater degree than ever the Manichæan tendencies of the times. That influence had set in at all points upon Western Christendom ; from Moorish Spain at one extremity, from the German Emperor and their Oriental wars at the other. The Arabs had given the tone to the scientific speculations of the universities ; commerce, flowing through the same channel, had carried the same tendencies into the towns of the South of France, and through them to other towns in Europe.<sup>1</sup> How could the Church, with its doctrine of celibacy, or the monastic orders, with their enforced asceticism, counteract a tendency to which their example lent encouragement? Man had been degraded in the degradation thus indirectly thrown upon marriage ; secular life and human relationships were dishonoured in the peculiar sanctity thus ascribed to the monastic. How could the Albigenses ; the two infamous books of the age, the "Eternal Gospel" and the "Three Impostors," the latter of which is attributed to the Emperor Frederick. The communistic excesses of this century, especially in France, had the same origin.

marriage, how could woman be regarded with respect or treated with honour, when a perfect state was considered incompatible with either? when a society, built up on an abnegation not of marriage only, but of all family ties, was represented as of Divine institution, and all civil societies, all human institutions as exclusively secular, without sanctity, without God's authority? The Franciscan could not meet the evil completely. He was bound to celibacy—for of any society, without such an indispensable condition, no reformer in the middle ages ever conceived the possibility—but he did what he could to counteract the mischief. He insisted on the humanity of the Son of God; he dwelt on His poverty and sufferings as a man. He exalted the condition of woman by exalting the Virgin Mother. He insisted on her spotless purity, on her maternal authority and dignity, on her mysterious fellowship with her Son, on her joys and sorrows. Doubtless, it was his anxiety to bring out those facts in her history more prominently, that induced the friar to give greater prominence to the childhood than to the manhood of Christ, to lay greater stress on the parent, to exalt the Mother at the expense of the Son. Undoubtedly also the favour with which these doctrines were received by the people, tempted the friar to carry them to extravagant lengths, to degrade them by gross, sensualized images and representations which lost him the influence he had once possessed, and turned all reverence for him into ridicule and contempt.<sup>1</sup>

“A frere ther was, a wantoun and a merye,

A lymytour a ful solempne man.

In alle the ordres foure is noon that can

So moche of daliaunce and fair langage.

He hadde i-made many a fair mariage

Of yonge wymmen, at his owne cost.”

And a little below:

“At yeddynges (weddings) he bar utturly the prys.”

Prologue to Canterbury Tales.

But he had struck a real chord of sympathy; and consequently he found favour at once in all the larger towns of Europe, though the times of liberality to religious orders had passed away from more than one half of Christendom, and in the trading communities the Church was far from popular. Within thirty years after the arrival of the Franciscans in England, their numbers in this country alone amounted to 1,242;<sup>1</sup> they counted forty-nine convents in different localities. Notwithstanding the jealousy with which they were regarded by the Church and the monastic orders, the friars multiplied rapidly in London, Canterbury, Oxford, Cambridge, York, Hereford, Lynn and Norwich on the east coast, Bridgewater and Bristol on the west. With equal rapidity they passed into Ireland and Scotland; were received with equal favour;—an instance of religious organization and propagandism unexampled in the annals of the world. That diffusion is the more remarkable when it is remembered that they were specially enjoined by their founder to uphold the dignity and authority of the Roman See, at a time when that authority had ceased to command respect, when it was despised in the towns, and in England regarded with more than usual jealousy and suspicion, in consequence of the submission of King John.

Yet, under all these difficulties, the Franciscan Order found favour throughout the towns and cities of England. In the register of their house at Newgate, now part of Christ's Hospital,<sup>2</sup> entries occur of the repeated donations made them by the citizens of London and invested in the corporation for their use. Scarcely a year elapses without some mark of this liberality on the part of individuals or of the community at large; the gifts are small indeed, varying from 6*d.* to 40*s.*, but their number and their smallness are indicative of the class from whom they were received, and of the popularity of the friars. The register of their convent in London might be accepted as a specimen of their general treatment without further evidence. But Eccleston is precise on this point. At Canterbury the master of the Priest's hospital gave the corporation a piece of ground and a chapel for the use of the friars.<sup>1</sup> At Oxford Richard de Muliner gave the corporation a house and piece of ground for their use. At Cambridge the burgesses received them and assigned them a decayed church near the town gaol. At Shrewsbury the king gave the ground, the burgesses the buildings. In these and in other instances the practice prevailed of investing money, land, and buildings for the use of the friars, in the corporations of the towns; and the reason is stated by Eccleston;<sup>2</sup> because the friars could not and would not possess property. Here again is a great innovation on the usages of the age; a religious body exclusively and closely dependent on the charity and voluntary offerings of the laity was a bold and hazardous experiment. It prepared the way for a complete revolution in the social and legal maxims which regarded property held for religious uses; and for the first time that great principle, out of which the vast charities of this kingdom have since flowed into so many channels, though even now scarcely trusted to that degree which it ought to be, was brought into vigorous action.

The consequences, first, in the new im-

dation of his Order, it was not the only motive. The health of the body was no less the object of his solicitude than the care of the soul. Consciously or not, in the strict injunctions which he gave to his followers to qualify themselves for his Order by an attendance on the leper hospitals and the visitation of the sick, he was fighting against the deadly Manichæism of the age. But, in thus qualifying themselves for working among the large populations of the towns, the friars were forced upon other studies, secondary only in importance to their main concern. Their early attention to sickness and disease developed in the Order those physical studies and pursuits for which they became remarkable. With the friars came the first systematic attention to medical studies and to natural philosophy in general. Not as physics had been studied before as part of an academical training;—but as theology under their treatment was humanized by the necessity of their position; so physics, however feebly, were brought by them into contact with actual experiment. There is scarcely a writer of eminence among them, distinguished as he may be for logical and metaphysical ability, who is not equally interested in experimental philosophy. I use the word advisedly; for many will be prepared to admit the prevalence of physical studies among the schoolmen, and defeat the value of that admission, by assuming that the physics of that age were merely subservient to scholastic logic. I repeat that the first sustained attempts at experimental philosophy commenced with the friars, and grew out of the actual necessities of their position; as all real progress in science will and must grow. This will be confessed in the case of Roger Bacon. But it would be equally incorrect to overlook the experimental studies of other schoolmen of Bacon's age, as to overlook the scholastic side of Roger Bacon's own writings. The tendency of each writer's mind gave special prominence to the form and subject of his writing; the expense and labour of physical researches necessarily limited their successful pursuit to a few. Still the assertion is undeniable that with the logical and metaphysical studies of that age physics now assume an importance they had not before.<sup>1</sup> For the first time we hear of physicians entering the religious orders. John de St. Giles, one of the earliest and most eminent of the Dominicans, was a professor of medicine at Paris. Father Crescentius, the seventh general minister of the Franciscans, was a physician at Bologna. The practice of medicine is engrossed by the friars in the thirteenth century.

In Bacon's observations on the eye, it is obvious that he had studied anatomy. In his treatise upon vision he applies the geometry of Euclid as perfectly well known in his days. The same remark applies to his contemporary, Archbishop Peccham. The physical works of Aristotle and his natural history stood as high in popular estimation as his logic; the scientific treatises of the Arabians were accessible to all. This volume and the pages of Roger Bacon furnish abundant testimony of the extreme activity of the friars as travellers and missionaries; of the care with which they recorded their observations upon the countries through which they passed. Their knowledge of men, the poverty and hardship of their lives, enabled the Pope to employ them in distant lands, where other orders or modern travellers could not have stirred.

<sup>1</sup> I need not dwell on any laboured proof. A reference to the history of the writings of the schoolmen in the pages of Cave and Oudinus will be sufficient. Bacon's merits will not be denied. The profound mathematical researches of our countryman Richard Swisset have commanded the praises of Leibnitz; and I suppose the time will come when justice will be done to the chemical enquiries of Raymond Lully and Villanova.

We find them in 1245 sent to Russia ; reaching the capital of Kiov in the depth of winter, after great bodily suffering. In the spring following they proceed to the region of Crim Tartary, rigidly observing the rules of Lent in that bleak and frozen territory, supporting themselves on salt and millet, and water from melted snow.<sup>1</sup> The travels of William of Rubruquis in Inner Asia, so highly esteemed by Roger Bacon, still hold their place in that species of literature, which has done more than any other for the promotion of science. Natural philosophy has followed in the footsteps of the missionary ; so it did then. John of Parma was sent on two missions to Greece within five years. The travels and labours of Raymond Lully in the three quarters of the globe are not the least remarkable features of his gigantic activity and industry.

It will naturally be inferred from these observations that the friar was popular with the mercantile classes ; and this is evident from the facts of his history.<sup>2</sup> Who else so welcome at the houses of men to whom scientific skill and information, scanty as they might be, were yet of no inconsiderable service and attraction ? He alone of learned and unlearned possessed some knowledge of foreign countries and their productions ; he alone was acquainted with the composition and decomposition of bodies, with the art of distillation, with the construction of machinery, with the use of the laboratory. Un-

<sup>1</sup> The observations made by them on their journey do not show that they were blinded by the Predicaments of Aristotle. It is amusing to see the grave way in which modern historians reprove the schoolmen for too great a deference to the authority of Aristotle, and their indifference to facts ; these historians all the while displaying the most servile deference to vulgar prejudices respecting the schoolmen, and retailing for facts their own shallow and unsupported assumptions.

doubtedly, when the Order degenerated, the friar combined with his spiritual functions, the occupation of pedlar, huxter,<sup>1</sup> mountebank, and quack doctor; and the vice of covetousness, of which he was too frequently accused, led him to employ his skill in driving bargains to his own advantage. But a just estimate of the importance of the Order must not be taken from its decline, or the representations of its enemies. The monks were jealous of the learning and popularity of the friar; the bishops hated him as refusing deference to their authority; the Lollards regarded him as the bitter champion of orthodoxy, as the unscrupulous persecutor of all who dissented from the traditions and teaching of Rome. A careful perusal of Eccleston's work, and a candid review of the history of the friars, will justify the praise bestowed upon them by Lord Bacon,<sup>2</sup> and vindicate the historical accuracy of the sketch which a philosopher, greater than Bacon himself, has left in his portraiture of the friar in Romeo and Juliet.<sup>3</sup>

“His tippet was ay farsud ful of knyfes

And pinnes for to give faire wyfes.”

<sup>3</sup> The character of the Friar is historically correct in its minutest particulars. It shows, notwithstanding the prejudices of his age, how Shakespeare caught the prominent features of the Order in the individual, and brought them out to the gaze of his readers, unsullied by the base alloy in which the weakness or caprices of men had invested it.

In the speech of Friar Lawrence at his cell door, as he comes forth with a basket at early morn to collect simples, we see how intimately the meditation of the friar was connected with the study of nature:—

“O meikle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities.

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give;

Nor ought so good, but strained from that fair use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,

And vice sometimes by action dignified.”

[I find

That this Order, which began in poverty and in opposition to the learning of the age, should end in becoming the great promoters and professors of learning, will now seem less remarkable. It was inevitable in any body of men, like the Franciscans, systematically devoting themselves to the instruction and improvement of the lower orders of the towns. They were driven to the consideration of principles which might have passed unquestioned in any other sphere of activity. Equally inevitable was it that they should be forced upon the philosophical studies of the age, and embark in them with an energy, which they only feel, to whom philosophy offers itself not for display or disputation, but a solution of the great problems and contradictions of life. Neglected as the towns had been, the disputes of the church with the Albigenses show that the same acuteness and ability, now to be found in the working men of our manufacturing cities, existed equally in similar bodies in the south of France—probably in all the towns of Europe where manufactures had made any progress. The information of such men might be narrow; but on the facts which had come before them they had meditated with intellects sharpened by their occupation. They were much better masters of their position, much more alive to its weak and defensible points, much more on the alert to detect and expose the less carefully considered reasonings of those who entered the lists with them, than men of higher and more liberal training. In fair argument the missionary of the church had no chance with them. His only ultima ratio was the sword. To be tolerably successful, the Franciscan must be able to cope fairly with those whom he wished to convert. In proportion as he entered seriously on his task he found it requisite to enforce the truths in which he felt interested, by connecting them with feelings and principles such as his hearers would recognize and could understand. "Non accipit indoctus verba scientia, nisi prius ea dixeris quae versantur in corde ejus." Never did the favourite maxim of Lord Bacon require more careful application. From early times, therefore, the friars found it necessary to modify the precept of their founder, and apply to the scientific study of theology. He might at first have hoped to win the masses by descending to their social condition, by the services which he rendered them in the hospital, or by the sympathy which he displayed for their labour and their sufferings. But his work was only half done—it was but skin-deep if he could not enter into their moral and intellectual difficulties; if he could not find a clue to deliver them from the labyrinth in which their consciences were prisoned and perplexed. So Eccleston<sup>1</sup> tells us that Angnellus, their first provincial in England, "built a school in the Fraternity of Oxford, and persuaded Master Robert Grostete, of holy memory, to read lectures there to the brethren. Under him, within a very short time, they made unaccountable progress in sermons (conciones) and in subtle moralities suitable to preaching." "The reputation of the English Friars increased so rapidly and their proficiency in study became so notorious in other provinces, that Friar Helias, the minister-general, sent for Friar Philip Waleys and Friar Adam of York to read lectures at Lyons." "Readers," he adds, "were appointed at Hereford, Leicester Bristol, Cambridge,

“ and Oxford ; and the gift of wisdom so overflowed
 “ in the province of England, that before the depo“ sition of William of Notingham there were as “ many as thirty lecturers in England, and a regular “ succession of them was provided in the Univer“ sities.”

Hitherto the formal method of instruction adopted in the Universities embraced the old division of studies into Trivium and Quadrivium. Passing through Grammar, Logic, and Rhetoric in the former, in the latter the student was initiated in Arithmetic, Geometry, Music, and Astronomy. Through these schools of arts, every member of the University was required to pass before he proceeded to the sciences, in which theology stood the highest. For the lecturer in that science, the Sentences of Peter Lombard<sup>1</sup> formed the ordinary text-book. Following the method there laid down, the lecturer expatiated as he pleased, adapting his instructions to his own taste or the wants and capacities of his hearers. He was bound to no other restriction. The uniformity thus preserved in the order of the subjects, enabled the student to hear and contrast the opinions delivered by different lecturers on any question of theology or morals. Before the lecturer commenced his hearers knew precisely what topic would be discussed, and generally all that had been said on both sides. From an anecdote in Eccleston<sup>2</sup> we learn that the student took notes, which he reproduced in the form of a lecture. The exercise varied by disputations between the professor and the candidate, brought into play those faculties of readiness, memory, and invention,

Which thus gains a new importance.

without which the scholastic theology would have been of little use to the preacher, the missionary, or the popular controversialist. Hitherto logic and law had absorbed the industry and genius of the age. From the accession of the Anjevin dynasty the law formed the great passport to dignity and emolument. The great law-officers of the crown were entirely selected from the canonists. Bishops, deans, and abbots, beneficed and unbeneficed clergy, strove with might and main to obtain judicial appointments: where solicitation and court favour failed, bribery paved the way for the suitor's wishes.<sup>1</sup> Arts and theology were in danger of falling into disuse. The reader who has taken his views of scholasticism from the popular manuals on that subject, will be astonished to hear the pious Bishop Grossete urging the friars to study, and impressing upon them the necessity of an earnest application to theology, "or else," said he, "for a certainty the same lot will befall you as has befallen all other religious men, who are walking to their shame in the darkness of ignorance." Perhaps he will less readily admit that the poverty of the friars, and the stringent rules of their founder, saved them from the temptations which proved detrimental to the clergy of the thirteenth century, and gave a fresh impetus to the study of theology. But so it was; and from this time scholastic divinity preponderated in both Universities.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> When the whole administration of the law, civil and ecclesiastical, was in the hands of the monks and clergy, it is not surprising that the universities should be crowded with students, and the lectures of the canonists be attended with avidity.

schools, and treated in a hard, dry, and logical method, <sup>by the practical life of the</sup> would have merited the contempt thrown upon it by <sup>friars.</sup> modern philosophers had it been nothing more than a scholastic exercise; had it never been brought to the test of experience; had those who were educated in it retailed it from the pulpit, and dreamed that they could rule the world by abstractions and influence the feelings of mankind by dialectics. Was it so? Is it not remarkable that the friars, the most ardent upholders of scholastic theology, are precisely the men who constitute the most popular preachers of the age? That their sermons are far from being dry expositions of scholastic philosophy?—that instead of being appeals to the reason against authority (as has been stated), they contain most direct appeals to the imagination and the feelings of the people to whom they were addressed? Their sermons are full of pithy stories and racy anecdotes; now introducing some popular tradition or legend, now enforcing a moral by some fable or allegory, or a “morality” borrowed from the “Gesta Romanorum,” or similar collections. However in after ages the professor of theology, like Duns Scotus, Occam, or Burley, might be confined to a University; the early scholars of the Order alternated study with preaching. Unfitted as the works of Roger Bacon or of Raymond Lully might seem to the practical divine, it was for him, not the philosophic disputant, whether as a missionary among the Saracens, or a combatant of error and heresy at home, that these works were written. “By the light of philosophy,” says the former, at the opening of his Opus Majus,<sup>1</sup> “the church of God is ordered, the commonwealth of the faithful is rightly disposed, the conversion of the infidel is accomplished. It is logic.

So theology, which at one time was in danger of being banished from the universities and superseded by the more popular and promising studies of Aristotle and the Canonists, returned to its pristine dignity. There was no danger now of the Aristotelian dialectics superseding the more ancient and important studies of the divine. Theology, which had in the first instance regarded the new logic as its foe, found in it an unexpected ally. There was no fear of the stronger succumbing to the weaker. In the thorough decrepitude of the religious orders, in the utter confusion and disorders of the church, at the close of the 12th and beginning of the 13th century the result might have been otherwise, but for the reformation of St. Francis. Two such powerful influences at work upon the faith of men as the new philosophy of Aristotle and the fascinations of Mahomedanism, large masses of the people growing up to wealth and power without the aid and in spite of the aid of the church, of a temper to appreciate keenly the arts and cultivation of the East, would have done the work of infidelity thoroughly. It is absurd to condemn the schoolmen for their great devotion to Aristotle, as if they had created his authority and not found it established; equally absurd is it to condemn them for dialectical subtleties, when dialectical subtleties were overmatching Christianity. They were the men to show how Christianity was the answer to men's doubts; how Aristotle was to be reconciled with Revelation, not Revelation with Aristotle. Even those who have slightly studied the subject have seen that scholasticism was an appeal from authority to reason;—and that is true, if by Reason is meant understanding; but this observation would have no meaning if it implied that the schoolmen were setting up one authority in the place of another, Aristotle in the place of the Fathers. In truth, Aristotle was a double help to them, not merely for that logical method of which he was the master, but, primarily, as the exponent of natural reason, and, secondly, as the representative of the whole range of Greek, that is, of all philosophy. Whatever natural reason could do, unassisted by Revelation, that Aristotle had accomplished. He is the apostle of man's natural reason, in all its strength, and if not in all, at least in no small share of its defects and its weakness. He is the philosopher whose final appeal is to the common sense of mankind, and to their ordinary words as the expression of their common faith. It would, perhaps, be too much to say, that the rudiments of all ancient heresies are to be found actually in the works of Aristotle; but they might be found in the method and principles of Aristotle. Not without good reason did St. Bernard and the church of his age feel an instinctive dread at the enthronement of a science which boded no good to the common faith of Christendom, and set up natural religion against revealed, understanding against faith. But for missionaries like the friars, who had to dispute with men not accustomed to the care, not willing, therefore, to acknowledge the authority of the church, it was of the utmost importance to know the full range and freest scope of the natural reason,—and where was there so clear and satisfactory an exponent of it as Aristotle? Whilst against those of the learned who magnified the Aristotelian philosophy, and would listen to no other appeal, it afforded the only weapon.

But this study of Aristotle produced more lasting The re- and important consequences than the introduction of sults; for his method or even of his philosophy into the schools. good.

No one will accuse Aristotle of mysticism; no one will for a moment imagine that the high priest of common sense is ever in danger of losing sight of the obvious and the literal in the allegorical meaning of words. The rigid circumscriber of terms, approaching his definitions by a rigorous, though not very profound, induction of their usage, etymologies, and analogies, was not likely to give much countenance to an interpretation of Scripture, which turned the plainest facts of history into the most fanciful allegories, and accepted that exposition as the truest which was the furthest removed from the literal meaning. As the schoolman was forced by his position on the necessity of rigid demonstration and an exacter use of words, he derived from the study of the great logician a more natural and literal exposition of Scripture, a desire for more careful versions and commentaries. We date from this time a more methodical treatment of all subjects under discussion; the employment of words in their more strict and literal meaning; a work as new to the thirteenth century as it was important for the cultivation of those habits of accurate observation, without which the sixteenth century would have been as hazy, erratic, and immethodical as the ninth or the tenth. Let the reader who is inclined to underrate this service to truth refer to any commentary upon the plainest portions of Scripture before and subsequent to the schoolmen.

Out of this precision and the consequent necessity of stating and arranging formally in a certain number of propositions every subject under discussion, sprang their great error; but it is not one of which this age has any right to accuse them. Their faults arose from their method. That method was in a measure forced upon them; it was adapted to their audience and the state of science in their time; if the syllogistic process be, as Bacon declares, the natural method of the uncultivated reason.<sup>1</sup> They appealed to the understanding, their method ensured success to that appeal: it bound the understanding, if it did not satisfy a higher faculty, of which the schoolman and the preacher took no cognizance, and neither professed nor attempted to satisfy. On the whole, the spirit of Lord Bacon's remark is just:

“ This same unprofitable subtilty or curiosity is of “ two sorts: either on the subject itself which they ”
 (the schoolmen) “ handle, when it is a fruitless specu-

In thus setting before us the two intellectual phases, in their weakness, Shakespeare shows us how the mind of the fellow gravedigger, overawed as he is by the magic of logic is not free from an uneasy feeling that all is not quite fair; his judgment is trammled; but he is not convinced. His stolid wonderment is contrasted with the equally stolid common sense of Horatio, referring to his own sensuous tribunal the supersensuous flights of his companion; guaging by his inch of plumb-line the unfathomable, confused abyss of the other's thoughts, and declaring that there is nothing in them. It is a history in little of inductive and deductive philosophy.

 “ men to their great thirst of truth and unwearied “ travel of wit had joined variety and universality

“ of reading and contemplation, they had proved excellent lights to the great advancement of all learning and knowledge.”<sup>1</sup>

That popular contempt was, however, an after-growth; it sprang not out of a more philosophical spirit of inquiry or profounder method, but from mere weariness and distaste. The work of the schoolman was accomplished.<sup>2</sup> He had formed the mind of Christendom for the great events to come. Of the popularity and efficiency of his teaching, in the first instance, no other proof will be required than its attractiveness for every man of genius, whether in our own most practical country or elsewhere. England, never much inclined to Papal dictation, is more fertile than any other nation in Franciscans. The University of Oxford, distinguished during this century for the bitter animosity of its students against Papal dictation and Papal legates, is exclusively directed and ruled by these new teachers. The clergy and the nobles in the reign of Henry III., who were forming a party against the king, to give freer utterance to the national voice, and support the independence of the people against the Pope, and, lastly, those classes in the towns which had hitherto been, and still continue to be, the most indefatigable asserters of municipal freedom, and the strongest opponents to the encroachments of churchmen, are at the same time the most liberal supporters of the Order of St. Francis. A thoughtful reader of history will pause and inquire how men engaged in the most engrossing of all struggles, in the assertion of political independence and religious freedom, could have felt so deep an interest in a religious order, like the friars, whose name is identified with the least popular of all popular occupations, unless there had been something in the speculations as well as the practice of these men, which was felt to have an intimate affinity with such precious objects; unless in that liberty of discussion introduced by them and so new to Europe, so far beyond all papal control, men had also seen that other forms of liberty were involved. It was morally impossible that the schoolmen could be successfully enthraling the mind of Europe, at that time above all others, when it was rising day by day into a greater sense and value of its independence. But we are not left to conjecture. Out of the ranks of the schoolmen came forth the most popular preachers, the most uncompromising opponents of the Pope, as well as the great asserters of papal authority. Under their training are educated the precursors of the Reformation, as well as the ablest of the reformers themselves. From whatever point of view the history of the friars regarded, whether in the poetical form of Dante's "Divina Commedia,"<sup>1</sup> or the romantic, as of Raymond Lully, or of the great methodizer, as Thomas Aquinas, or of the founder of experimental philosophy, as Roger Bacon; whether as training the popular mind to science, or elevating it by the representation of those mystery plays out of which the modern drama sprang, whether as that of the popular preacher wielding vast assemblages of men,

<sup>1</sup> Had Dante not been a poet, he would have been a schoolman. His turn of mind is eminently scholastic; and it is the greatest proof of his genius that he could rise superior to this bias and retain entire his poetical sympathies and powers. As in Etna, rocks, woods, and rubbish, the most unmanageable material, that would have overwhelmed a smaller fire, were in the furnace of his heart and brain turned into red-hot molten lava. The "Summa" of Thomas Aquinas is the ground plot of the Commedia, marvellously simple and marvellously comprehor captivating their fancies by the lighter forms of fiction, story, apologue, or anecdote, that history is alike remarkable. It deserves the most careful study, not only for its own sake, as illustrating the development of the intellect of Europe, previous to the Reformation, but as the link which connects modern with mediæval times. It is the maturest development of the mind of the latter, the preparation and forerunner of the former.

For Englishmen the whole subject is replete with unusual interest; as in their history the succession of events from the scholastic era to the Reformation, and the law of that succession, can be traced with so much more distinctness than in the history of any other people.

The very men who, in later times, were launching the severest sarcasms against the schoolmen, or ridiculing their subserviency to Aristotle, had been trained to their new freedom and vigour of mind by the men they had learned to despise. The unreservedness with which the schoolmen ranged through every region of metaphysics and divinity led, in turn, to equal freedom of discussion, equal unreservedness in political discussions. Then, as since, the greatest social innovations ensued. The true sources of our civil wars in the 15th century are to be found rather in the teachings of Wicliffe and his followers than the rival claims of Yorkist or Lancastrian; and Wicliffe is the genuine descendant of the friars, turning their wisdom against themselves, and carrying out the principles he had sive. Dante, too, like Aquinas, marshals before him the past and the present; he has their special sphere and place for all, the dead and the living. There is this happy difference, however, that Virgil stood him in the place of Aristotle. Hence, though his judgment is scholastic, though it is fettered by classifications and definitions, his heart and imagination revolt against them. This is the secret of his sternness and his tenderness; and not of his alone, but of the whole middle age.

learnt from them to their legitimate political conclusions. But these are considerations proper for the historian, I turn to—

II.—THE STATE AND HISTORY OF THE MSS.

OF the era thus sketched in the foregoing pages, this volume contains the earliest accounts; scanty and meagre compared with the importance of the subject, but still almost the only contemporary materials we possess of the settlement and progress of the Franciscan Friars in England. The history of the order was compiled long after its importance had declined. Contemporary narratives and letters, such as those which are exhibited in this volume, are extremely rare. This is a justification for their appearance among the “Memo-rials and Chronicles of Great Britain.”<sup>1</sup>

Valuable as they are on this account, they have additional claims on the reader, as they are now for the first time given to the world. The MSS. from which they have been derived are unique, and have narrowly escaped total destruction.

I. The treatise of Eccleston De Adventu Minorum in Angliam, which stands first in the volume, is found in a mutilated MS., in the Chapter Library

<sup>1</sup> I cannot consider the life of St. Francis, by his disciple, the celebrated Cardinal Bonaventura, as forming any exception to this statement. The pious motive which dictates the duty of such a tribute to the memory of a saint and founder of a religious order, is very different from that which determines the judgment of an ordinary biographer or narrator. The Liber Conformitatum of Bartholomew of Pisa, the best account we yet possess of St. Francis and his earliest companions, notwithstanding its absurdities, did not appear until the close of the 14th century. In this respect the Franciscans form a remarkable contrast to the Benedictine monks, and Eccleston might reasonably regret that, whereas other orders had their historians, and their records of great men to place before their disciples, the Franciscan possessed no such means for glory and edification. See p. 3.

at York ; the latter portion of it has been totally obliterated by damp. Happily a fragment of the latter portion preserved in another MS. in the British Museum has enabled me to recover nearly the whole of this singular and interesting narrative.

II. Of the Epistles of Adam de Marisco the MS. in the British Museum is the only one known to exist. It is deficient in some leaves at the end. That deficiency has been fortunately supplied by a single copy of the last letter, and of that only, in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. The Cottonian MS. has been charred and shrivelled by the fire from which that Library suffered, and the margin is impaired. In other respects it has been carefully preserved, and though often perplexing, is generally legible.

III. The Registrum Fratrum Minorum from the same collection, forming the third treatise in the series, has suffered in a much greater degree from the same accident. Fortunately the contents of this MS. are of less historical value than either of the others, and the loss is comparatively unimportant. I believe, however, that I am correct in stating, that such documents as these, illustrating so minutely the early history of the Minorite order, are without a parallel. No chartularies, or registers of their houses have been preserved, if indeed any ever existed. The usages of their society, and the strict rules of their order, forbade the acquisition of property. They had no historians, like the monks ; their founder and earliest converts were notoriously unfavourable to learning, except as it qualified them for the duties of the preacher and the missionary. The possession of parchment and writing materials was forbidden by the injunctions of St. Francis. How could a body of men require charters and registers, who possessed no lands ? How value historical records or historical writing, who placed the highest importance on poverty and meditation? With the exception of Roger Bacon's Opus Tertium, in which he gives an account of the peculiar hardships under which he laboured in the prosecution of his studies, I know of no other works, besides those included in this volume, which can help the historical inquirer to a better knowledge of the foundation and progress of this remarkable order in England.

Occasional references to their doings will be found in the common monastic chronicles; but such notices must not be compared in historical value with the sustained narratives in which the fortunes of almost every great monastic house may be traced from its foundation to a few years within the period of its dissolution. They fail to supply the minute information to be derived from monastic chartularies or registers, without which the passing notices of a great house or remarkable event can never be adequately gauged or their due proportions and real worth discovered. Such references to the friars are not favourable, it must be confessed; they are as bitter as religious jealousy could make them. But a just estimate of the order is not to be derived from its professed enemies. And such were the monks. Had there even existed a greater sympathy between them, it was not to be expected that the monk, whose day was gone by, and whose influence was declining before the genius of the new order, could either understand or applaud the man who magnified poverty, declaimed against common property, and considered the labours of the cloister as unfitted for the age, unsuited to the duties of a teacher.

The MSS.
1. Of Eccleston.

Upon this subject I have spoken before. I proceed to describe briefly the MSS. employed by me in forming the text of the work, and the plan pursued. Of the two MSS. of Eccleston, the one preserved at York is quoted under the name Ebor.; the other in the Cottonian Library (Nero, A. ix.) as Cott. or Cotton. Both MSS. are written on vellum ; both belong to the early part of the fourteenth century. A fac simile of each appears in the front of this volume. The first (A.), taken from the York MS., corresponds with p. 67 of the text ; the others (B.) and (C.) are specimens of two different portions of the Cottonian MS., and refer to pages 31 and 54.

The York MS. consists of forty-three pages in small quarto. More than a century since it was examined by Dr. Richard Richardson, and an account of it, with a summary of its contents, transcribed by him for Hearne the antiquarian, and published by the latter in his edition of Otterbourne, vol. i. appendix, p. xcii. In his letter, dated from York, July 5th, 1726, Dr. Richardson states, "that even in his days one-third part of the MS. seemed to have been written with bad ink, and the writing was almost defaced." "The whole book," he adds, "is much fuller of abbreviations than any of those few manuscripts which I have seen ; so that I cannot give you so good an account of it as I would." He then proceeds to enumerate the titles of the fourteen Chapters as here printed, giving an English summary of their contents.

One hundred and thirty years have not improved the legibility of the MS., which fully bears out the description given of it by Dr. Richardson. The handwriting is more than usually cramped and contracted. The difficulty of determining the true reading is greatly increased by the badness of the ink and the effects of damp. Besides Dr. Richardson, the York MS. had been inspected, in all probability, by Anthony Wood. In his History of the Antiquities of the University of Oxford, Wood makes frequent allusions to Eccleston. Sometimes he refers to an imperfect copy in the Cotton Library, sometimes he quotes from an apparently perfect copy, without stating where it was preserved.<sup>1</sup> As MSS. were commonly lent in those days, there can be little doubt that Wood had seen the one now preserved at York. As early, then, as the time of Wood the Cottonian manuscript was defective; and since neither Wood nor Hearne, nor yet Bishop Tanner, all men of patient research, and greatly interested in the antiquities of their country, mention more than two MSS. as existing in their days, and corresponding with the two at present known, there is sufficient reason to infer that no other MSS. than those employed for the text of this volume have come down to the present time. This fact is of some importance.<sup>2</sup>

Besides these English writers to whom Eccleston was known, I find it stated in the list of authorities prefixed to the Annales Minorum, that Wadding had consulted a MS. of Eccleston. In the account of Eccleston given by this writer in his Bibliotheca Minorum, Eccleston's work is described in a tone which seems to imply a perfect acquaintance with its contents; it would lead to the inference that Wadding had the use of a copy more comprehensive than any yet named, or known to Leland, Wood, or Bishop Tanner. Wadding was a native of Ireland, a writer of great research, of equal modesty, of undoubted accuracy. He was familiar with the writings of the brethren of his order, relating to their own history and the general history of England, preserved at Kilkenny and elsewhere. It is, therefore, possible that he cleston (see App. p. 54), which, according to his statement, De Scriptoribus Britannicis, was preserved in the Queen's library at Granta Girviorum. But in Leland's extract a passage occurs at present to be found only in the Cottonian copy.

may have seen such a copy of Eccleston, which has since disappeared with other works of the same kind.<sup>1</sup> But if so, it is remarkable that, in his account of the arrival of the Franciscans in England, and the planting and diffusion of their order here, Wadding should have preferred the later and obviously erroneous accounts of Bartholomew of Pisa,<sup>2</sup> and the still more modern and vague narratives of Gonzaga, to the contemporary and precise information furnished by Eccleston. On various occasions the testimony of Eccleston would have been of the greatest service to Wadding, in clearing up obscurities connected with the early history of the Friars. Eccleston speaks with the fulness and unhesitating sincerity of an eye-witness, where Wadding is meagre and unsatisfactory. Is it credible that if Wadding had really seen the MS. of Eccleston, he would have treated it with so much contempt and apparent indifference? Such a supposition is impossible, considering the terms in which he has spoken of Eccleston in his Bibliotheca.

I infer, therefore, that Wadding's acquaintance with Eccleston's history extended only to the extracts of it published by Leland and Wood, no further. Even those he does not appear to have treated with the consideration they deserved. For he trusted implicitly to Pitts, a poor compiler of the 16th century.

There seems, then, little hope of recovering a more perfect or complete copy of Eccleston's work; and the extracts made from it by the writers already mentioned are too scanty to yield much help for correcting the errors and obscurities of the text. Owing to these deficiencies and the incompleteness of both MSS., it was impossible to give a decided preference to either. For the earlier portion of the work the York MS. was the only guide; in the later I have been compelled to adopt the Cottonian. But without this necessity I should have been justified in the preference. It fully merits the praise accorded to it by Wood and Richardson.

Of the history and transmission of either MS. no record remains. The names of Esseby and Eccleston point to the author's connection with the province of York. A tradition, confusing Thomas of Eccleston with Thomas of York, leads to the same conclusion. On the other hand, the Cotton MS. belonged to the convent of Hereford, in the wardenship of Bristol, as is obvious from the notice at p. 559.<sup>1</sup> Unfortunately the old covers of the MS. have been replaced by a later binding.

MS. of Adam de Marisco.

Of the Epistles of Adam de Marisco (de Marsh) no other MS. is known than the Cottonian, Vitellius, C. viii. It is a handsome folio, on vellum, of the latter end of the thirteenth or the beginning of the fourteenth century. A fac simile of it is prefixed to this volume, marked D. With the exception of the last letter, addressed to the Archbishop of York, the MS. contains a complete collection of the Epistles of Adam de Marsh. At an early period they attracted the attention of persons interested in antiquarian and historical researches. They are quoted by Wood in his Antiquities of the University of Oxford from the MS. now in the Cottonian Library. No other MS. was known to Wood or to Bishop Tanner; and no other is now supposed to exist, if, indeed, any other copy ever did exist. Much that is valuable in the earliest and most authentic materials for the history of this country is in the same predicament. The writing, like the fac simile of Eccleston (A.), resembles the official hand employed in copying state records and enrolments, except that in general the contractions are more numerous and perplexing. This is a common characteristic of all the MSS. which I have examined of the Franciscan Friars, forming a remarkable contrast to the more splendid volumes of the monastic orders, during the thirteenth century. The frequent complaints made by Adam de Marisco and Roger Bacon against the reluctance of their superiors to allow facilities for writing or provide transcribers,<sup>1</sup> will account for this rigid economy of parchment, and the general meagreness and penury of Franciscan MSS. With the exception of the two letters addressed to Cardinal Bonaventure,<sup>2</sup> and the declaration at p. 307, the handwriting of the MS. is the same throughout. Spaces have been left for the rubricated capitals, which have not been filled in. In the earlier part of the MS. a few corrections of more obvious errors have been inserted by another hand in the margin. But the injury done to the margin by the accident in the Cottonian Library has mutilated the corrections in some instances, and obliterated them entirely in others. The latter portions of the volume have not been submitted to this revision ; gross mistakes exist ; words are omitted necessary to complete the sense. In one instance the superscription of the letter has been forgotten ; in another, it is wrongly given. The top margin of the MS., extending to five or six lines on both sides of the page, has been blackened and shrivelled by the action of the fire ; the lines of the writing are distorted, the letters contracted to a minuteness which renders the true reading not always an easy task, as the reader may judge by the fac simile taken from the first page.<sup>1</sup> A slight distortion of so minute and peculiar a hand often produces considerable perplexity, and the artificial, involved, and stilted style of Adam de Marisco, the involution of parenthesis in parenthesis, the irregularity of the punctuation, the startling transitions, present formidable obstacles to editor as well as reader.<sup>2</sup> In some instances it was impossible to divine the author's meaning ; in others the obscurity was removed by the substitution of a word in the text, which had been erroneously omitted by the scribe. In these cases I have either suggested, in a foot-note, what seemed to me to be wanting, or carried the correction into the text and distinguished it by brackets.<sup>3</sup> But I have never ventured on these liberties without due notice. On more than one occasion I have permitted a passage to remain as copied from the MS., though fully convinced that it was not in the form which the author left it. Such errors are common in MSS. of this kind,

<sup>1</sup> See this volume, p. 355, and the Opus Tertium of Roger Bacon, who complains that a good transcriber was not to be found in his order. The ordinary copyists pirated MSS., and disposed of them to rival authors or publishers.

and must rather be corrected by the ear than by the eye. As the scribe wrote to dictation, the omission of a word, or a misapprehension of its sound, was often productive of errors. But the confusion in the punctuation is still more inexplicable. To have adopted the same rigid rule here as in the words of the author would have presented the work in a form altogether unintelligible.<sup>1</sup> It is open, of course, to the reader to set aside my punctuation and adopt his own; and he will probably see reason to depart from my judgment on more than one occasion; at the same time I hope my assurance will be accepted that I have bestowed considerable pains in giving a faithful and accurate transcript of the MS., and have repeatedly recurred to doubtful passages, collating and re-collating, that I might not impose on the reader my own inadvertencies for errors and omissions in the original.

Of the transmission of the MS. and its primary destination, no notice has been preserved. The MS. has been bound up with several others of different dates, and manifestly derived from different libraries. A leaf is wanting at the end, the ancient binding is gone, and none of the flyleaves remain. It would be vain, therefore, to hazard a conjecture to which of the religious houses of the Franciscan Order it originally belonged. But as Adam de Marisco spent the greater part of his life in Oxford, and while there must have preserved the copies of the letters, which were afterwards collected into this volume, it is not unreasonable to suppose that the MS. was compiled and written in Oxford. Among his correspondents were the Queen of England,

<sup>1</sup> I know of no instance where the most inflexible editor has retained the punctuation of a mediæval MS., however faithful he may be to its most obvious blunders. In the case of the letters of A. de Marisco we need no speculation on this subject; the scribe assures us that they were written from dictation, p. 307.

the Earl and Countess of Leicester, Richard Earl of Cornwall, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Winchester and Worcester, Bishop Grostete, the Franciscan Ministers, and others. The correspondence extends over several years, and he must at an early period have entertained the idea of eventually collecting it for publication. This is further evident from the fact that the names mentioned in some of the letters have been left blank, as if the writer were unwilling to let them appear, for political or other reasons. Unfortunately, no traces of the letters addressed to the writer is now to be found. Even in the correspondence of Bishop Grostete, as published by Brown in his Fasciculus, not a single Epistle appears addressed to Adam de Marisco, although the letters of the latter bear evident testimony of the intimate and unbroken correspondence between himself and the bishop. I may add, in conclusion, that this MS. is undoubtedly the same as the one mentioned by Bishop Bale (who generally contrives to repeat and augment the blunders of his predecessors,) under the title of Epistolæ ad Grossetestum; the only work of the kind which Bale has attributed to Adam de Marisco.<sup>1</sup>

§ 3.

Registrum Fratrum Minorum.

The third work in the collection, Registrum Fratrum Minorum Londoniæ, is derived from a paper MS. of the fifteenth century, preserved in the British Museum, and numbered Vitellius F. XIII. It is very carelessly written by a scribe evidently ill at ease in the Latin

<sup>1</sup> It is stated by Leland, I know not on what authority, that Adam de Marisco persuaded Grostete to leave his MSS. to the Library of the tongue. The capital letters are clumsily rubricated, and the whole MS. bears evident marks of that degeneracy of which Leland complains,<sup>1</sup> and of the decline of those arts for which the religious bodies had once been famous. It has suffered great injury from the Cotton fire. The margins have been destroyed and grievously discoloured, and the text is destroyed in various places. It was known to Stow, the antiquarian, who made use of it in his Chronicle of England; and a translation of the most important parts of it, by the same writer, is still preserved among his books and memoranda in the Harleian Collection. It is the only work of the kind extant. A painful proof, if such were needed, of the utter devastation committed when the Franciscan convents were dissolved, and their libraries dispersed.

III.—LIVES OF THE AUTHORS.

THOMAS OF ECCLESTON.

OF Thomas of Eccleston nothing more is known than what is to be gathered from his work here printed. According to Leland, he was a scholar at Oxford of no mean repute. In his desire to investigate the origin, increase, and success of the Franciscan Order, to which he belonged, and especially its settlement and progress in England, he made inquiries of his superiors, and from the information thus collected compiled his work. "He began," adds Leland, "with the arrival of Agnellus of Pisa in Britain, and continued his task with the greatest diligence, scrupulous care, and unblemished fidelity, to the time of William of Nottingham, Minister-General of the Order. He dedicated

Thomas of Eccleston; his life and

“ the book, when completed, to Simon Escheby, his “ learned friend, of the same Order.”<sup>1</sup>

It will be seen, on a reference to Eccleston's preface, that Leland's information was drawn exclusively from Eccleston's own account of himself as given in the work here printed. He states that he was twenty-five years engaged in collecting the materials for his book.<sup>2</sup> It affords a few scattered notices which supply us with some facts that have escaped the research of Leland and his successors. At one time Eccleston refers to the memory of Adam de Marsico, who died in 1257 or 1258; at another, he speaks of William of Nottingham as being no longer alive.<sup>3</sup> This must have been after the year 1250, when William of Nottingham was succeeded by Peter of Tewksbury. He also states that, during the life of William, he had resided at the convent of London, and had been not only a witness, but partaker of the hard fare of the brethren there. Again he states that he was an eye-witness of the charity shown to the Friars by the city of London.<sup>4</sup> He mentions the construction of the convent there, and the liberality of Henry de Frowyc and Salekin de Basing, assisted by the munificence of Henry III.<sup>5</sup> In another place he speaks of himself as being a student at Oxford, with a companion who afterwards obtained the applause of Grostete,<sup>6</sup> the Bishop of Lincoln. These references leave no doubt that Eccleston must have been contemporary with Henry III.

And this is sufficient to disprove the absurd statement of Bale, who places him in the reign of Edward III., a blunder heedlessly followed by Pitt, Tanner, and others. The progress of exaggeration is exemplified in this notorious biographer. After quoting Leland's account of Eccleston, which he has curtailed of expressions too favourable to the Friar, Bale thus proceeds: "Opus est ad instar libri Conformitatum Bartholomæi Pisani, licet quantitate minus, fabulis, mendaciis ac blasphemiiis plenum. Tractat enim de Francisci tunica, chorda, vulneribus et braccis, de primis fratrum exordiis in Anglia, de abstinentiis, jejuniis, ciliciis, vigiliis, castrationibus vel emasculationibus, ædificiis, precibus horariis, visionibus, portentis, prodigiis, studiis, doctrinis et lecturis. Absolutumque opus hoc Simoni Essebio amico et ejus ordinis professori dedicavit." It might almost be doubted whether Leland and Bale were speaking of one and the same work, but for the notorious disregard of the latter to strict veracity, whenever an opportunity occurred for venting his hatred against the religious orders. To the same suspicious authority we owe the assertion that Eccleston was the author of a work in 1269 against the Dominicans, entitled De Impugnatione per Dominicanos, and he adds, "atque alia coagessit, sed ejusdem omnino saporis; ita ut ex his nihil aliud professi videantur quam scenicam quandam hypocrisim ac merum quæstum." It is, however, scarcely worth while to enter upon a serious refutation of a writer whose judgment and accuracy bore no proportion to his prejudices.<sup>1</sup>

Eccleston's work fully bears out the character it has received from Leland. It is the production of a simple-minded, single-hearted friar, who entertains no

misgivings as to the piety, sincerity, and good works of his order, and is proportionably zealous that their poverty, self-denial, and labours of love should not be forgotten. Without any of the ambition of the professed historian, he has contrived to compose a narrative of thirty years, which cannot fail of interesting his readers, whether curious or not in the progress of the order to which he belonged. He gives us what no other writer, less simple-minded and zealous, would have cared or perhaps been willing to give;—a clear, unvarnished picture of the friars in their poverty, and before their order had been glorified by the eminent schoolmen of a later period. In this little work the reader may see the friar in his cell or his refectory; sitting round the fire and warming his dregs of sour beer, or shedding tears at mass in his little chapel of wood; or he may listen to the provincial minister in the infirmary warning the novices in that peculiar form of apologue or fable which made the friars famous, and associated their names with the most pithy apophthegms and stories throughout Christendom.

The two following, related of Friar Albertus of Pisa, will serve as a specimen:—

“ At divine service he was very devout, and avoided “ wandering of mind by shutting his eyes. In the “ society of the brethren he was always cheerful and “ pleasant, and drew upon himself the affections of “ all. So when he was let blood in the convent, on “ one occasion, he set forth this parable among them, “ chiefly on account of a novice who was then present, “ who was too wise in his own eyes, and presumed to “ intermeddle in what did not concern him:—‘There “ ‘ was a countryman,’ he said, ‘ who hearing that there “ ‘ was so much rest in Paradise, and so many delights, “ ‘ set out in quest of it, if perchance he could gain “ ‘ admittance. And when he had reached the gate, “ ‘ after some trouble, he found St. Peter and requested

“ ‘to be let in. Then St. Peter asked him if he could “ ‘observe the laws of Paradise, and would keep them “ ‘before him, and he said “Yes,” if St. Peter would “ ‘be good enough to tell him what they were. Then “ ‘Peter told him that he had nothing else to do except “ ‘to hold his tongue. The countryman very gladly “ ‘assented to these conditions, and was admitted ;
 “ ‘and as he was walking through Paradise he saw “ ‘a man ploughing with two oxen, a lean and fat “ ‘one ; and he allowed the fat ox to go as he would,
 “ ‘but kept whipping and spurring the lean one.
 “ ‘And running up to him, the countryman rebuked “ ‘him ; and straightway St. Peter appeared, and “ ‘would have expelled him, yet he spared him that “ ‘time, and told him to take warning for the future.
 “ ‘And forthwith going a little further, the country“ ‘man saw a man carrying a long beam with which “ ‘he wanted to enter a house, but he always turned “ ‘the beam across the door ; and running up to him, “ ‘the countryman told him to turn one end or the “ ‘beam forward. And again St. Peter appeared, and “ ‘would by all means have expelled him, but he “ ‘spared him that time also. Going his way a “ ‘third time, the countryman saw a man lopping “ ‘trees in a wood, and he spared all the old and the “ ‘rotten trunks, but cut down the straightest, tallest,
 “ ‘and greenest trees. And running up, he rebuked “ ‘him. Then St. Peter appeared and incontinently “ ‘expelled him.’ For he wished,” continues Eceleston, “ that inferiors should hold their superiors in respect on “ all occasions, saying, ‘Far be it that familiarity “ ‘should breed contempt.’

“ In the aforesaid collation, Friar Albertus told “ another parable against the presumption of young “ men ; saying, that there was a young bull who “ diverted himself in the meadows and fields just as “ he would. One day, about Prime or Terce, he “ turned aside to see the ploughing; and he beheld

 “ the senior bulls pacing leisurely along in the furrow,
 “ and doing but little work. So he rebuked them,
 “ and told them he would do as much as they at a “ start; and they begged that he would come and “ help them. So placing his neck in the yoke, he “ ran with great speed to the middle of the furrow, and “ being weary and out of breath, he looked round and “ said, ‘What! is it not all done?’ And the old bulls “ answered ‘No,’ and laughed at him. Then the young

It would not be difficult to multiply passages of this kind; but these will be sufficient to show the predominant element of Eccleston’s work, of which a more minute and precise account will be found in the summary prefixed to it. The anecdotes of Bishop Grostete, interspersed throughout the narrative, are not the least interesting portion of it. They confirm the popular estimation of his character; but they also present him in a new light, as the liberal friend and supporter of the Minorite Friars, fully alive to the importance and even the necessity of their mission.

ADAM DE MARISCO.

His family. THE materials for the life of Adam de Marisco, the Doctor Illustris of the Schoolmen, are scarcely more numerous or more trustworthily than those which relate to Eccleston. He is stated by Leland to have been a native of Somersetshire, though I know not on what authority. But if any sanction for this statement has been derived from his name, Somersetshire may claim the honour as well as any other county. The patronymic was common in every part of England during the middle ages; wherever there was a marsh, there also would be found a De Marisco. It is still more remarkable<sup>1</sup> that there was another Adam de Marisco living at the same time. Like our author he belonged to the diocese of Lincoln, like him he was an acquaintance of Bishop Grostete, like him, too, a member of some religious fraternity, and but for the untoward circumstance that he had been convicted of theft, and was a prisoner at York, he might very well have passed for the "true Dromio." From his letters, however, we are now enabled to glean a few facts respecting Adam de Marisco and his family, unknown to previous biographers.

Besides the Schoolman, two at least of the same family, Thomas and Robert, are mentioned by him in this volume; we may not improbably add to them a third, named William, whom Adam de Marisco calls his kinsman,<sup>2</sup> the bailiff of Bugden, apparently in the service of Bishop Grostete. Robert, to whom more frequent reference is made, and for whose welfare and reputation our author was extremely solicitous, was the brother of Adam, and resided with him at Oxford.<sup>3</sup> He appears, like his brother, to have enjoyed the friendship and confidence of the bishop; probably studied under him at the University, and was advanced by him to the archdeaconry of Oxford about the year 1248.<sup>4</sup> On the occasion when Robert was taking his degree in theology at Oxford, Grostete had expressed a desire of being present and presiding at the ceremony.<sup>1</sup> In his 33rd letter, Adam de Marisco expresses a hope that his brother Robert may be admitted to the priesthood by the imposition of Grostete's hands—a request not likely to be refused. Like his brother, the Archdeacon was a strict disciplinarian in ecclesiastical matters;<sup>2</sup> no small recommendation to the friendship of Grostete.

Of Thomas, whom the writer styles a relative by blood,<sup>3</sup> and for whose interests he interposes more than once in these letters, no notice occurs elsewhere, nor is it possible to ascertain his rank or occupation from the references in this volume. He is once<sup>4</sup> mentioned as the bearer of a letter from Grostete to Ethelmar, Bishop of Winchester, and the Prior of St. Swithin's. It might consequently be inferred that he also was in Grostete's service.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Matthew Paris, who is far from being uniformly partial to Grostete, and could not forgive the Bishop for his affection and liberality to the Friars, accuses him of injustice for giving Robert de Marisco the living of Aylesbury. "Master Robert de Weseham (he says), Dean of Lincoln, a man distinguished for his morals and learning, was, chiefly at the instance of the Bishop of Lincoln, elected and appointed Bishop of Coventry [1245], in the place of William de Montpellier. The Bishop of Lincoln having thus obtained the object of his wishes, sequestered and alienated the Church of Aylesbury, as he had long wished to do, from the deanery of Lincoln, (because he believed that the Dean would prove refractory, owing to the rich emoluments of the Church,) and he gave it to Master Robert de Marsh, not without great injury to the Church, which had been held from time immemorial by the Dean of Lincoln." In an. 1245, Weseham had succeeded Grostete as divinity reader to the Friars in Oxford. Ecclest. p. 48.

Adam de Marisco received his education at Oxford; The author entered the priesthood; and before his admission into the Franciscan order held a living near Wearmouth, in the diocese of Durham, for three years, if we may credit the Chronicle of Lanercost. Wood<sup>1</sup> mentions a letter of Grostete, then Archdeacon of Leicester, addressed to Agnellus, the first provincial minister of the Grey Friars, in which the writer expresses his esteem for our author, and regrets his departure, as he calls it, "from his Holy College." This letter must refer to the period after Adam de Marisco had entered the Order. According to Eccleston<sup>2</sup> he assumed the habit at Worcester, during the wardenship of Agnellus, that is, between 1236 and 1239; and his admission procured the new comers no small degree of reputation.

"Master Adam of Oxford, who was famous throughout the world," says Eccleston, "had made a vow that he would grant any request that should be preferred to him in the name of the 'Blessed Mary;' and he told this to a certain recluse, who was a friend of his. She revealed the secret to her friends; that is, to a monk of Reading, to another of the Cistercian order, and to a friar preacher; telling them that they could gain such a man in such a way; not wishing that Adam should become a Friar Minor. But the Blessed Virgin did not permit any one in his presence to make the needful request; but deferred it to another time. One night he had a dream that he had to cross a bridge, where some men were throwing their nets into the stream, endeavouring to catch him; that he escaped them with great difficulty, and reached a peaceful spot. Now when, by the Divine Will, he had escaped all others, he went casually to visit the Friars, and ciscan Schoolmen,—Richard of Coventry, John Wallis, Thomas Dockeyng, Thomas Bungay, associated in popular tradition with Roger Bacon, Peccham Archbishop of Canterbury, Richard Middleton, Duns Scotus, Occham, and Burley. According to Wood, Bishop Grostete presided at Adam's commencement as Doctor in Theology, and delivered the oration, enlarging on the abilities and reputation of the candidate. But the best proof of the care and assiduity with which he filled his office, will be found in the great repute of the school over which he presided, and the European reputation its members conferred on the University of Oxford.<sup>1</sup> Lyons, Paris, and Cologne were indebted for their first professors to the English Franciscans in Oxford. Repeated applications were made from Ireland, Denmark, France, and Germany for English Friars;<sup>2</sup> foreigners were sent to the English school as superior to all others. It enjoyed a reputation throughout the world for adhering the most conscientiously and strictly to the poverty and severity of the Order; and for the first time since its existence as a University, Oxford rose to a position second not even to Paris itself.<sup>3</sup> The three Schoolmen of the most profound and original genius, Roger Bacon, Duns Scotus, and Occham, were trained within its walls. No other nations of Christendom can show a succession of names at all comparable to the English Schoolmen in originality and subtilty, in the breadth and variety of their attainments. Italy produced its Aquinas, a great organizer, like the

<sup>3</sup> The attractions of Paris were very great, but its fame was not owing to native talent. The two Schoolmen who taught first in its University, Alexander ab Hales and Thomas Wallis, were Englishmen; so was its most popular lecturer, Richard Anglicus or Richard of Cornwall. Perhaps the opposition the friars incurred in that university, arose as much from national as professional jealousy.

Roman himself; its Bonaventure, in whom St. Francis reappears in a shape more learned, if not more spiritual; Germany its laborious Albertus Magnus; Spain its Raymond Lully, the representative of Spanish adventure and Spanish genius. But no nation can show three Schoolmen like the English, each unrivalled in his way, and each working with equal ability in opposite directions. The influence of the English school was consequently more profound, more brilliant the reputation of its teachers.

His various occupations.

To his task as lecturer in the Franciscan school at Oxford, Adam de Marisco refers on various occasions;<sup>1</sup> not, indeed, with that fulness of detail which would have made his work at once the most welcome and the most valuable record of the early efforts of the Schoolmen, but still not without throwing many gleams and broken rays of light on a highly curious subject, where nothing but darkness and uncertainty prevailed before. At one time he is employed in interceding for the University of Oxford, with its chancellor, Grostete, Bishop of Lincoln; for it had the merit then, as since, of getting into interminable scrapes,— first with its chancellors; then with the Papal legates, whom it treated with small respect; then with the King himself; then with the burgesses of the town. The residents both in town and university, numbered by thousands where they now count hundreds, heaved and fermented under the potent influence of contending dialectics and opposite schools, swayed hither and thither, like a field of waving corn, by the contradictory gusts of adverse disputants. The possibility of preserving discipline was consequently difficult. Like its kindred institutions in Germany, Oxford was the stronghold of popular feeling and popular opinion; the licence of its students proportionably great; popular outbreaks proportionably common. Nation consorted with nation within its walls, and fierce battles, beginning in jest and ending in earnest, disturbed the peace of the University and alarmed the authorities of the realm. On these occasions the influence of Adam de Marisco, his reputation as a scholar, his intimacy with Grostete and the most powerful courtiers of the day, Richard Earl of Cornwall, Simon de Montfort, the King's brothers and uncles, proved of considerable advantage to the authorities of the University. At one time he intercedes for the Vice-Chancellor, who had used the University seal (signum) to Grostete's displeasure (p. 100); at another, he is engaged in settling the disputes between the bailiffs of the bishop and those of Richard Earl of Cornwall (105). At one time it is the more grateful task of thanking the bishop for his promise of sending (13s.) out of his alms-box for the poor scholars at Oxford (p. 135); or refreshing his memory as to the necessities of two poor kinsmen of the bishop there, in whose straits and needs the good friar felt great sympathy and compassion (p. 137). Or he urges the concession of a loan of 40*l.* for Master Simon de Valentine from the University chest (p. 257); or the extension of the means of study to his novices (p. 315); books and transcribers are required for one (p. 355), parchment and vellum for another (p. 391); this friar's health is impaired (pp. 320, 328, 404), that friar's repentance deserves forgiveness (p. 361). Again, he has to stand up for the rights of his scholars against the jealousy of the Convocation at Oxford (pp. 338, 346), who are by no means inclined to depart from the ancient usages of the University in favour of the new students, or allow them to proceed in theology without biding their due time at the established resting-places of Arts.

his letters.

And all this has to be done, not in the uninterrupted leisure of the scholar, but amidst the importunate demands of the world. He is wanted by the archbishop, a well-meaning prelate, of little prudence and less learning; who has a great idea of discipline, and a consequent knack of getting into trouble, with no proportionate knack for getting out of it. He must go with his grace to Rome to plead his cause with the Pope (pp. 131, 162); or be at his side as prompter (p. 327); or join him in the visitation of his province (pp. 334, 342, and 344); or help in the Convocation (p. 344). Then he has to attend the Parliament (p. 105); or preach the Crusade for the Holy Land (p. 475). He is wanted by the Queen (pp. 152, 275, 291, and 310); by the Earl and Countess of Leicester at Boulogne (p. 339); by Grostete at Bugden (p. 386). Here to give his advice upon disputed points of church discipline, there to find arguments for resisting irregular preferments. In 1230 he is at Rome with St. Anthony, of Padua, opposing the encroachments and irregularities of the versatile and ambitious minister Elias.<sup>1</sup> In 1256 he is nominated on a commission by the King and the Pope to settle the disputes between the Bishop and the Prior of Winchester. He is deputed the same year by his Holiness, at the desire of the King, to examine the claims of Richard, the Bishop of Chichester, to the title of Sanctity.<sup>2</sup> The King requires his personal attendance at the court (p. 402), where he has already preached one sermon too many, and fallen into disgrace for his uncourtly sincerity (p. 275). One minister would be glad of his attendance at Reading (p. 390); St. Bonaventura hopes to see him in France (p. 306). Ireland is holding a chapter—cannot he be there? In 1245 he is with Grostete at the Council of Lyons, and is left behind at Paris in charge of a sick brother, who cannot come on. "It is not safe" (says Grostete in a letter to the provincial minister,) "to let brother Adam stay there; for if they get scent of him, they will detain him at Paris, especially now that Alexander ab Hales and John de Rupellis are dead; and so both you and I shall be deprived of our greatest comfort" (p. 630).

What opportunity can he have for serving the wretched and the vile, what for performing the prime and essential duties of a good friar? These letters show. They may be the less entertaining on that account to the general reader; but they serve to illustrate the character of the writer; and what, perhaps, is of no less importance, the character of the Order to which he belonged. For this assiduity was not singular; it was exemplified in others, more celebrated than Adam de Marisco for their scholastic attainments; and it helps us to understand the immense influence enjoyed by the Friars in their better days—when men of the greatest attainments and the highest reputation in the Universities were doing service as missionaries, labouring among the poor, and testing by the hardest practice the value of the most abstruse speculations or idealism the most refined. Letter lxxxvii. is written on behalf of a poor simple woman named Alice, who is in a great strait; letter cxvi. for Philip Pathy, oppressed by the violence and vexation of that scourge of his country, Peter de Esrigge; letter cxxxiii. for Mylisand, a poor woman of Reading, whom the lawyers in a matrimonial suit have overwhelmed by their quibbles and their quilllets; letters clxxxix., exciv., exevi., for Hugh Cote, sunk in the slough of despond, who by the visitation of a heavenly inspiration now wishes to make reparation for his faults, and is prepared to restore to their owners three horses of unusual value, and other property gained by forbidden means. Letter ccxxxi. is on behalf of Thomas of Cornwall, who has known better times, and has fallen into poverty; letter ccxxxii. for Juliana, a widow, for whom the laws of those days provided no adequate security from violence and oppression.

Notwithstanding all the interruptions and claims upon his attention, our good Adam finds leisure for the demands of literature. He writes to Grostete for copies of the letters of the King of France and the Bishop of Tusculum "upon the fall of Egypt and " the sad condition of the Holy Land" (pp. 108, 109). On another occasion he is concerned for a MS. of the Ethics of Aristotle, which the bishop has had transcribed for his esteemed friend, Friar Hugo de Berionz (p. 114). Or he sends, for the bishop's inspection, the writings of Abbot Joachim, which a friar coming from abroad had brought with him, that the bishop may determine whether that pious writer is correct in anticipating that the Day of Judgment is at hand; which friar Adam thinks is not at all unlikely, considering the execrable wickedness of the times. The bishop is to read the book in his chamber with his secretaries, and when he has taken a copy return it (p. 147.) Or he sends to his ancient friend the Abbot of Vercelli, a disquisition upon The Angelic Salutation, begging in return a copy of his Exposition on the Ministry (p. 206.) To William of Notingham, the Provincial Minister at Paris, he transmits a copy of Richard St. Victor De Trinitate, to be collated with the original MS. at Paris (p. 359), and requests that the Bible of a deceased friar may be assigned to Thomas Dokkyng (p. 359).<sup>1</sup> He wishes to have despatched to the Council at Lyons (A.D. 1245) the Moralia of St. Gregory, which he left at Reading, and Rabanus Maurus De Natura Rerum; "and you may "pack the books neatly," he says, "in a waxed cloth, "taking off the wooden covers" (p. 378). From Warin de Hanwell he requests a copy of a sermon preached by him before the Chapter of London, on the Nativity of the Virgin (p. 408).<sup>1</sup>

So much for the subject of some of these letters. His style. A few words as to their style.

Unlike the writings of John of Salisbury and Peter of Blois, still less of Giraldus Cambrensis, there is an utter absence of all classical allusions and classical quotations, so predominant in the writings of the scholars just mentioned, and by no means uncommon in that age. This is remarkable. Still more when it is remembered that Adam de Marisco was an Oxford scholar of no mean repute before he entered the order, and on the testimony of Roger Bacon, not inclined to flatter his contemporaries, well acquainted with the classical languages. Bacon's statement is confirmed by these letters, involved as they are in construction and disfigured by bad taste. This absence of classical phraseology is attributable to the more intense and exclusive study of theology introduced by the friars; to their desire, in the first instance, of making all learning subservient to the objects of the missionary and the preacher; and not less to the poverty enjoined upon them by their founder, to whom learning was positively distasteful, especially when it seemed, as in his days, to separate the professors of it from their ordinary fellow men, among whom St. Francis wished his order

The intimacy between Adam de Marisco and the two great reformers of this reign, Bishop Grossete and Simon de Montfort, as shown in these letters, would lead the reader to expect that Adam de Marisco shared in their sentiments on the great political and religious questions which agitated the reign of Henry III. He was loved and trusted by both; by both he was assiduously consulted. With Grossete he never ceases to insist on the necessity of firm resistance to the secularizing spirit then rapidly invading the church, and grasping its temporal possessions. Popes and kings, prelates and barons, disunited in all other respects, were united in this. In an age disorganized by the inefficiency of the sovereign, by the uncertainty and weakness of the laws, when successful resistance to the unjust powers of the king in one reign had acted as an incentive to a resistance of right and lawful authority in his successor, it is not to be wondered that the sacred functions of the church were disregarded, its spiritual character overlooked and despised. The incessant wailing and lament on this head throughout these epistles might lead to a suspicion of exaggeration. It might be attributed to a secluded and melancholy temper, indulging in a professional or morbid iteration of grievances, did not independent evidence, too strong and too varied to be set aside, confirm their darkest and gloomiest denunciations. Boys of twelve years old were thrust by the Popes into the most responsible livings in England; non-resident rectors received the fruits of benefices they had never seen, and hardly knew in what counties they stood. Greedy courtiers surrounded the throne, gaping for temporal wealth of the church, and striving by every artifice, every act of servility to enrich themselves at the cost of the poor; hireling vicars, ill paid and ill educated, were thrust in, to do the work of which others reaped the benefits. Grostete complains of a monk bringing him a curate for ordination, who was dressed in rings and scarlet like a courtier. He has to pass constitutions that his clergy shall not haunt taverns, or play publicly at dice, or engage in drinking bouts, or hire out their services for mass in noblemen's halls, among dogs and polecats, drunken flunkeys, ribald minstrels, all sorts of abominations, in fact, social and physical. In vain he denounces the scandalous lives of monks and clergy; they set their diocesan at defiance, and shielded themselves behind exemptions purchased from Rome. Bishops engrossed in the secular occupations of chancellors, judges, commissioners, or ambassadors, or thwarted in their attempts to enforce discipline by the conflicting jurisdiction of king's court and papal court, or bewildered by the irreconcilable dicta of canonist and civilian,—left matters to proceed as they would, with here and there only a noble exception. It was hard to punish the most flagrant transgression of morality, or check the grossest violations of justice and order in laymen or in clergymen, without incurring infinite trouble, annoyance, and expense. Reformers the most zealous gave up the task in despair, and even Grostete himself needed the remonstrance of Adam de Marisco, when inclined to relax in his efforts; or sought his advice and encouragement when resolved to persevere. "I know not how a shepherd," says Adam in one of his letters to Grostete, "can escape the reproach of a hireling, if under a hard government and the malice of the times he abandons the Lord's fold.<sup>1</sup> Gladly, therefore, did I cast my eyes on that passage in your letter, wherein you say, 'I do not propose at this present to give way (cedere); but by the help of the Lord I will proceed as I have begun.' Blessed be God! who will never fail to bridle the persecutors of his faithful servants, be they as cruel as they will. I am so depressed that scarcely any spirit remains in me, when I think on the plagues which attend your high position (dignitatem); staining the fair reputation of your house with intolerable infamy,<sup>2</sup> with the filthiness of a vile life, and the opprobrium of the stews. I can only call them foolish clerks in name and totally without experience in managing the business of a great prelate. Let not your blessed circumspection linger in the correction

“ of such.” (p. 156.) And again, “ I think that the “ spiritualities and temporalities of your bishopric “ should be administered by trustworthy persons.” (p. 163.) Again, in letter xiii., he expresses his readiness to serve the bishop, “ If there is in me any counsel “ or any consolation, as you have said in your letter, “ am I not ready, when either your advantage re- “ quires or your need compels me ?” On another occasion, “ Grieved as I am at your letter, I rejoice “ greatly that for a cause of such singular excellency “ you think it all joy to fall into temptation and “ trial.”” (p. 101.)

<sup>2</sup> Popular tradition attributed the Earl of Montfort's ruin to Gloucester's treachery, and to Prince Edward's facility in making promises whilst in adversity, which he did not intend to keep in prosperity. Thus a contemporary poet addresses the former, anticipating his defection:—

“ O Comes Guberniæ comple quod cæpisti ;
Nisi claudas congrue multos decepisti.
Age nunc viriliter sicut promisisti ;
Causam fave fortiter cujus fons et levamen, Terræ fraudem faciens, inferens

gravamen,
Maledictus mancas ! fiat ! fiat !
Amen.”

Wright's Political Songs, p. 122.

Another writer in the same collection, in a poem on the Battle of Lewes, re-echoing precisely the sentiments expressed by Adam de Marisco says of Prince Edward:—

‘ Cum in arcto fuerit quicquid vis promittit,
Sed mox ut evaserit promissum
dimittit ;
Testis sit Gubernia, ubi quod juravit,
Liber ab angustia statim revocavit.’

“ in reliance upon Him, who sits on the throne of justice and judgment, if the Earl would be careful of preserving in his own person, his soldiers and servants, and in all belonging to his government, devotion to God, unbroken loyalty, friendship with one another, charity towards all.” (p. 261.) In times of such confusion it was not to be expected that the followers would imitate the moderation of their leaders, or be restrained from imitating excesses practised with impunity by their opponents. “ What use is it,” exclaims he to the Earl, “ to provide for the peace of your fellow-citizens, and not guard the peace of your own domestics and your own household?” And then he adds a caution which, in De Montfort’s case, was not needless: “ Better is a patient man than a strong man, and he who can rule his own temper than he who storms a city.” (p. 264.)<sup>1</sup> At the same time he does full justice to the earl’s nobler qualities; to his untiring zeal for the good of the church and the protection of the oppressed; to his modesty; to the encouragement and favour shown by him towards all designs for reforming the corruptions of the age, and securing the freedom of the people. In all these respects the letters of Adam de Marisco confirm the popular estimation in which the Earl was held. When the earl had remonstrated apparently for the favourable terms in which the writer had spoken of him, Adam de Marisco answers: “ My conscience does not accuse me on that head; nor have I in this, as I conceive, departed from the examples of the wise, cause was in some measure owing the disunion of his party after the Battle of Lewes, and his subsequent misfortunes. See also the two remarkable letters addressed to his countess, clix., clxi.

“ pride by its honours and cast down to inertness by “ praise ; but the wisdom of a noble soul is inclined “ by the one to humility, and by the other is animated “ to virtue.” (p. 266.) And in a letter immediately following : “ If you have received the answers of broken “ friendship and feigned affection, what else are you “ now suffering than what you before expected? The “ clear circumspection of your wisdom will remember,
“ in how many conferences, after repeated and care“ ful examination, we drummed into each other’s ears
“ the execrable shamelessness of seductive cunning, “ such as we now see : although, considering the trust“ worthiness of courageous fidelity, your wisdom did “ not think it proper to decline the danger of a truly “ grand exploit, for the imminent suspicion merely “ of some stupendous dishonesty. What then? The “ forethought of danger certainly mitigates the presence “ of affliction ; according to that remark of St. Gre“ gory, altogether to be embraced, wherein he says :
“ ‘ The blows that are foreseen strike less painfully ;
“ ‘ and we suffer the ills of life with greater patience,
“ ‘ if we fortify ourselves against them by the shield “ ‘ of prudence.’” Then after a while he adds : “ I have “ abridged this letter as I am unwilling to fatigue
“ your ears with importunate advice, so multifariously “ occupied as you are with such a variety of distracting “ cares ; and I know also that the studious industry
“ of your serenity will out of a few things wisely “ extract a multitude for your welfare. This, I most “ anxiously wish, pray, and beseech you, that you “ would studiously procure for yourself the saving com“ fort of God’s Word by frequent examination of the “ Holy Scriptures, breaking through (so far as it can “ reasonably be done) the storms and perturbations of “ distracting cares. I think it would be very suitable

“ to your discretion if you would frequently peruse
“ the 29th, 30th, and 31st chapters of the Book of “ Job, and other passages in the same book, suitable “ to your condition, and with them the delightful “ commentaries of St. Gregory, as God shall give you

It would carry me far beyond the limits of a preface to multiply similar passages of equal interest and importance. One fact, however, is revealed by these letters of too much value to be left unnoticed; I mean the intimate friendship which they disclose between Simon de Montfort and Grostete. This, I believe, is a new light on the history of the times and in the characters of these popular heroes of England in the thirteenth century.

It has not often occurred that the spiritual reformer of the Church and the champion for civil freedom for the people have acted in cordial co-operation. It was so here. An intimacy subsisted between the Earl and the Bishop, uninterrupted except by the death of the latter, in 1254. These letters furnish evidence of the interest felt by De Montfort in the efforts of the bishop for the improvement of his diocese, his cordial sympathy in Grostete's strenuous resistance to improper nominations and the exercise of ecclesiastical patronage. They show also how that confidence was reciprocated. “The Earl of Leicester,” says Adam de Marisco to the bishop, “has spoken to me of “ that most salutary design of yours for liberating “ souls with which you have been divinely inspired;
“ he praises, extols, and embraces it beyond what “ most men would have conceived; he is prepared of “ take part in the work, himself and his associates, if “ any such can be found. But as he is very anxious

“ for your bodily health, he asserts that he does not see how you can attempt to grapple with such difficulties and dangers in your own person.” (p. 111.) And again to the same: “ I return your lordship the breviatē which you wrote Of the rule of a kingdom and a tyranny; as you sent it, sealed with the seal of the Earl of Leicester. If it should be the hap of the Earl to return soon into Gascony, after deliberation had with me and his Countess on the subject, he proposes to send back his eldest son, Henry,<sup>1</sup> to your fatherhood, that whilst his years are yet tender, he may, under the guardianship of your holiness, as hitherto, by the blessing of God, make proficiency some time longer, and so far as is possible, in learning and good manners. But if my lord the Earl should stay in England, he proposes to dispose otherwise of the boy according to your salutary advice.” (p. 110.) In another letter: “ Blessed be God, my lord of Lincoln is well and your excellent children of admirable disposition and great promise, improve in virtue and goodness daily.” (p. 268.)<sup>2</sup>

But I must bring these observations to a close.

On the death of William of Kilkenny, the bishop of Ely, in 1256, the King nominated as the successor in that see Henry of Wenghan, keeper of the seal. The monks refusing compliance, elected their subprior Hugh de Belesale, and despatched him to the Papal court with a large sum of money to prosecute his claim. In the mean time the Archbishop of Canterbury, not without the King's connivance, wrote to his friends at Rome desiring that Adam de Marisco might be nominated to the vacant see. "Although this " friar Adam," says Matthew Paris in no friendly mood, " a brother of the order of Minors, advanced in years " and possessed of much learning, had abandoned all " lordly greatness and large revenues to assume the " religious habit, yet he was reported to have given a " willing consent to this substitution, according to the " saying of Ovid :

" Vix ego Saturno quemquam regnante videbam,
 " Cujus non animo dulcia lucra forent.'

" Master Henry of Wengham, the chancellor in whose " behalf the King had urged his entreaties on the " monks of Ely, endured with patience the thoughts " of any one else being promoted to the said bishopric " and humbly declared that either of the two were " more worthy of it than himself."<sup>1</sup> Again, in the same year, the same chronicler adds (if indeed it be the same), " On the feast of St. Gordian and St. Epimachus [May 10] the election of the bishop-elect of " Ely [i.e. of prior Hugh] was quashed by the interference of the King and the Archbishop of Canterbury, who endeavoured to appoint Master Adam de Marisco, one of the order of Minors, in his place. " This proceeding excited the wonder of all, because " neither the election nor the elected could be condemned with justice, nor any fault be found with " the elect." He concludes his narration by stating that the candidate appointed by the monks succeeded at last, by dint of great bribery, after involving his diocese in considerable difficulties, and returned to England in 1258.

Meanwhile to him who had been in some measure the innocent cause of this dispute, the result was becoming every day less and less important. Never of strong bodily health, the sharp discipline of his order, his increasing years, and the fatigues of his office, proved too much for his feeble frame. In his last letters addressed to Cardinal Bonaventure, the newly appointed general of the Order, Adam de Marisco had earnestly requested the immediate return of John of Stamford, the provincial minister. "Ill health," he says, "under various forms is weighing heavily upon me, to the destruction of this present life; therefore I anxiously and humbly beg that you will condescend to despatch to me personally (if saving reason will in any way permit) the venerable father friar John, the provincial minister, without delay; by whom, through the blessing of God, I may, happen what will, be directed through things transitory and my thoughts erected to things eternal."<sup>1</sup> The illiberal insinuation of Matthew Paris is sufficiently disproved by these letters. Had wealth or titles been the object of Adam's ambition, he had frequent opportunities for gratifying that wish, without waiting until sickness and age deprived the temptation of half its charms. Numerous passages in these letters show, he might without reproach have taken both, had he been so minded. But in all that concerns the Franciscan Friars the testimony of Matthew Paris must be received with caution. He shared in the prejudices of his order. The Franciscan was a parvenu; that alone was enough to excite the aristocratical prejudices of the English monk. The activity, the learning, the popular talents of the friar had thrown into the shade the monastic Orders who had hitherto monopolized popular favour; and the luxurious life and dress of

One would have been glad, had a life spent in so much active good, in promoting the interests of learning and the efficiency of the Church, gone down to the grave in peace at the last. But I fear that the unworthy scandal to which Matthew Paris has given currency was not confined to that writer. In one of the last letters of this book, more than usually dark and ambiguous, Adam says to two friars, his correspondents, "I am afraid lest even those who are now friendly to me will suspect the fictions of the guileful against me. But I know not what to do. Let Him discover who knows the secrets of all hearts. After the lapse of a few days and endeavours made in this behalf, I think (God willing) that the pen of my foolishness will not again prove importunate to you or any one else." (p. 412.)

The precise date of his death is uncertain, and must have been equally uncertain in the middle of the 14th century. The author of the Chronicle of Lanercost, generally better informed than other historians of the proceedings of the Franciscans, tells the following strange story:—"On the sixth of the Ides of November (November 8th), died Robert Grostete, &c. In the same fatal year he was followed by friar Adam de Marisco, beloved by the bishop above all other men. He was the first of the order of Friars Minors who, after Grostete, held the chair at Oxford. One thing I will record of him for the instruction of posterity: this Adam de Marisco was a man famous in his life and famous for his knowledge; and before the change of his condition he had been rector of a church for three years, named Weirmouth, in the diocese of Durham. When he was tired of the world, and

 “ common lot of all men, as it is said, he died and “ was buried, through grief,<sup>1</sup> at Lincoln, between “ the bishop and the south wall, God so providing,
 “ that as they were lovely and amiable in their lives
 “ so in death they should not be divided. When the “ news of his death was brought, according to the “ custom of the order, to the chantry priest at Lon“ don, he heaved a deep sigh for the death of so ex“ cellent a man. And taking to his bed from grief
 “ and anxiety, he saw in his slumbers Friar Adam “ standing in the chief place of the quire of the “ church, with a peaceful countenance. Then the priest “ asked him whether he was really dead, as the ru“ mour went, and Friar Adam said that he was. Then “ said he : ‘ Dearly beloved father, tell me in what “ ‘ condition you now are in ? ‘ I am happy,’ he re“ plied, ‘ for I have escaped the judgment. But that “ ‘ cursed church, which I held for three years, was “ ‘ very nearly the cause of my damnation.’ At that “ time the friar did not know what church Friar “ Adam meant, or what office he had held ; but in “ the morning when he told the vision he was cer“ tified of the facts by his companions.”<sup>2</sup>

The chronicler is honest enough to acknowledge that this was only a dream. It was certainly not a true vision ; for Adam de Marisco outlived Grostete three years at least, dying in 1257, or the spring of 1258. It is, however, probable that grief for the loss of his oldest and most intimate associate, under whom he had studied at Oxford, with whom he had gone hand in hand through a long period of the most intimate and confidential friendship, accelerated his death. It is painful to think that the Earl of Leicester was left to fight the battle alone, without the aid, sympathy, or counsel of the only two friends whom he could trust implicitly.

His reputation as a schoolman.

The reputation of Adam de Marisco as a scholar, and his claim to the title of Doctor Illustris, bestowed on him by his contemporaries, must, unfortunately, rest entirely on these letters; for no other writings of his have been preserved. The word seems to imply the English qualities of clearness and precision; and justifiable as it might be when applied to his scholastic speculations, is scarcely borne out by his letters. However, as the cleverest and most amusing of correspondents are not necessarily remarkable for the possession of excellences expected in a subtle thinker or profound philosopher, so it often happens that the epistolary correspondence of the philosopher holds out little promise of excellence in his other writings. The claim of Adam de Marisco to scholastic eminence does not rest upon the vague voice of popular tradition, but on the positive testimony of one who certainly had no great tolerance for mere scholastic cleverness or logical astuteness. This is the evidence of Roger Bacon:—

“Et adhuc vulgus philosophantium semper est imperfectum et pauci sapientissimi fuerunt in perfectione philosophiæ. Ut primò compositores, ut Salomo, deinde Aristoteles pro tempore suo; postea Avicenna, et in diebus nostris Dominus Robertus Episcopus nuper Lincolnensis et Frater Adam de Marisco; quia hi fuerunt perfecti in omni sapientia et nunquam fuerunt plures perfecti in philosophia.”—Opus Tert. ch. xxii.

Again speaking of the great need of philological books in his days, and especially of the Latin tongue, Roger Bacon observes:—

“ Omnes sancti et philosophi Latini et poetæ sciverunt de linguis alienis, et omnes sapientes antiqui quorum multos vidimus durare usque ad nostrum tempus ut Dominos Episcopos Lincolniensem et Sancti Davidis et Fratrem Adam.”—Ib. ch. xxv.

Elsewhere, “ Omnes sapientes antiqui et qui adhuc remanserunt usque ad tempora nostra dixerunt quod fuit animus unum. Ego bis audiivi venerabilem antistitem Parisiensis Ecclesiæ Dominum Gulielmum Alverniæ, congregata Universitate coram eo, reprobare eos et disputare cum eis, et probavit per aliquas rationes quas pono, quod omnes erraverunt. Dominus vero Robertus Episcopus Lincolniensis et Frater Adam de Marisco majores clerici de mundo, et perfecti in sapientia divina et humana, hoc idem firmaverunt. Unde quando per tentationem vel derisionem aliqui Minores præsumptuose quæsierunt a Fratre Adam. ‘ Quid est intellectus agens? ’ Respondit: ‘ Corvus ‘ Elicæ: ’ volens per hoc dicere quod fuit Deus vel angelus. Sed noluit exprimere quia tentando et non propter sapientiam quæsierunt.”—Ib. ch. xxiii.

The last remark will be considered by most men as decisive on the subject.

THOMAS OF ECCLESTON DE ADVENTU MINORUM.

DEDICATION of the Author's work to Simon de Esseby, p. 9; undertaken in the belief that practice is more influential than precept;— as other Orders had wonders to narrate, love and respect for his own Order induced him to publish the accounts which he had collected during five-and-twenty years from his foster fathers and brothers of the English Franciscans.

Arrival of the Minorites in England, September 11, A.D. 1224, p. 5; land at Dover, four clerks and five laymen, ib.; their names and quality, ib. Had been carried across for charity by the monks of Fescamp, p. 7; entertained two days at the Priory of the Holy Trinity, Canterbury; four start for London; five entertained at the Priests' Hospital there. Their scanty fare, p. 8; other instances of like hardship, ib. In one place at the arrival of visitors the warden borrowed a pot of ale for the strangers, and he and his friars made believe to drink; in London the drink was sourer than vinegar, 9. The four who had started for London entertained fifteen days by the Black Friars; have a house in Cornhill, and make separate cells, stuffing the interstices with dry grass; are without a common chapel. About November 1st, two of them start for Oxford, and live at a house in St. Ebb's; thence to Northampton, p. 10; where they have a house in the Parish of St. Giles's. The wardens at Oxford, Cambridge, Lincoln, and London. The Order increases so rapidly that in 1256, under Peter of Tewksbury, fifth minister, their numbers amounted to 1242, in forty-nine different localities.

Their first converts: Friar Solomon procurator for his house; begs of his sister, who curses the hour she had ever seen him, p. 11; made an acolyte by Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury; is entertained by the archbishop; returns barefooted in the deep snow; falls ill, and cannot stir for two years; is visited by Jordanus, the Master of the Dominicans, and the surgeon advises amputation of the foot, p. 12; when the axe is to be applied, and the foot is uncovered, the fester breaks; he is sent abroad, recovers, becomes warden of London, and confessor-general to the city; breaks his spine, and becomes hump-backed; visited with great agonies; has a vision of Jesus Christ and St. Peter; is rebuked by them; his pains vanish, p. 13. How the Devil threw a handful of lice at Fr. Gilbert de Vyz. William of London, a famous tailor, and friend of Hubert de Burgh, Chief Justice, received; Jocius of Cornhill, a clerk, and two priests, with Philip of London, afterwards warden of Bruges, finally of Ireland. Then certain masters of arts, Walter de Burgo, Richard Norman, Vincent of Coventry, with Adam of Oxford and William of York, join the Order, p. 15; then Adam de Marisco; anecdotes of their conversion. Others join in great numbers, p. 16. The devotion of the people towards them increases; find powerful friends at Canterbury; and at London, where lands are given for their use by the burgesses, 17. William Joyner builds them a chapel; Peter de Oliland leaves them money for an infirmary; Henry de Frowie and Salekin de Basing, an aqueduct; others a library. At Oxford Robert le Mercer lets them a house; Richard le Muliner gives the burgesses for their use a plot of ground and a house. At Cambridge the burgesses gave them an old church near the jail, p. 18; where they afterwards build a small wooden chapel, made by one carpenter in one day, from fourteen couple of planks. At Shrewsbury the King gives them a plot of ground, and Richard Pinde, a burgess, builds them a church; they remove the stone walls of their dormitory for clay.

Their strict and holy life, p. 19; their cheerfulness, p. 20; a young friar at Oxford rebuked in a vision for being too much given to laughing, 20; their earnestness in obeying the orders of their superior and accepting missions in most desolate spots; their zeal in teaching and preaching, visiting barefooted the schools of theology, however remote, 21. Haymo of Faversham, with three other masters of arts, received at St. Denys; account of their conversion, 22. Fr. Haymo becomes famous, 23; deposes Gregory de Neapoli and Fr. Helias. Of William de Colville; Nicholas Rufus and his vision; Radulphus de Rosa, the favourite preacher of Henry III. Henry Burford and his verses, 25; Henry de Reresby; Martin de Barton, the associate of St. Francis, 26; Peter Hispanus, who commanded a bird to stay its flight.

Division of the English provinces resolved on at a provincial chapter held at London, 27; Fr. Gilbert custos at London, Will. de Esseby at Oxford, Richard de Ingeworth at Cambridge, Martin de Barton at York, Fr. Stephen at Salisbury, Fr. de Leycestria at Worcester. At Oxford the friars used no pillows, nor shoes, except in cases of illness. Story of William de Madeley, who found a pair of shoes and went to matins in them; had a dream that he was attacked by thieves, and putting out his feet to show that he was a friar, found to his confusion that he was shod. Starting from bed, he throws his shoes out of the window.

Visitation of the English province by William Colville, p. 29; (2) by John Naverius; (3) by Fr. Wygmundus, friend of Cardinal Otho; great confusion arises from his excessive severity, p. 30. A provincial chapter at Oxford; an appeal against the visitation; Fr. Colville's sermon against contracting debts, p. 31. Division of the English province into administrations by order of Fr. Helias, p. 32. Henry Resesby, minister of Scotland; then Friar John de Kethene, warden of London, afterwards minister of Ireland; at the convent at Genoa advocates a strict interpretation of the rule; promotes learning; buys a Bible at Paris with an entire gloss, which he carries to Ireland, p. 33; deposed in the Council at Metz, when the administrations are reduced to thirty-two, sc. 16 ultramontane and 16 cismontane.

The Order increases, their areas enlarged, p. 34. Reply of William of Nottingham to his friend, who threatened to accuse him for violating the rule in the matters of building, p. 35; anecdote of St. Francis, ib. Ill effects of a building mania, p. 36; anecdotes illustrating this point, ib. New house at Paris falls the moment it is finished, p. 37; erection of schools in Oxford; Grossete lecturer, ib. Succession of lecturers, p. 38; places of lecture in various parts of England, ib. Readers at Oxford, 39; Thomas of Eccleston a student there, ib.; anecdote of his fellow student, ib. Readers at Cambridge, p. 40. Eustace de Normanville chancellor of Oxford, p. 41; preachers and confessors of the Order, ib. Anecdotes respecting them, p. 42 sq. Anecdote of Lanfranc, p. 43. The general-ministers, p. 44. Scandal caused by Helias. The provincials appeal against him, p. 45; reappointed, and again deposed, ib. Account of the dispute in the presence of Gregory IX.; Friar Haymo, the speaker against Helias, encouraged by Cardinal Sumercote, p. 46. Friar Albert of Pisa elected, p. 47; celebrates the first mass in the Order, ib. Helias refuses obedience, is excommunicated, and joins the Emperor, p. 48; Friar Haymo of Faversham elected; reforms under him, ib.; commission appointed, of whom Adam de Marisco is one, to consider the doubtful points of the rule, ib. Apparition of St. Francis to John Banister, p. 49; the English friars object to any relaxation, ib.; election of Friar Crescentius, ib., and of John of Parma, ib., who had visited Oxford before his generalship, 50; his praise of the English friars, ib.; anecdotes of him, and of Friar Haymo, and others, ib.

Succession of provincial ministers, p. 52; Friar Angnellus, ib.; his strictness in his devotions, p. 54; his death, ib.; his coffin removed; Helias destroys the English seal (a lamb with a cross); Albert of Pisa appointed provincial, ib. His address to the English friars; his strict discipline, p. 55. Regulations of the Pope touching novices, p. 56; his pleasant sayings and stories, ib. His wise administration, p. 58; compels the friars to live more generously; careful of the bodily health of his friars, ib. Friar Haymo elected in his room; receives Rad. de Maydenstone, bishop of Hereford, ib. William of Notingham succeeds, p. 59; his sayings, ib.; his story of Stephen of Grammont, ib. Sayings of Friar Albert, Adam de Marisco, Friar Haymo, p. 60. Anecdotes of the spiritual life and humility of the friars, p. 61; of Eustace de Merk, Robert de Tornham, Step. de Belase, William Coche, ib.; Conversion of two heretics, p. 62; anecdotes of Peter of Tewksbury, ib. of Grostete, Bishop of Lincoln, p. 63 sq.; of his generosity, self-denial, love of the friars, aphorisms, ib. Anecdotes of Friar Mansuetus, p. 66. Anecdotes of Peter of Tewksbury, 68; of William of Notingham, 69.

LIST OF THE LETTERS OF ADAM DE MARISCO.

	Page.
I. To BONIFACE, ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY - - -	77
On his advancement to the See of Canterbury.
II. To THE SAME - - - - -	82
Commending the suit of Walter de Cantiloup, Bishop of Worcester.
III. To THE SAME - - - - -	83
Promises to attend the meeting of Convoca- tion to be held the ensuing Hilary term in London.
IV. To THE SAME - - - - -	84
Urges upon him the settlement of the dispute between the bishop and the convent of Win- chester.
V. To THE SAME - - - - -	85
Requests his intercession with the King for the monks of Oseney to be allowed to pro- ceed to the election of an abbot.
VI. To ODO, ARCHBISHOP OF ROUEN - - - - -	86
Regrets that urgent business prevents their meeting. Commends to his hospitality and prayers the Earl of Leicester.
VII. To THE SAME - - - - -	87
Recommends to his charitable aid Peter de Pon- tiserra, bound for the Crusade.
VIII. To JACOBUS ERLANDI, BISHOP OF ROSKILD - - -	87
On the duties of the episcopal office.—He, Bishop Grostete, and others have been en- deavouring, without effect, to promote a mission of Franciscans to Denmark, as the bishop de- sired.—Hopes for better success when the Pro- vincial Minister returns to England.
IX. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - - - -	92
Recommending to him William de Leschelade.

	Page.
X. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - - - -	93
Recommending to him P. de Kyllum, presented by the King to the church of St. Mary the Virgin, Oxford.
XI. To THE SAME - - - - -	93
Recommends to him the petition of N.
XII. To THE SAME - - - - -	94
Will never recommend any one to the bishop, whose character is not unimpeachable.—Begs he will hear what Thomas de Marisco has to say in the business of which he wrote.—The bishop's sister, Juetta, is slowly recovering.—Has heard that the bishop, after the Parliament, intends to visit the North.
XIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	96
Sees no reason for coming sooner, as the bishop of Worcester will not be with Grostete before Christmas.—Proffers of service whenever required. Exclaims bitterly against the troubles to which the church was exposed.
XIV. To THE SAME - - - - -	97
Introduces to him Oliver de Lexington, a scholar of Oxford,—a candidate for ordination.
XV. To THE SAME - - - - -	98
Requests that Lady Eva de Tracy may take up her abode in the nunnery of Godstow.
XVI. To THE SAME - - - - -	99
Has communicated the bishop's wishes to the Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford, who have consented to draw up certain articles without delay.—Intercedes for Ralph de Sempringham, the Vice-Chancellor of the University, who has unconsciously offended Grostete.—Has received a letter directed to himself and the Vice-Chancellor, with a copy of two papal letters.—Rejoices at the resolution shown by Grostete.
XVII. To THE SAME - - - - -	102
The Queen's good-will to Grostete has opened the way to greater activity in the interests of the church.—Regrets that the intended conference with the bishop of Winchester has been interrupted.—Asks for the copies of the letters of the King of France and the Bishop of Tusculum.

	Page.
XVIII. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - -	103
Asks that in the cause of the Earl of Leicester's men to be heard before Grostete, the bishop will so moderate his censures that, whilst the rights of the church are preserved inviolable, the Earl may feel that he is indebted to the consideration of the bishop.
XIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	104
Requests his good offices for John de Stokton, canon of Huntingdon.
XX. To THE SAME - - - - -	104
Will attend the Parliament at London.—If the friars, who have different designs for him, should oppose it, thinks it desirable that application should be made to the Provincial Minister.
XXI. To THE SAME - - - - -	105
A request in behalf of Symon Fitz-Symon.—He, J. de Crakhale, and Roger, the bishop's seneschal, met at Oxford, to settle the dispute between the bishop's men and the men of the Earl of Cornwall, the second week in Lent.—Master Symon will give the bishop an account of their proceedings.—Advises the bishop to write a deprecating letter to the Earl to suspend further proceedings until after Easter, when both may personally meet and settle the controversy in an amicable manner.—The Earl is a formidable adversary, only to be overcome by submission.
XXII. To THE SAME - - - - -	107
The management of the University of Oxford and the disputes there require great caution. Asks his attention to the nunnery of Godstow. Recommends that the administration of the bishop's affairs should be transferred with all due expedition to the successor of John de Crakhale, as they are suffering detriment.—Suggests to him the propriety of some present for the Princess Margaret, to be married at Christmas to the King of Scotland.—The Earl and Countess of Leicester want the bishop's advice.

	Page.
XXIII. GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - -	103
Warns him against a priest of bad character presented by the Abbess of Godstow to the vicarage of Blokkesham.—Sends the copy of a letter from the King of France on the defeat of the Crusade.
XXIV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	109
Has received a letter from a brother of the Order in France, giving an account of the excesses committed by the Pastoreaux.
XXV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	110
Returns him his Essay.—The Earl proposes to intrust his son Henry to the bishop's care.—The Earl would rather that the settlement of the dispute respecting his men should be determined by the bishop personally.—Has spoken to the writer of the bishop's salutary design for the redemption of souls; but is apprehensive of the bishop's health.—Adam encourages him to proceed. The Baron de Munchunsky, who has been called before the bishop in the matter of his wife, is wrongfully accused.
XXVI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	113
John le Gracius declines the bishop's invitation. Has spoken to an able physician, Reginald de Stokes, whom Adam advises to be taken into the bishop's service.—The MS. of Aristotle's Ethics may be sent to the Gray Friars, London. Peter de Wymbledon, the Queen's physician, will take care of it.—Has written to the archbishop's official against the vicar of Blokkesham.—Requests his consideration for the nunnery of Belton.—Great disputes in the University of Oxford, in consequence of the incarceration of two of its clerks.—The Queen is resolute in presenting none but suitable clergymen.
XXVII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	116
The troubles in Oxford quieted.—History of the Vicar of Blokkesham.—Calls his attention to the bad management of the temporalities of the diocese.—Advises him to have a proper inquisition made.—Desires to stay at Oxford the ensuing Christmas. The convent has deferred, not denied the bishop the company of Fr. W. de Pokclintun.—Sends him a letter of the discussion in the Archbishop's consistory.

XXVIII. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - -	119
Professing his affection for Grostete, but desires to remain in some quiet retreat whilst the bishop is absent in the North.—Hears of the excesses of the Pastoreaux.
XXIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	122
Requests that the niece of Reginald de Bathonia may be admitted into the Nunnery of Godstow.
XXX. To THE SAME - - - - -	122
Gives him a very long and minute account of the charges brought against De Montfort by the people of Gascony.—The Earl's answer.—The King's intemperate language and behaviour.—The Earl has since then arrived at Boulogne to wait the result.
XXXI. To THE SAME - - - - -	130
Interposition for the nunnery of Belton.
XXXII. To THE SAME - - - - -	131
Earnestly requests the bishop's aid and advice in the business of the archbishop, who is on his journey to Rome to prosecute his cause against the Bishop of London.
XXXIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	132
Robert de Marisco cannot be at Lincoln this Christmas.—The day of his degree is at hand, if the bishop wishes to attend.—J. de S. Egidio wishes to retire on the plea of ill health from the prebend of Lecton (Leighton).
XXXIV. To THE SAME - - - - -	134
Requests that the messenger to be sent into Gascony to De Montfort may call for his letters.—Mentions the names of persons fitted for the prebend.—Wishes to know his pleasure respecting the reception of Robert de Marisco.—Commends John de Schersted.—The poor scholars of Oxford have not received the 13s. intended for them.
XXXV. To THE SAME - - - - -	136
If the bishop desires to consult friar Adam de Hekeshovre (q. Bekeshoure?) on the state of his health, it will be advisable to send to the Provincial Minister, who is going in a few days to Coventry.—Calls to his notice the necessities of two of the Bishop's poor kinsmen, scholars in Oxford.

XXXVI. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - -	138
The Prior of Newham will not oppose the bishop.—Rejoices that Grostete has expressed a determination to resist all improper presentations.
XXXVII. To THE SAME - - - - -	140
Moralizes on a great feast lately held at London.
XXXVIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	141
Is very anxious to have some conversation with the Bishop on the dangerous state of the Church.—Has spoken with the King and his councillors as they passed through Oxford.—Has heard from the former that certain unfounded complaints are rife, not unknown to the bishop.—The King has bad advisers.
XXXIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	143
Advises the Bishop to moderate his studies as destructive to his health.—Apologizes for his importunity.
XL. To THE SAME - - - - -	143
The difficulty of finding fit clergymen to present to livings.
XLI. To THE SAME - - - - -	144
Thinks it prudent not to interfere at present in the affair of N—. Would greatly regret if he should now be involved in any interminable dispute in his later years, and his new calling of a friar, after having experienced the bishop's goodness to him from his youth.
XLII. To THE SAME - - - - -	146
That our Lord's remark of the shepherd flying when the wolf cometh, does not apply to such a retreat as he advises the bishop.—Warns him that many look with regret on the dispute between him and his clergy.
XLIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	146
Sends him the expositions of Abbot Joachim, brought by a certain friar.—Desires his opinion about them.

	Page.
XLIV. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - -	147
In behalf of William de Leschelade.
XLV. To THE SAME - - - - -	148
The prior of [Neuham?] will comply with the bishop's request.—Urges the bishop to appoint, and set all objections at defiance.
XLVI. To THE SAME - - - - -	149
Anora de Baskerville is unfit for the rule of the priory to which she has been appointed.
XLVII. To THE SAME - - - - -	150
Requests his interest with the Abbot of Thornton that John, the chamberlain of the late Bishop of Durham, may be admitted to probation in that house.—The Bishop of St. David's begged the writer's attendance at his consecration.
XLVIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	151
Gives an account of a great eruption in the island of Guernsey.—At the request of the Queen, he has gone from Oxford to Reading, to treat of matters affecting the King and his heirs.—The Earl of Leicester and Peter of Savoy were at Windsor.—His wish for Master Reginald Stokes, the physician, and others, will be complied with.
XLIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	153
Regrets to hear that Grostete despairs of amendment.—Meets the complaint of the bishop that no one stood by him.—Is grateful for the honour intended him by the Bishop.—Wept as he stood on the shore of Dover, earnestly desiring that he might, in filial devotion to the bishop, obey his directions in works of piety; but this could not be done without leave from the Pope or the General Minister.—Advises Grostete, if he stays longer abroad, to write conciliatory letters to the King, the Queen, and Richard, Earl of Cornwall.—Had expected his messenger from Genoa, &c.—Intending to accompany the archbishop to Rome, he had been recalled.
L. To THE SAME - - - - -	157
Is delighted at the prospect of Grostete's speedy return.
LI. To THE SAME - - - - -	159
That he and Robert de Marisco will find it very inconvenient to visit the bishop at Christmas. He will, however, comply, if the bishop desires it.

LII. To GROSTETE, BISHOP OF LINCOLN - - - -	160
Complains of his many occupations—answers certain observations in the Bishop's last letter.
LIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	161

- Page.
- CXXXV. TO SIMON DE MONTFORT, EARL OF LEICESTER - 261
Trusts that God will rescue him from all his perils, if he keeps in due order his family and followers.—Feels anxious that he has never heard from the Earl, of his success, since his last letter.
- CXXXVI. TO THE SAME - - - - - 262
The countess expected to be confined the 9th October last;—remonstrates with the Earl for having carried off with him into Gascony the parish priest of Hodiham;—thinks his reason for so doing frivolous;—begs he may be sent back.
- CXXXVII. TO THE SAME - - - - - 264
Praises the Earl for his zeal and services to the church;—admonishes him that better is he who conquers himself than he who conquers a city.
- CXXXVIII. TO THE SAME - - - - - 264
Is surpris'd at the Earl's return, although aware that urgent causes require it.—Although uniform experience assures him that circumspect counsel will not be had on those matters of which the Earl wrote to him, much as they require it, yet God, in whose hand are the hearts of kings, will determine all things for the best.
- CXXXIX. TO THE SAME - - - - - 265
On the same subject;—justifies the favourable expressions of his letter.
- CXL. TO THE SAME - - - - - 266
Warns him that falsehood in friends is to be expected—that dangers are best borne when anticipated. Exhorts him to study the book of Job, with the sermons of St. Gregory.—Has spoken with the King, who acquiesces to the Earl's advice.—The Queen is equally well disposed to him.
- CXLI. TO THE SAME - - - - - 269
Hopes that the Earl's unexpected success will make him the more thankful to God, who is the author of it.—The bishop of Lincoln has written to him fully.—Hopes that aid will be given him from the Pope.

	Page.
CXLII. TO SIMON DE MONTFORT - - - - -	270
Requesting a present of venison for the Dean of Lincoln at his installation feast.
CXLIII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	270
Feels great anxiety at the delay and uncertainty in the Earl's business.—Trusts that he will succeed; but if he falls, it is glorious to fall in a good cause.—Warns him to be cautious with his tongue.—Has incurred the King's displeasure for a sermon he preached, and is forbidden the Court.—Sends him an account of the defeat of the Crusaders.
CXLIV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	276
Regrets that he cannot speak personally with the Earl and Countess.—A letter will not express what he wishes to tell them; and he forbears to write lest he should be betrayed.—Thanks him for his news from the Holy Land.
CXLV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	278
Of the battle of Mansourah;—his great grief on that occasion.
CXLVI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	280
Of the true motives and ends of victory.—The King, the archbishop, and the nobility better inclined to the Earl.—As Gregory de Bosell must supply his place with the archbishop, whilst Ad. de Marisco pursues his lectures in Oxford, the former cannot visit the Earl at present.
CXLVII. TO PETER OF SAVOY - - - - -	282
Regrets to hear that the Earl of Cornwall had advised a long delay in a matter of such urgency.—Advice as to his conduct.
CXLVIII. TO GEOFFREY, LORD DE SPENCER - - - - -	284
Recommends Peter de Stanford.
CXLIX. TO JOHN DE LEXINTON, THE KING'S JUSTICIARY - - - - -	285
In behalf of Thomas de Marisco.
CL. TO WILLIAM, LORD DE BEAUCHAMP - - - - -	286
For S. Druel, a knight in his service.
CLI. TO THE PRIORSS OF GODSTOW - - - - -	286
Requesting her to discharge a debt due to William of Cirencester.—Exhorts her to strictness in ruling her nuns.

	Page.
CLII. To ELINOR, QUEEN OF ENGLAND - - -	288
That he will use his endeavours to obtain licence from the superiors that the persons mentioned by Walter de Bradele may be permitted to leave England.
CLIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	289
Begs her intervention with Robert de Manneby, prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, that William de Hampton may be admitted into that fraternity.
CLIV. To THE SAME - - - - -	290
Expressing his willingness to obey her commands, now a second time conveyed to him.
CLV. To THE SAME - - - - -	291
Regrets that from unavoidable difficulties he cannot attend upon her;—was with the Earl of Cornwall, the first Sunday in Advent, whose displeasure is somewhat mitigated.
CLVI. To SENCHIA, COUNTESS OF CORNWALL - -	292
Thanks her for her kind inquiries.—Is at present with the friars in Oxford.—W. Batale is staying at the convent of Northampton.
CLVII. To ELINOR, COUNTESS OF LEICESTER - -	292
That Gregorius de Bosell, although he has received licence from his superiors to go into Gascony, cannot attend her at present, being engaged with the archbishop.—Wishes to hear from her of the state of the Earl.
CLVIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	293
Congratulating her on the birth of her child.
CLIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	294
That a wife is bound to render assistance to the husband;—that an angry woman grossly neglects her duties.—Warns her against excess of apparel.—Begs pardon for his freedom of speech, as he knows not that he shall live long enough to see her again.
CLX. To THE SAME - - - - -	296
On the difficulty of finding a suitable priest for her service;—thinks that her return to England ought to be managed with the greatest circumspection.

	Page.
CLXI. To ELINOR, COUNTESS OF LEICESTER - - -	297
That she has great reason to rejoice if the Earl has undertaken the difficult task of preserving Gascony for the King.—If from any cause he fails, it is her duty, laying all contention aside, to direct him in the spirit of moderation to more cautious counsels.—John de la Haye will inform her of the state of things in general.
CLXII. To THE SAME - - - - -	299
Has heard indecorous reports of her some time past.—Admonishes her to reform her ways towards her husband, her children, and her household.—He will labour for her interest and her honour.
CLXIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	299
Is grateful for her careful letters.—Notwithstanding the diffidence of his friends, Providence will give victory to the cause of the Earl.
CLXIV. To THE SAME - - - - -	300
Is thankful for her concern about him.—God's goodness to her, a call to gratitude.
CLXV. To LADY IDA DE BEAUCHAMP - - -	301
In behalf of a knight in her service, named S. Druer.
CLXVI. To JOHN OF PARMA, MINISTER GENERAL - -	302
On friendship.—Begs the return of William of Nottingham, who has by unanimous consent been chosen provincial minister.
CLXVII. To THE SAME - - - - -	304
Begs that friar N. may be sent to friar W., who is languishing from a fit of illness.
CLXVIII. To BONAVENTURE, MINISTER GENERAL -	304
Thanks him for the letters he has received.—Sickness weighs heavily upon him, to the destruction of his present life.—Requests, therefore, that the provincial minister, friar John, may return at once into England, by whom he may be guided in every event.
CLXIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	306
Grieved that he cannot visit him—but God's will must be done.—Thanks him for having sent the provincial minister so speedily into England.—Is anxious to call his attention to a letter which he sent Bonaventure shortly after he became general.

| CLXX. To W. OF NOTINGHAM, PROVINCIAL MINISTER -   | 307   |
| Whilst he and Gregory Bosell were starting for Rome in company with the archbishop, partly from the interference of the Queen, partly from papal mandate, and other objections, it was resolved that he should remain at home whilst they proceeded on their journey.—Urges a favor for W. de Madele.—Sends him a letter he had received from Grostete at the court of Rome.  |       |
| CLXXI. To THE SAME - - - - -  | 309   |
| Is of opinion that the Minister ought to comply with the King's wishes, setting all objections aside.—Before he leaves England, he ought to provide for the preaching of the Crusade—and take leave of the King and Queen, recommending his Order to their patronage.   |       |
| CLXXII. To THE SAME - - - - -   | 310   |
| The Queen has sent the writer a very earnest and affectionate letter, requesting his presence.—The Countess of Leicester and a nobleman have also preferred the same request.—He will find it very troublesome to comply.—Wishes the Minister's advice. Commends his zeal in reforming the Order.   |       |
| CLXXIII. To THE SAME - - - - -  | 312   |
| Expresses his deep regret that whilst Grostete was proceeding on his journey to Rome he (the writer) was detained in England by the importunities of the King, Queen, and the Archbishop.—The business of the last has caused him great annoyance, from which he sees no escape, unless the Minister obtain for him an injunction from the Pope.—Robert de Thornham has devoted himself to a mission to the Saracens.—Bespeaks his favour for Peter, the Minister of Cologne. |       |
| CLXXIV. To THE SAME - - - - -   | 314   |
| In commendation of A. de Hereford, whom he desires shall continue at his studies ;—that Lawrence de Sutton may act as secretary in his place.   |       |
| CLXXV. To THE SAME - - - - -  | 316   |
| Requesting that a friar named N. Anilyeres may follow his studies for a year or so at Oxford, Cambridge, or London.   |       |

CLXXVI. To W. OF NOTINGHAM - - -	317
For a friar named John of Beverley.
CLXXVII. To THE SAME - - -	318
Begs to be excused, on the score of ill health, trouble of mind, and the urgency of employment from meeting him at Bedford.—Peter of Tewksbury knows his sentiments, and is altogether as competent to give advice.
CLXXVIII. To THE SAME - - -	319
Eustace de Normanville has declined accepting an invitation to become reader to the friars of Norwich.—Encloses papers relating to the province of Ireland and the mission there of Andrew de Lexinton.—Desires his consideration for A. de Bechesoueres and R. de Waltham;—wishes the former, who is skilful in physic, to be sent to Oxford.—Asks him to recommend P. of London to the friars there.
CLXXIX. To ROBERT DE THORNHAM - - -	321
That Eustace de Normanville cannot comply with the request made to him.
CLXXX. To WILLIAM OF NOTINGHAM, PROVINCIAL MINISTER - - -	322
Of the mystical interpretation of numbers in the Old Testament.—The dispute has been arranged between the archbishop and the chapter of Lincoln;—intends, at the earnest request of his grace, to spend Christmas with him in Kent.
CLXXXI. To THE SAME - - -	326
In reply to his letter stating that he had refused to stay at Bugden, notwithstanding the entreaties of the bishop, the desire of the brethren, but had hastened off to Cambridge in the horrors of a winter season.
CLXXXII. To THE SAME - - -	327
Giving an account of his proceedings with the archbishop during his late visitation.—Had returned to Bugden, August 1st, leaving two other friars to supply his place: one of whom the archbishop wishes to detain with him during the rest of his visitation until Michaelmas day.—The writer thinks that the archbishop's wish should be complied with, considering his zeal in reforming the church.

	Page.
CLXXXIII. TO W. OF NOTINGHAM - - - - -	329
In behalf of the bearer, who wishes admission into the Order.
CLXXXIV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	330
Richard of Cornwall will proceed to London to have his advice on the mandate received by him from the Minister General.—A certain brother wishes to make a confession touching certain proceedings in which the Countess of Oxford is concerned.
CLXXXV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	332
Seconding a request from the Queen of England that friar W. de Batale may attend her Majesty for the good of her soul.
CLXXXVI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	333
Bespeaks his indulgence for friar R. dictus Monachus, now returning to him.—At the receipt of his last letter did not know where he and other friars were to be found.
CLXXXVII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	334
In behalf of a sick brother, John de Dington.
CLXXXVIII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	334
States the arguments which he had used to the archbishop for declining to render that constant assistance which his grace required of him.—The archbishop had induced the Queen to interfere that he might obtain his wish.—The Earl of Leicester, by letter, and the Countess personally, had solicited Adam to go to Boulogne to confer with the former. The dispute is settled between the archbishop of Canterbury and the bishop of Winchester.—Proceedings at Oxford on the occasion of Thomas of York becoming Regent in Divinity.—Regrets not having received permission to leave England.—Has written to the archbishop and the Countess of Leicester.
CLXXXIX. TO THE SAME - - - - -	340
In behalf of Hugh Cote, a penitent thief.

	Page.
CXC. To W. OF NOTINGHAM - - - - -	342
Received his last at London.—Had since returned to Oxford, much interrupted by papal appointments to try cases and by applications from the Queen and the archbishop;—requests aid for Robert de Thornham.—Is not sure that he will be able to resume his lectures before Christmas.
CXCI. To JOHN [STAMFORD?] - - - - -	343
The archbishop has overwhelmed him with regret by insisting on his attendance at an assembly of prelates to be held in January, for appeasing the dissensions of the kingdom.—Had earnestly besought his aid in his forthcoming visitation.—Asks his advice what he ought to do;—fears, that if he complies, there will be an end of all quiet study for the future.
CXCII. To W. OF NOTINGHAM, PROVINCIAL MINISTER - - - - -	346
A full account of the the discussions in the University of Oxford, on occasion of Thomas of York becoming Regent in Theology.—Requests that Thomas Bachun of Notingham may be appointed secretary to Richard of Cornwall.
CXCIII. To THE SAME - - - - -	350
For Thomas de Wyke, a priest, who desires to become a Minorite.
CXCIV. To THE SAME - - - - -	351
For Hugh Cote.
CXCV. To THE SAME - - - - -	351
For a friar, Robert de Kouele, who had apostatized.
CXCVI. To J., WARDEN OF WORCESTER - - - - -	352
For Hugh Cote.
CXCVII. To W. OF NOTINGHAM, PROVINCIAL MINISTER - - - - -	353
That Walter de Madele had not procured from the Minister General any authority to be sent from England to another province.—He is willing to enter on the task of interpreting the Scriptures or any other the Minister

requires him.—Adam thinks that it will be best that other friars be sent to Paris, as the Minister General demands, and Weston and Madele remain in England.—Begs that the latter may have proper helps, as other readers have.
CXCVIII. TO W. OF NOTINGHAM - - - - -	355
Gives his advice on the election of ministers and vicars for the Order.—Suggests that Thomas of York, for his many excellent qualities, may be appointed reader at Oxford;—that the friars to whom Hugo Leukenor has been appointed reader, should provide for him.—Requests that Thomas of Maydestan, a sick brother, may stay at Oxford; that J. of Stanford may visit a friar who is enjoined a heavy penance and impart to him some consolation.
CXCIX. TO THE SAME - - - - -	358
Begs a favourable hearing for Richard of Cornwall.—Sends him a MS. of Richard St. Victor De Trinitate , to be corrected at Paris;—begs to have it sent back as soon as collated.
CC. TO THE SAME - - - - -	359
Begs that the Bible belonging to the late P. of Worcester may be given to another friar, Thomas Dokkyng; he has friends who will more than pay for the value of the book. Refers to the wishes and destinations of several friars.
CCI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	361
Requesting mercy for A. de Brangford, an apostate friar.
CCII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	361
Deplores the relaxation of discipline and the secular employments of the Order.
CCIII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	363
Requesting his consideration for Hugo de Lyndun, and that G. de S. Edmund may be restored to the convent at Oxford.
CCIV. TO THE SAME - - - - -	364
On the same subject.

	Page.
CCV. TO W. OF NOTINGHAM - - - - -	365
Earnestly hoping that Richard of Cornwall may be prevailed on to stay in England; but if his determination be inexorable, that the Minister will provide that he is furnished with MSS. and all things necessary for his departure.
CCVI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	366
Sends a letter he has received from the Minister General;—protests that obedience to its demands would be worse than exile to one of such little strength, weakness of sight, advanced age, and perilous health, as himself.—Thinks that he can write his advice upon the articles in question, if that be required, quite as effectually as give it in person.
CCVII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	368
In great pain and helplessness.—Wishes for a dispensation as to standing or riding for Gregory de Bosell, who is at present residing with the archbishop.
CCVIII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	369
That Andrew of Lexinton may stay in Ireland and hold a provincial chapter there.
CCIX. TO THE SAME - - - - -	371
Requesting that H. de Syreford, a friar, may be allowed to assist the bishop of Salisbury at the earnest entreaty of the latter.
CCX. TO THE SAME - - - - -	373
Congratulating him on his unanimous election as Provincial Minister, and earnestly entreating him to accept the proffered honour.—Has received his letter from Lyons.
CCXI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	374
Requesting his merciful consideration for the bearer, an apostate friar.
CCXII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	375
Excusing himself for not writing more frequently.

CCXIII. To W. OF NOTINGHAM - - - -	376

That the bishop of Lincoln entered Lyons during Epiphany in excellent health and was honourably received by the Pope and the Cardinals.—The Pope has promised him favour, but the event is uncertain. — A general council will be held on the 24th of June, at which the bishop intends to be present.—There is some talk of sending a mission of the friars minor to the Holy Land and to Tartary;—certain English friars are named for that purpose.—Adam, the writer, and friar John have been well received.—Expect that the friars will be hardly treated by the bishops at the forthcoming council;—they are not in favour at Court.—Conjectures that certain friars will be invited to attend.—Begs him to send the Moralia of St. Gregory, Rabanus Maurus, and the First Prophecies [of Ab. Joachim?].—Desires his remembrance to certain friars at home.

CCXIV. To [GREGORY DE NEAPOLI], PROVINCIAL MINISTER OF FRANCE - - - -	378
---	-----

Requests that N. de Anivers, a young friar, may be permitted to stay in England to study theology;—there are not the same aids for study elsewhere as in England.

CCXV. To G., PROVINCIAL MINISTER OF FRANCE - -	380
--	-----

Requesting a longer stay for the same friar in England.

---	-----

Requests his good offices with Blanche, Queen of France, to promote a reconciliation between the Earl of Thoulouse and the Earl of Leicester;—the Queen had promised the writer her efforts in this behalf;—but he felt reluctant to press himself on her Majesty's attention.

	Page.
CCXVI. b. AN IMPERFECT REPORT OF A SPEECH, APPARENTLY DELIVERED BEFORE THE POPE AND THE CARDINALS - - - - -	382
[Is this a report by Adam de Marisco of a speech delivered by Grostete, in the council at Lyons, against "Apostolical Provisions," as they were termed?]
CCXVII. TO JOHN, THE PAPAL NUNCIO - - - - -	385
In behalf of Henry de Bathonia.
CCXVIII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	385
Requesting his aid and direction for the proctor of the abbot and convent of Oseney going to Rome.
CCXIX. TO THE SAME - - - - -	386
Is prevented from visiting him; — begs him to be at the bishop of Lincoln's on the 15th August, to deliberate on business of importance, where the writer will meet him.
CCXX. TO FRIAR JOHN DE STANFORD, WARDEN OF OXFORD - - - - -	387
On the day he had received his letters, an order had reached him from the minister, commanding his attendance at Reading, thence to London, if need be, on urgent business affecting the nation.—The order had been sent at the desire of their Majesties.—Begs he will hasten [to Oxford?]
CCXXI. TO THE SAME - - - - -	388
That Ralph de Multon, a poor scholar, may be allowed to visit friar A. de Bechesoueres for the completion of his cure. Has spoken to the bishop of Norwich, just returned from his pilgrimage. Begs him to hasten his return.
CCXXII. TO THE SAME - - - - -	389
Proposes to follow his advice and retire to Reading for the benefit of quiet.—Will stay there so long as he finds it of service.
CCXXIII. TO FRIAR R., WARDEN OF CAMBRIDGE - - - - -	390
Thanks him for his consideration for the students of Oxford and himself.—Begs that he will let them have, as soon after Easter as is convenient, a quantity of vellum, so far as he can oblige them without troubling his friars.—Commends to their special devotion the soul of J. de Bannebyria, dear to him from a child.

	Page.
CCXXIV. To FRIAR J., WARDEN OF HEREFORD - -	391
Will excuse his presence among them, delighted as they would otherwise be, considering his many engagements.—They frequently hear of the learning, devotion, and ministerial success of Walter de Raveningham.
CCXXV. To FRIAR THOMAS OF YORK - - -	392
Expostulates with him in jest for not keeping a promise so often made of sending the writer a picture of the Trinity (tabula Trinitatis).—Friar John, the Papal Nuncio, has just procured for them a new privilege from the Holy See.
CCXXVI. To THE SAME - - - - -	393
A most pressing request to him to befriend William, a priest, the bearer of this letter, against the cruelty of the satellites of satan.—Had been presented to the Queen for a living, and on her presentation received institution from the Bishop of Ely;—reminds him of his successful efforts on previous occasions.—The King is furious at the late presentation;—the Queen and the Countess of Leicester have employed all efforts, in vain, to pacify him.—The cause of the Earl, notwithstanding his numerous perils, is likely to prosper.
CCXXVII. To THE SAME - - - - -	394
Commends him for resisting improper presentations.—Earnestly hopes the Earl of Leicester will succeed.—Expects to meet him at Easter.—Urges upon him the necessity of giving good advice to the earl.—Friar Lawrence sends him the book he had asked for.
CCXXVIII. To FRIAR WILLIAM BELLUN - -	396
For Thomas, the bearer.
CCXXIX. To THE SAME - - - - -	396
For Edmund, the bearer.
CCXXX. To THE SAME - - - - -	397
For R. de Hukelby.
CCXXXI. To THE SAME - - - - -	397
For Thomas of Cornwall, fallen into great distress.

	Page.
CCXXXII. TO FRIAR WILLIAM BELLUN - - -	398
For Juliana, a widow, oppressed by her enemies.
CCXXXIII. TO THE SAME - - - -	399
For Thomas de Marisco.
CCXXXIV. TO THE SAME - - - -	399
For W. de Radenore, rector of Christ Church, Clapham.
CCXXXV. TO THE SAME - - - -	400
Expressing his thanks to the Queen for her inex- haustible liberality;—thanks him for making his apology with the Earl of Cornwall.—Should be happy to visit the Earl if any opportunity offered, which is not at present probable, seeing that very important events are likely to take place and make a great change in the Earl's condition.
CCXXXVI. TO THE SAME - - - -	401
The Bishop of Anio, elect of St. Asaph, has business at court; asks his assistance for the bishop.
CCXXXVII. TO THE SAME - - - -	402
Cannot visit his majesty at the present time from ill-health and badness of the weather, and various vexations.—Begs him to make his excuse.
CCXXXVIII. TO FRIAR R., SURNAMED THE MONK -	402
Asking him to introduce to Robert de S. Agatha, or some other person, in the service of the Bishop of Lincoln, a clergyman impoverished and atrociously injured, that he may be re- ceived with favour in the court of the bishop.
CCXXXIX. TO THE SAME - - - -	403
For the prioress and nunnery of Belton;—that the Bishop of Lincoln's negligence in this matter is fostered by designing persons.
CCXL. TO FRIAR ADAM DE BECHESOUERES - -	404
In behalf of Roger de Kyrkeby, who requires medical aid.
CCXLI. TO THE SAME - - - -	405
For the celebrated Walter de Merton, who wishes to consult him.

	Page.
CCXLII. TO A. DE LEXINTON, VICAR OF THE ENGLISH MINISTER - - - - -	405
Expressive of his friendship. Refers to the affairs of the friars at Scarborough. (See Appendix p. 642.) Thinks he had better not come to Reading, as the writer's stay there is uncer- tain—will see him at the ensuing chapter.
CCXLIII. TO FRIAR GREGORY - - - - -	406
Recommending two persons, not named, to the Church of Kemesyng.
CCXLIV.a. TO WARINUS DE HASWELL - - - - -	407
Requesting a copy of his sermon on the Nativity of the Virgin.
CCXLIV.b. AGAINST THE SECULAR OCCUPATION OF THE FRIARS - - - - -	408
CCXLV. TO FRIARS N. AND N. - - - - -	411
Thanks for their consolatory letter;—assents to their remark that he ought not to distrust God; “but will that wipe away all tears from the eyes of those who mourn over the abominations of Jerusalem?” Deprecates the scandals pro- pagated against him by the malicious.
CCXLVI.a. To ——— - - - - -	413
Will attend to his recommendation; would have been glad of a personal conference, which is rendered impossible by distance.
CCXLVI.b. AN ADDRESS TO THE POPE ON HENRY III. ASSUMING THE CROSS - - - - -	414
[This was apparently composed in 1250, at the instance of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and for his use.]
CCXLVII. TO SEWALUS, ARCHBISHOP OF YORK - - - - -	438
On his advancement to the See of York.

IN dulcedine Domini et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Dedicatio.
Christi prædilecto patri suo, Fratri Simoni de Esseby, suus frater Thomas consolationem Spiritus Sancti.

Omnis justus vitam suam judicare debet, per exempla meliorum, quia plerumque plus exempla quam rationis verba compungunt. Ut habeatis de propriis unde charissimos filios vestros confortetis; ut ipsi etiam qui tot et tanta et insuper semetipsos pro consequendo statu et ordine nostro reliquerunt, cum aliorum ordinum mirabilia legerint et audierint, habeant unde in propria vocatione non minus ædificentur, et ei qui se vocavit, dulci Jesu, inexhaustas gratias agant; quare, perdilecte pater in dulci Jesu, consecro vobis collationes, quas a charissimis nutritiis et coalumnis meis per xxv. annos consecutum fuisse me gaudeo, ad honorem ejus, in quo sibi Deus Pater complacuit, Christi dulcissimi Dei et Domini nostri.

MINORUM IN ANGLIAM.

COLLATIO I.

De Primo Adventu Fratrum Minorum.

Anno Domini MCCXXIV., tempore domini Honorii A.D. 1224. papæ, scilicet eodem anno quo confirmata est ab eo Arrival of regula beati Francisci, anno domini regis Henrici, filii the Mino-Johannis, octavo, feria tertia post festum natiuitatis rite Friars
plicuerunt primo Fratres Minores in Angliam apud Dovoriam; quatuor scilicet clerici et quinque laici.
Clerici fuerunt isti: primus Frater Angnellus Pisanus, ordine diaconus, ætate circiter trecenarius, qui a beato Francisco in proximo capitulo generali destinatus erat provincialis minister in Angliam; fuerat siquidem custos Parisiensis, et ita prudenter se gesserat, ut tam fratribus quam secularibus famosæ sanctitatis me-rito plurimum complaceret. Secundus fuit Frater Ri-
prædicator, et ætate provector, qui primus extitit qui citra montes populo prædicavit; et ordine et processu temporis sub bonæ memoriæ Fratris Johanne Parent missus est minister provincialis in Hiberniam; fuerat enim vicarius Fratris Angnelli in Anglia, dum ille ad capitulum generale proficisceretur, in quo facta est translatio reliquiarum Sancti Francisci, et eximiæ sanc-titatis exempla præclara præbuerat. Completo igitur

fideli et Deo accepto ministerio, absolutus in capitulo generali a bonæ memoriæ Fratре Alberto ab omni fratrum officio, zelo fidei succensus, profectus est in Syriam, et ibidem felici fine requievit. Tertius erat Frater Richardus Devoniensis similiter Anglicanus, ordine acolitus, ætate juvenis, qui longanimitatis et obedientiæ plurima nobis exempla reliquit. Nam post diversas provincias per obedientiam peragratas, per annos xv. febribus tum quartanis frequentius fatigatus, apud locum Romehale continue morabatur. Quartus erat Frater Willielmus de Esseby, in caparone probationis adhuc novitius, natione similiter Anglicanus, ætate juvenis. Iste in diversis officiis, diutius subministrante spiritu Jesu Christi, laudabiliter durans, humilitatis et paupertatis, caritatis et mansuetudinis, obedientiæ et patientiæ, et omnis perfectionis exempla nobis reliquit. Quum autem quæreret ab eo Frater Gregorius minister Franciæ "si vellet ire in Angliam?" respondit "se nescire si vellet." Quum miraretur minister de responso, tandem dixit Frater Willielmus: "Ideirco se nescire quid vellet, quia voluntas sua non erat sua sed ministri; unde voluit quicquid minister voluit ipsum velle." Huic testimonium præbuit Frater W. de Notingham, quod erat obedientissimus; quum enim daret ei optionem eligendi sibi locum ad manendum, dixit quod "locus ille sibi summe placuit quem sibi placeret sibi assignare." Et quia blandimentis præcipue præditus erat gratisimæ lenitatis, plurimorum secularium in ordinem provocavit affectum. Insuper plures idoneas personas diversæ dignitatis, ætatis, et ordinis, ad viam salutis induxit; et in multis demonstravit ad oculum, quod novit dulcis Jesu mirabiles res facere, et de locustis vincere gigantes.<sup>1</sup>

Ceruse,<sup>1</sup> natione Lombardus, qui pro merito sanctitatis A.D. 1224. et discretionis præcipuæ postea factus est gardianus Londoniæ, qui et completo laboris sui cursu in Anglia, multiplicato jam fratrum numero, in patriam suam rediit. Secundus erat Frater Laurentius, de Belvaco oriundus, qui laboravit in principio, in opere inexhausto, secundum decretum regulæ; et post ad beatum Franciscum regressus, ipsum videre frequenter et ejus colloquiis consolari meruit; tunicam denique suam sibi pater sanctus liberalissime contulit, et benedictione dulcissima lætificatum in Angliam remisit. Qui post multos labores, per merita patris ejusdem, ut æstimo, ad portum quietis Londoniam applicuit, ubi nunc desperabili languore detentus finem tam diutinæ fatigationis expectat. Tertius fuit Frater W. de Florentia, qui post receptionem fratrum cito in Franciam rediit. Quartus fuit Melioratus. Quintus, Frater Jacobus Ultra-Montanus, in caparone probationis adhuc novitius.

Isti novem per monachos de Feskamp caritative in Angliam transvecti, et cordialiter in necessitatibus exhibiti, cum venissent Cantuariam, apud prioratum Sanctæ Trinitatis manserunt per binos dies; et statim quatuor profecti sunt Londoniam, scilicet Frater Ricardus de Ingewrth, et Frater Ricardus Devoniensis, et Frater Henricus, et Frater Melioratus. Quinque vero alii diverterunt ad Hospitale Sacerdotum, ubi manserunt quousque providissent sibi locum. Cito enim post concessa fuit eis camera parvula infra domum scholarem, ubi de die in diem sedebant quasi clausi continue. Sed cum scholares in vespera domum rediissent, intraverunt domum in qua sedebant, et ibi faciebant sibi ignem, et sederunt juxta eum, et ollulam nonnunquam cum fæcibus cerevisiæ, cum collationem

Simile quoque accidit frequenter apud Sarum, ubi cum tanta jocunditate et lætitia biberunt fratres fæces circa ignem in coquina, collationis hora, ut felicem se reputaret qui posset eas ab alio amicabiliter rapere.

Id ipsum apud Slopisbyriam, in primo adventu fratrum Slopisbyriam, Frater Martinus senex, qui et cepit locum, se fecisse gratulatus est. In diebus illis tam districtè cavebant fratres contractionem debitorum, quod vix pro extremis necessitatibus debitum contrahere permittebant. Unde accidit ut Frater Angnellus, cum Fratre Salamone, gardiano Londoniæ, vellet audire comptum fratrum Londoniæ, quantum sc. expendissent infra unum terminum anni, cumque audisset quod tam sumptuose processisset vel satis parca fratrum exhibitio, projecit omnes talias et rotulos, et percutiens seipsum in faciem, exclamavit, "Ay me captum!" et nunquam postea voluit audire comptum. Contigit quoque ut supervenirent duo fratres ad quendam locum fratrum valde vexati; et cum non esset cerevisia in domo, consilio seniorum accepto, gardianus fecit accipi mutuo unam lagenam cerevisiæ; ita tamen quod fratres conventuales qui cum hospitibus erant, inde non biberent, sed simularent se bibere, propter caritatem. Usque ad tempus formationis ordinis consueverunt fratres facere collationem omni die, et bibere qui vellent in communi, et ordine tenere capitulum, nec fuerunt aretati in recipiendis diversis ferculis vel vino, nec tamen admittebant oblatas pitancias nisi per

Quatuor igitur fratres, quos supra nominavi, cum venissent Londoniam, diverterunt ad Fratres Prædicatores, et ab eis benigne suscepti sunt, et apud eos manserunt diebus quindecim, comedentes et bibentes quæ apponebant eis, sicut familiarissimi. Postea con-duxerunt sibi domum in vico Cornhulle, et constitue-runt sibi cellas in ea, construentes herbas inter cellarum interstitia. Perduraverunt quoque in prima simplici-tate usque ad æstatem sequentem sine cantaria, quia nondum privilegium habebant erigendi altaria et cele-brandi in locis suis divina. Et statim ante festum Omnium Sanctorum, et antequam Frater Angnellus venisset Londoniam, profecti sunt Frater Ricardus de Ingewrth et Frater Ricardus Devoniensis Oxoniam, et ibi similiter a Fratribus Prædicatoribus familiarissime suscepti sunt; comederunt in suo refectorio, et jacuerunt in suo dormitorio, sicut conventuales, per dies octo. Postea conduxerunt sibi domum in parochia
 S. Ebbæ, et ibi manserunt sine cantuaria usque ad æstatem sequentem. Ibi seminavit dulcis Jesus gra-

Postea conduxerunt sibi domum in parochia Sancti Egidii, ubi fuit gardianus primus, Frater Petrus Hispanus, qui lorica ferream portavit ad carnem, et alia plurima perfectionis exempla monstravit. Primus gardianus Oxoniæ fuit Frater W. de Esseby, adhuc novitius; commodatus tunc erat ei habitus professionis. Primus gardianus Cantabrigiæ fuit Frater Thomas de Hispania. Primus gardianus Lincolnæ fuit Frater Henricus Misericorde laicus. Dominus Johannes Travers primo recepit fratres apud Cornhulle, et locavit eis domum, et factus [est] gardianus laicus quidam Lombardus, qui tunc primo de nocte didicit literas in ecclesia beati Petri de Cornhulle, et postea factus vicarius Angliæ, dum Frater Angnellus proficisceretur ad capitulum generale. In vicaria tamen habuit socium Fratrem Ricardum de Ingewrth; ad ultimum vero felicitatem tantam non ferens, sed effeminatus potius honoribus, et a seipso alienatus, ab ordine miserabiliter apostatavit. Dignum memoria quod secundo anno administrationis Fratris Petri, quinti ministri Angliæ, anno scilicet ab adventu fratrum in Angliam xxxii<sup>o</sup>, numerati sunt viventes fratres, in provincia Angliæ, in xlix. locis, MCCXLII.

COLLATIO III.

De Receptione Novitiorum. Frater Salamon.

The novices.

Igitur cum se divisissent fratres qui primo venerant in Angliam, et ad diversa loca profecti fuissent, venerunt quidam, quos Spiritus Jesu in hoc ipsum adduxit, petentes ordinem. Quorum primus qui recipetur fuit bonæ indolis adolescens, et elegantia corporis admodum clarus, Frater Salamon; qui mihi referre solitus erat, quod cum adhuc esset novitius factus est procurator, venitque ad domum sororis suæ ut eleemosynam peteret. Ipsa vero portans ei panem A.D. 1225.

 avertit vultum dicens, "Maledicta sit hora qua te un- Fr. Soloquam vidi;" et ipse quidem cum gaudio recepit pan- mon.
 nem et recessit. Tam stricte vero tenuit præfixam sibi formam parcissimæ paupertatis, ut cum nonnun-quam propter fratrem quendam infirmum in caparone suo portaret farinam et sal, seu ficos pauculos, et ligna ad ignem sub axilla sua, diligentissime cavit, ne extra metas exquisitissimæ necessitatis aliquid reciperet vel retineret. Unde contigit aliquando ut tantum frigus pateretur, quod illico se moriturum crederet;
 non habentibus autem fratribus unde ipsum calefacere possent, pium sibi suffugium sancta caritas monstravit.
 Convenerunt siquidem omnes fratres circa ipsum [et] suis sinibus, sicut porcis mos est, eum comprimendo foverunt. Quum autem ad ordinem acolitatus promo-veri deberet, missus est ad venerabilem patrem sanctæ memoriæ archiepiscopum Stephanum, et sibi a fratre quodam seniore præsentatus; qui gratissime suscepit eum, et sub hoc titulo ad ordinem promovit: "Apos-tolatum accedat Frater Salamon de ordine aposto-lorum." Hoc ideo dixerim, ut innotescat quantæ re-verentiæ fuerit apud sapientes fratrum primordialis spiritualitas. Quum autem comedissent in mensa archi-episcopi, reversi sunt fratres Cantuariam nudipedes, in nive quæ profunda nimis extitit et intuentibus exhorrenda. Postea accepit gravitatem in uno pede, unde languit Londoniæ per duos annos, ita quod vix unquam nisi portatus [se] movere potuit. In hac infirmitate visitari meruit a sanctæ memoriæ Fratre Jordano, magistro totius ordinis Prædicatorum, qui dixit ei,
 "Frater, non verecunderis, si Pater Domini nostri
 " Jesu Christi traxerit te ad ipsum per pedem." Igitur postquam tam diu jacuerat in cellario, ubi missarum solempnia non audierat, fratres enim non celebrabant in loco, sed ibant ad audiendum divina et ad celebrandum ad ecclesiam parochialem, factus est morbus ita desperatus, ut iudicio chirurgorum pedem

A.D. 1225. oporteret præcidi; et cum allata esset securis, et pes discoopertus esset, exivit sanies quædam quæ spem aliquam permittebat; unde dilatum est illa vice durum id iudicium. Interim concepit certam spem, quod si ad sanctum aliquem duceretur, pedem utique recuperaret et salutem. Ergo cum Frater Angnellus advenisset, mandavit absque dilatione, quocumque modo commodius fieri posset, ad sanctum aliquem in partes transmarinas duceretur. Quod factum est; nec fefellit eum fides sua; quin potius postea in tantum convaluit, ut absque baculo incederet, et missas ipse celebraret, et gardianus Londoniæ et generalis confessor totius civitatis existeret. Veruntamen, quia dulcissimo Jesu diutius supplicaverat, ut eum in præsentem a peccatis suis purgaret, misit ei gravitatem quæ fregit spinam dorsi sui, ita ut gibbosus et curvus fieret; misit ei hydropisim calidam et sanguineum fluxum hæmorrhoidum, usque ad obitum suum. Postremo vero, pridie quam pergeret ad Ipsum, immisit ei dulcis Jesus tantum dolorem cordis, cujus tamen doloris causam penitus ignoravit, quod omnes præcedentes passionem in respectu illius agonie nihili aestimavit. Vocatis igitur tribus fratribus qui sibi specialiores erant, indicavit eis agoniam animi sui, et intente supplicavit quatenus pro statu suo instanter orarent. Ipsis ergo in oratione unanimiter perseverantibus, apparuit ei dulcissimus Jesus Christus cum beato Petro Apostolo coram lecto suo stans, et aspiciens in eum, ipse vero statim cognito Salvatore clamavit, "Miserere mei, Domine, miserere mei." Et respondit Dominus Jesus ei: "Quia semper me rogasti ut in præsentem te affligerem et purgarem, nisi tibi dolorem præsentem, et præcipue quia caritatem tuam primam reliquisti, et non fecisti, ut decuit vocationem tuam, dignos fructus pœnitentiæ, et quia pepercisti nimis divitibus in injungendo sibi pœnitentiam." Et addidit beatus Petrus, "Insuper scias te graviter peccasse in iudicando fratrem Johannem de Cycestria, qui nuper obiit. Et nunc “ roga Dominum ut det tibi talem finem, qualem ipse A.D. 1225.

 “ habuit.” Et clamans Frater Salamon dixit, “ Mises-“ rere mei, dulcissime Domine, miserere mei dulcis “ Jesu:” qui subridendo respexit in eum ita placido vultu quod tota præcedens angustia statim evanuit, et ipse speciali gaudio repletus certissimam spem suæ salutis concepit; et confestim vocatis fratribus denunciavit quæ viderat; unde non modice consolati fuerunt.

Dignum memoria, quod cum essent fratres in loco de Cornhulle, venit Diabolus visibiliter et dixit Fratri Gilberto de Vyz, cum sederet solus, “ Credis evasisse me? Ecce hoc habebis adhuc:” et projecit super eum plenum pugillum suum pedicorum,<sup>1</sup> et evanuit.

Secundus frater, qui receptus est a Fratre Angnello, William of London.
 fuit Frater Willelmus de Londonia, qui fuerat aliquando mutus, sed apud Berginge, meritis Sanctæ Etelburgæ, sicut mihi retulit, loquelam recuperavit. Hic etiam, cum esset familiaris domini justiciarii de Anglia, Hu-
 existeret, et in arte scissoria famosus, prius quam fratres aream vel cantariam haberent, Londoniæ indutus est.

Tertius erat optimæ indolis, pius, nobilis, et delica- Jocius of Cornhill.
 tus, de ipsa civitate Londoniæ oriundus, Frater Jocius de Cornhulle, clericus; qui post multos labores, quos ibi sustinuerat, profectus est in Hispaniam moraturus, et ibidem feliciter obiit.

Quartus fuit Frater Johames, clericus, quasi octo- John, a Clerk.
 decim annorum adolescens, bonæ indolis et optimæ conversationis, qui citius completo cursu vitæ præsentis, migravit ad Dominum Jesum Christum. Ipse domino Philippo sacerdoti, cum doleret dentes suos, suavi modo suasit, ut mitteret panem et cerevisiam Fratribus Minoribus, et promisit quod Dominus Jesus curaret eum. Et sic factum est; unde ambo cito postea dederunt seipsos et intraverunt ordinem.

A.D. 1225. Quintus fuit Frater Philippus Londonia oriundus, ordine sacerdos, qui postea gardianus Brugensis factus, et officium prædicationis adeptus, plurimos lucrificavit. Postremo missus est in Hiberniam, et ibidem feliciter migravit ad Dominum.

Walter de Burgo. Post hos autem intraverunt quidam magistri, qui famam fratrum magnificaverunt; Frater scilicet Walterus de Burgo, de quo vidit frater unus mirabilem visionem; quod scilicet Dominus Jesus descendens de cælo porrexit ei rotulum, in quo scriptum erat, "Tempus tui tritici non est hic, sed alibi." Huic revelavit [fraudem]<sup>1</sup> cujusdam mulieris religiosæ, quæ per visiones fictas delusit quendam fratrem discretum ita quod eas scriberet. Frater vero Anagnellus non credens injunxit conventui ut orarent quatenus Deus revelaret ei rem quandam pro qua fuit sollicitus. Et ecce nocte illa visum fuit Fratri Waltero quod vidit cervam quandam ascendere velociter ad cacumen cujusdam montis excelsi, et duo canes magni consecuti sunt eam, et converterunt eam usque in vallem, et ibi strangulaverunt eam; accurrens autem Frater Walterus, ubi cervam invenire se credidit, non invenit nisi sacculum plenum sanguine. Cum igitur visionem hanc narrasset Fratri Anagnello, concepit quod per hypocrisim seducta fuisset, et misit ad eam duos discretos fratres, qui tandem confessam quod finxisset quæ dixerat, veritati reconciliaverunt.

Ric. Norman. Intravit et alius magister, scilicet Frater Ricardus Normannus, qui cum verbum ædificationis a dicto Waltero quæreret,<sup>2</sup> post diuturnam deliberationem respondit, "Qui vult esse in pace, sileat." "Ky vot estre en pes, tenge sey en pes."

Vincent of Coventry. Intravit tunc temporis magister Vincentius de Coventre, qui non multum post germanum suum, magistrum Henricum, ad intrandum ordinem, co-operante

gratia Jesu Christi, diligenter induxit. Intraverunt A.D. 1225. vero in die conversionis Sancti Pauli, cum sanctæ memoriæ magistro Ada de Oxonia,<sup>1</sup> et domino Willelmo de Eboraco solempni baculario. Hic vero magister Adam of Oxford. Ada de Oxonia, toto famosus orbe, voverat ut quicquid peteretur ab eo, pro amore Beatæ Mariæ, faceret; et hoc ipsum cuidam inclusæ, sibi familiari, retulit. Ipsa vero amicis suis, scilicet monacho cuidam de Redinges, et alii de ordine Cisterciensi, et fratri cuidam Prædicatori revelavit secretum suum, dicens, quod talem virum taliter lucrari possent, nolens scilicet quod frater minor fieret. Sed Beata Virgo non permisit, licet presentem eum aliquis haberet, ut pro amore suo id peteret; sed usque ad aliud tempus deferret. Visum enim fuit ei nocte, quod debuit transire pontem quendam ubi fuerunt homines in aquam tendentes retia ad capiendum eum; ipse vero hoc cum magna difficultate evasit, et venit ad locum placidissimum. Igitur cum divino nutu cæteros evasisset, venit casualiter videre Fratres Minores, cumque loqueretur Frater Willelmus de Colvile senior, vir eximiæ sanctitatis, inter cetera dixit, “Magister charissime pro amore Adam de Marsh. Matris Dei intra ordinem nostrum, et releva simplicitatem nostram.” Qui statim, quasi ex ore Matris Dei verbum ipsum audisset, concessit. Fuit autem tunc socius Magistri Adæ de Marisco et ad robas suas, quem non multo post, per Dei gratiam, ad intrandum ordinem sagaciter induxit. Videbatur autem quadam nocte Fratri Adæ de Marisco, quod venerunt simul ad quoddam castellum, et ultra portas fuit depicta Dominica crux, et quicumque vellet ingredi, oporteret eum osculari crucem. Ingressus est ergo primus, osculata cruce, Frater Ada de Oxonia; et alter Frater Ada statim, eadem osculata, secutus est. Sed prior, inventa mox coclea, tam velociter ascendit, ut ab aspectu sequentis citius raperetur; sequens vero clamavit, “In-

Et quidem visio hæc omnibus qui tunc erant in Anglia fratribus potuit esse manifesta; siquidem Frater Adam post ingressum profectus est ad Papam Gregorium, a quo, secundum quod optaverat, missus est ad prædicandum inter Saracenos; sed apud Barlete, socii sui mortem precedens, obiit, et post, ut dicitur, clarus miraculis effulsit. Intravit autem Ada de Marisco apud Vygorniam, zelo scilicet majoris paupertatis.

John of Reding. Post hos intravit Frater Johannes de Redingia, abbas Osengyæ, qui nobis omnis perfectionis exempla reliquit.

Intraverunt quoque milites nonnulli; scilicet dominus Ricardus Gobion, dominus Egidius de Merc, dominus Thomas Hispanus, dominus Henricus de Walepole; de quorum ingressu dixit dominus Roy, "Si volueritis esse discreti in fratribus recipiendis, si non procuraveritis privilegia ad oppressionem hominum, et præcipue si non fueritis importuni in petendo, poteritis principari principibus."

The charity of Founders and Benefactors: at Canterbury. Post hoc crescente numero fratrum, et eorum sanctitate comperta, crevit et fidelium devotio in eos, unde loca sibi competentia providere curaverunt. Igitur Cantuarie contulit eis aream quandam, et ædificavit capellam satis honestam pro tempore, dominus Alexander, magister Hospitalis Sacerdotum; et quia fratres nihil omnino appropriare sibi voluerunt, facta est communitati civitatis propria, fratribus vero pro civium libitu commodata. Specialissime vero promoverunt eos dominus Symon de Longeton, archidiaconus Cantuarie, et dominus Henricus de Sandwyg, nobilis quoque comitissa, domina Inclusa de Baginton, que sicut mater filios, sic fovit eos in omnibus; principum et prelatorum quoque gratiam incomparabiliter consecuta fuerat, favorem sibi sagacialiter acquirendo. Londoniæ autem hospitatus est fratres dominus Johannes Ywin,<sup>1</sup> A.D. 1225. qui emptam pro fratribus aream communitati civium appropriavit, fratribus autem usufructum ejusdem pro libitu dominorum devotissime designavit; postea vero ipse ut laicus ordinem ingressus perfectissimæ penitentiae et summæ devotionis nobis exempla reliquit. Ampliavit autem aream dominus Jocius filius Petri, cujus filius optimæ indolis ordinem postea devotus intravit, et devotior perseveravit in finem. Capellam vero ædificavit sumptibus propriis dominus Willelmus Joymer, et ad alias domos construendas circiter ducentas libras per vices contulit, et indefesse usque ad mortem in spiritualitate fratrum, continuis eos beneficiis visitans, perduravit. Ad infirmariam vero construendam contulit centum libras in obitu suo dominus Petrus de Oliland. Aquæductum procuraverunt præcipue et mutuis collationibus dominus Henricus de Frowye, et optimæ conversationis adolescens, Salekinus de Basing, cooperante tamen amplissime regia munificentia. Alia quoque in ædificiis, tum in libris, quum et in areæ ampliacione et aliarum necessitatum sublevatione, tot et tam multiplicata beneficia, omnibus mortalibus admiranda, tempore meo vidi Londoniæ, ab ipso dulcissimo Jesu fratribus provideri, ut merito specialiter ab ipsis supra cæteros amari et honorari debeat idem in æternum.

Oxonæ porro recepit fratres Robertus le Mercer, at Oxford; et locavit eis domum, in qua intraverunt ordinem multi probi baccalaurei et multi nobiles. Postea conduxerunt domum quandam in area, in qua sunt modo, a Richardo le Muliner, qui infra annum contulit aream et domum communitati villæ ad opus fratrum. Fuit autem area ipsa brevis et areta nimis. Cantabrigiæ at Cambridge; primo receperunt fratres burgenses villæ, assignantes eis

Cum vero intolerabilis esset vicinia carceris fratribus, quod eundem ingressum habebant carcerarii et fratres, dedit dominus Rex decem marcas ad emendum redditum<sup>1</sup> quod satis fieret scaccario suo pro reditu areæ, et sic ædificabant fratres capellam ita pauperrimam, ut unus carpentarius in una die faceret, et erigeret una die xiv. coplas tignorum. In festo autem Sancti Laurentii, cum non essent nisi tres fratres, clerici scilicet Frater W. de Esseby et Frater Hugo de Bugeton, et novitius nomine Frater Helias, qui tam claudus erat ut portaretur in oratorium, cantaverunt officium solempniter cum nota, et in tantum flevit novitius, ut aperte per vultum canentis currerent lacrymæ. Igitur cum sanctissime mortuus fuisset apud Eboracum apparuit Fratri W. de Esseby apud Northamptonam, et quærenti, "quomodo se haberet," respondit: "Bene me habeo; ora pro me." Apud Slopisbyriam dedit aream fratribus dominus Rex; ecclesiam vero ædificavit burgensis quidam nomine Ricardus Pinde, ceteras officinas Laurentius nomine; et muros lapideos dormitorii, decernente sic ministro, Fratre sc. Willielmo, pro zelo paupertatis amovit, et luteos fecit cum mirabili et mansuetudine et permagnis sumptibus.

COLLATIO IV.

*Primitiva Pietas Fratrum. Silentium.

Primitias autem Spiritus habentes fratres illius temporis, non humanis constitutionibus sed liberis suæ devotionis affectionibus, regula etiam contenti et paucissimis aliis statutis, quæ post confirmationem regulæ eodem anno emanaverant, Domino serviebant. Hæc fuit autem prima constitutio, quam Sanctus Franciscus fecit post regulam bullatam, sicut dixit bonæ memoriæ Frater Albertus; scilicet quod fratres inter seculares non comederent, nisi tantum tres bolos continuos propter observationem sacro-sancti Evangelii; quia venerat ad eum rumor quod fratres avidè comedebant. Fratres igitur silentium usque ad tertiam tenere consueverunt, et in oratione tam assidui esse, ut vix esset per totam noctem aliqua hora, qua non esset aliquis in oratione in oratorio. In præcipuis quoque solempnibus tanto fervore cantaverunt, ut per totam noctem nonnunquam durarent vigiliæ; et cum essent nisi tres vel quatuor aut ad multum sex, ita cum nota solempniter cecinerunt. Tantaque fuit simplicitas eorum, tantaque puritas, ut de pollutione nocturna in capella coram omnibus dicerent culpas suas. Inoleverat enim inter eos tam religiosa consuetudo, ut nihil penitus jurarent, sed simpliciter dicerent, "Sciatis." Quam cito quisquam eorum vel a superiore vel a socio fuisset interrogatus, statim respondit, "Mea culpa," et frequenter etiam prostratus. Unde magister Prædicatorum bonæ memoriæ Frater Jordanus dixit, quod Diabolus ei<sup>1</sup> aliquando apparuisset et dixit quod "Mea culpa," abstulit sibi omne quod lucrari credidit inter Fratres Minores, quia scilicet dicebant culpas meas invicem, si quis alium offendisset. Fuerunt tamen fratres omni tempore inter se ita jocundi et læti, ut vix in aspectu mutus se temperaret a risu. Unde cum fratres juvenes Oxonienses nimis frequenter riderent, injunctum fuit cuidam ut quoties rideret toties reciperet disciplinas. Accidit autem ut cum nullas disciplinas in una die recepisset, nec tamen posset se a risu continere, visum fuerit ei quadam nocte, quod totus conventus more solito stetit in choro, et temptabant fratres ridere more solito, et ecce crucifixus qui stetit ad ostium chori convertit se ad eos quasi vivus, et ait: "Fili Coræ sunt qui in " hora cantus rident et dormiunt." Videbatur ei etiam quod crucifixus nitebatur extrahere manus a patibulo, quasi volens descendere et recedere; et ecce custos loci statim ascendit et confirmavit clavos, ita quod non descendit. Hac igitur visione publicata territi<sup>2</sup> fratres maturius, sine risu notabiliore [se] gerebant. In tantum enim veritatem zelabant, ut vix hyperbolice aliquid loqui auderent, vel etiam propria delicta, cum tamen se puniendos scirent si confiterentur, celarent.

In locis capiendis, vel moram faciendo in jam captis, nulla fuit difficultas, vel aliis quibuscunque locis vel qualitercunque exsequendis, dummodo scilicet a suo superiore scirent ordinatum. Unde accidit ut in locis qui desolatorii tunc temporis dicerentur, fratres tam nobiles genere quam aliis conditionibus, in sæculo spectabiles et in ordine gratiosissimi, sine querela se poni permetterent. Hoc solum suavissimum cordis eorum contristare videbatur affectum, quod ab invicem separari oportebat. Unde frequenter usque ad partes remotas fratres recedentes conducebant, et effusis in recessu lacrimis affectionis fidem mutuo demonstrabant.

COLLATIO V.

Prædicatorum Promotio. Haymo de Faversham.

Quum fratres autem summæ simplicitati et conscientiæ puritati summopere studerent in omnibus, in audienda tamen lege divina et scholasticis exercitiis ita fuere ferventes, ut scholas theologiæ, quantumcunque distarent, adire quotidie nudis pedibus in frigoris asperitate et luti profunditate non pigrarentur. Unde, cooperante gratia Spiritus Sancti, ad officium prædicationis infra breve tempus plures promoti sunt. Inter quos primus exstitit bonæ memoriæ Frater Hugo de Baldoc, Frater quoque Philippus de Longeton, et Frater Willelmus de Esseby, qui non solum sermone, sed in exemplificata devotione verbum Dei, tam populo, quam clero, prædicaverat.

Their activity in teaching and preaching.

Promovit autem plurimum prædicantes, et auctoritatis eis et famæ fomenta præbuit adventus Fratris Haymonis de Faversham, qui cum tribus aliis magistris apud Sanctum Dionysium in die Parasceues, ordine<sup>1</sup> sacerdos et famosus prædicator, intravit. Hic enim cum adhuc secularis esset, usus est cilicio usque ad polites,<sup>2</sup> et alia plurima pœnitentiæ excellentissima monstravit exempla. Unde ita debilis et delicatus ad ultimum factus est, ut vix nisi in assatis vesceretur et calidis vivere non posset. Accidit autem ei visio talis, quum scilicet esset Favershamiæ, et oraret in ecclesia coram crucifixo; et ecce descendit chorda de cœlo, et ipse accepit eam et tenuit, et ita tractus est per eam in cœlum. Cum vidisset Fratres Minores, memor istius visionis resumpsit vires, et erigens se contra se, socium suum magistrum Symonem de Sanwyꝛ et duos alios famosos [magistros] sagaciter induxit, ut ipso celebrante missam, ipsi a Domino Jesu Christo peterent, quid sibi consultius foret<sup>1</sup> ad salutem. Cumque simul omnibus Minorum professio complaceret, accesserunt, ad majorem securitatem, ad sanctæ memoriæ Fratrem Jordanum, magistrum Ordinis Prædicatorum, et obligaverunt cum in animam suam ut sibi consilium suum fideliter daret. Qui, sicut erat veraciter inspiratus, consilio suo conceptum propositum confirmavit. Accesserunt ergo quatuor isti ad ministrum, fratrem scilicet Gregorium de Neapoli, et ab eodem recepti [sunt] apud S. Dionysium, postquam Frater Haymo prædicaverat in die Parasceus de hoc versu, "In convertendo Dominus captivitatem Syon, facti sumus sicut qui cum gaudio magno induti sunt." In die vero Paschæ, cum viderat Frater Haymo tam numerosum populum in parochiam,<sup>2</sup> in qua fratres audiebant divina, (non enim habebant adhuc cantariam,) dixit custodi, qui erat laicus, Vincentius nomine, quod si auderet, libenter prædicaret populo, ne forte communicarent in mortali. Injuxit ergo ei custos ex parte Spiritus Sancti ut prædicaret. Prædicavit ergo ita motive, ut multi differrent communicare quousque fuissent ei confessi. Sedit igitur tribus diebus in ecclesia et audivit confessiones et confortavit non mediocriter populum. A D.

Itaque, ut prius dictum est, postquam venerunt fratres in Angliam, venit et ipse; et tam in prædicationibus quam in disputationibus, et præcipue in prælatorum favore plurimum simplicitati primorum fratrum contulit. Fuit enim ita gratosus et eloquens, ut etiam adversantibus Ordini gratus et acceptus existeret. Unde primo custos Parisius, postea lector Turonis, et Bononiæ, et Paduæ, positus est. In legationem quoque in Græciam ad Natatium, una cum bonæ memoriæ Fratre Radulpho de Remis, a piæ memoriæ Papa Gregorio missus est. Fratrem Gregorium de Neapoli Parisius Ministrum Franciæ, meritis suis exigentibus, a ministerio fecit amoveri; et justo Dei judicio, solutis his quos ipse immerito incarcerationat, fecit incarcerari. Fratrem quoque Heliam, qui Minister Generalis erat, propter scandala quæ fecit, et tyrannidem quam in zelatores Ordinis exercuit, in Angliam socius [missus], in præsentiam patris nostri Papæ Gregorii appellantis, procurante eo, contra ipsum plurimis provinciis, miro Dei favore prodejecit. Quis vero de suis meritis presumere, quis de se tutus esse possit, cum tales personas ad tantam calamitatem devenisse cognovit? Quis enim Gregorio in prædicatione vel prælacione, in Universitate Parisius vel clero totius Franciæ comparabilis? Quis in universo Christianitatis orbe vel gratosior vel famosior quam Helias? Et tamen unus in fine meruit perpetuum carcerem, alius propter inobedientiam et apostasiam suam summi Pontificis excommunicationem. Utrunque tamen hoc sero pœnituit.

Venit autem cum Fratre Haymone in Angliam bonæ memoriæ Frater Willelmus de Colville, senior, summæ simplicitatis et eximiæ caritatis vir; cujus germana postmodum in ecclesia cathedrali Cycestre pro castitate servanda sævissime jugulata est. Juvenis enim qui-

Inter carnaliter se amantes frequenter in fine tantum oritur odium, quantum prius erat amoris.

Fr. Nic.
Rufus.

Postea venerunt in Angliam plures alii fratres probissimi de Anglia oriundi, qui Parisius intraverant, quos adhuc existens in habitu seculari ipse vidi: Frater scilicet Nicholaus Rufus, lector egregius, qui postea zelo reformandi ordinem, contra Fratrem Heliam pro Francia profectus est ad curiam cum Fratrem Haymone. Qui et narravit quod quidam novitius retulit ei, quod cum continua siti laboraret, nec posset dormire de nocte, apparuit ei vir quidam speciosus in habitu fratrum, et præcepit ut surgeret et sequeretur eum: quod cum fecisset duxit eum in locum amænissimum, et introduxit eum in pulcherrimum palatium, et dedit ei bibere potum suavissimum, et dixit ei, "Frater, quotienscunque sitieris, venias huc ad me, et dabo tibi bibere." Et quæsit novitius, quis esset; qui dixit se esse Fratrem Franciscum. Exinde ad se reversus novitius nullam penitus de cætero sitis temptationem sustinuit; sed evigilans tam corde quam corpore se refocillatum et confortatum persentit.<sup>1</sup> Venit et tunc temporis Frater Radulphus de Rosa, qui ob eximiam gratiam prædicationis domino regi Angliæ familiarissimus effectus, sine suo probavit quam inimica sit Deo hujus mundi amicitia, et quam contrarium puritati Ordinis Minorum Fratrum, magnatum magnificari favoribus, et in curiis principum continue commorari. Venit quoque Frater Henricus de Burforde, qui cum adhuc novitius esset, et cantor Fratrum Parisius, contra Hic postea, pro magna honestate sua, quatuor ministrorum generalium et quatuor provincialium in Anglia socius specialis esse meruit. Hic et diu Patriarchæ Antiocheno in legatione sua in Lumbardia primo interpret et prædicator exstitit, et post domini papæ Gregorii Noni pœnitentiarius; custos quoque Venetiarum, et custodis Londoniæ quoque vicarius.

Venit et tunc Frater Henricus de Resesby; qui postea fuit datus in ministrum Scotiæ, cum esset vicarius custodis Oxoniæ, sed præventus fuit morte. Qui apparuit post mortem suam custodi Oxoniæ, dicens quod "si non damnarentur fratres pro excessu quem facerent in ædificiis, graviter tamen puniebantur:" et addidit, "si fratres bene dicerent divinum officium, essent oves Apostolorum."

Hen. de Resesby.

Venit quoque in Angliam tunc temporis Frater Martinus de Barton, qui beatum Franciscum frequenter videre meruit; qui postea vicarius fuit ministri Angliæ, et multis aliis officiis optime se habuit. Ipse narravit, quod in capitulo generali, in quo præcepit Sanctus Franciscus destrui domum, quæ fuerat ædificata propter capitulum, fuerunt quinque 1225-50. fuit seneschallus capituli, et descendit domum ex parte communitatis.

Per ipsum scripsit Sanctus Franciscus propria manu literam sub divo in pluvia non madefactus, ministro et fratribus Franciæ, ut visis literis jubilarent divinæ Trinitati, dicentes, "Benedicamus Patrem et Filium cum Spiritu Sancto." Eodem quoque die pater idem fratrem quendam [qui] in puteum profundum ceciderat, fugiens audito rumore in ecclesiam, fusa oratione illæsum servavit. Dixit quoque quod frater quidam, qui stetit in oratione Brixie in Die Natali Domini in tremore quem prædixerat Sanctus Franciscus, et per omnes scholas Bononiæ per fratres prædicari fecerat, per literam in qua fuit plurimum Latinum, et ecclesia corruit, ob ruinam lapidum, illæsus inventus est. Hic terræ motus ante guerram Frederici per continuos xl. dies factus est, ita ut moverentur omnes montes Lombardiæ.

Venit quoque in Angliam Frater Petrus Hispanus, qui fuit postea gardianus Northamtonæ, qui lorica utebatur ob carnis illecebras edomandas.

Hic novicium quendam in conventu suo habuit, qui temptabatur exire ordinem: a quo vix tandem obtinuit ut ad ministrum secum ire vellet. Cum igitur incederent per viam incepit Frater Petrus prædicare ei de virtute sanctæ obedientiæ; et ecce avis quædam silvestris præcessit eos ambulantes in via. Dixit ergo novicius, Stephanus nomine, ad fratrem Petrum, "Pater, si sic est, ut dicis, præcipe per virtutem obedientiæ ut capiam avem hanc silvestrem, ut ipsa expectet me." Qui cum sic fecisset, statim stetit avis, et accessit novicius, et tenuit eam et tractavit sicut voluit: et statim sedata est omnis temptatio sua, et immutavit ei Deus cor aliud, et rediit statim Northamtonam, et professus est perseverare, et postea factus est prædicator egregius, sicut ipse vidi.

Divisio Angliæ in Custodias.

Post hoc multiplicatis jam locis, et fratribus tam meritis quam numero de die in diem multipliciter dilatis, visum fuit expediens provinciam per custodias dividi. Divisa est igitur provincia in primo capitulo provinciali Londoniæ [in custodias] quarum quælibet singulari sanctitate pollebat. In custodia quippe Londoniæ, cui præfuit Frater Gilbertus, cui Beata Virgo in obitu suo apparuit, præcipue viguit fervor et reverentia et devotio in divino officio. In custodia Oxoniæ, cui præfuit Frater Willelmus de Esseby, præcipue viguit studium. In custodia Cantebrigiæ, cui præfuit Frater Ricardus de Ingewrth, præcipue viguit paucitas pecuniæ, in tantum, ut usque ad id temporis quo visitavit Frater Albertus Angliam, non uterentur Fratres illius custodie mantellis, sicut pater idem retulit. In custodia Eboraci, cui præfuit Frater Martinus de Barton, viguit zelus paupertatis; non enim permisit ut essent plures fratres in aliquo loco quam quot possent mendicitate sola, sine debitis, in victualibus exhiberi. In custodia Sarisburiensi, cui præfuit Frater Stephanus, præcipue viguit mutuæ dilectionis affectus. Ipse siquidem tantæ fuit suavi-tatis, tantæque jocunditatis, et tam eximiæ caritatis et compassionis, ut nullum permetteret pro posse suo contristari. Unde, cum mori debuisset, et offerretur ei hostia salutaris, vidit ostium in hostia, per quam intrare deberet, et sic cantans alta voce, "Salve, Regina Misericordiæ,"<sup>1</sup> apud Sarum feliciter obiit. In custodia Wygornæ, cui præfuit Frater de Leycestria, præcipue viguit primitiva<sup>1</sup> simplicitas; nam et ipse, corpore quidem pusillus, sed corde magnanimus, summæ simplicitati semper studuit, et plures simplices ad ordinem promovit. Tandem cum clamore valido et lacrimis sanctam et simplicem animam suam apud Wygorniam Domino commendavit. In custodia Oxoniæ, cui præfuit per xii. annos Frater Petrus, non sunt fratres usi pulvinaribus usque ad tempus Fratris Alberti ministri. Unde cum diceret Frater Albertus in capitulo, quod fratres monticulos sibi indecenter fecerunt ad caput suum sublevandum, respondit custos quod satis scirent<sup>2</sup> fratres esse carnales, nec oporteret eis hoc dicere. Sed nec pedulibus utebantur fratres, nisi infirmi vel debiles, et hoc de licentia. Accidit autem ut bonæ memoriæ Frater Walterus de Madele duos pedules inveniret, et cum iret ad matutinum calciaret se. Stetit ergo in matutinis, ut sibi visum erat, sic ut melius se habens quam consueverat. Postea vero cum venisset ad lectum suum et quiesceret, visum fuit ei quod transire debuit per passum quendam periculosum inter Oxoniam et Gloverniam boysalyz,<sup>3</sup> ubi consueverunt esse prædones, et cum descenderet in vallem profundam, accurrerunt clamantes ex utraque parte viæ dicentes, "Occidite, occidite!" Territus ergo nimis dixit se esse Fratrem Minorem. At illi dixerunt, "Mentiris; non enim incedis discalciatus." At ille secundum consuetudinem credens se esse discalciatum, dixit, "Immo, discalciatus incedo:" cumque confinenter pedem protulisset, reperit se calciatum coram iis dictis soccis; et præ nimia confusione statim a somno solutus projecit soccos in mediam aream.

COLLATIO VII.

Factum est autem post hæc ut mitterentur speciales A.D. 1225-50. visitatores in Angliam, qui causa visitationis capitula Visitation of the English province. celebrabant. Primus autem visitor Angliæ fuit Frater Willelmus de Colvile senior, qui capitulum suum celebravit Londoniæ sub Fratre Angnello, ubi dominus W. Joymer capellam suis sumptibus ædificavit, et tunc temporis introitum in eandem cum memorabili gloria celebravit. Post hæc venit Frater Johannes Naverius,<sup>1</sup> qui tunc primo portavit expositionem Regulæ secundum dominum Gregorium Nonum; qui Londoniæ, et Leycestriæ, et Bristollia, similiter etiam fratres novicios in maxima multitudine sub Fratre Angnello visitationis gratia convocavit. Et quidem tam arcta existit tunc conscientia fratrum in ædificiis construendis et picturis habendis, ut propter fenestras capellæ in loco Gloverniæ maximam vim<sup>2</sup> constitueret, et propter pulpitum quod frater quidam depinxerat, sibi capucium auferret; gardiano quoque loci idem fecit, quod picturas toleraverat. Tertius autem visitor venit a latere generalis ministri Fratris Heliæ, sub Fratre Alberto, Frater Wygmundus Alemannus, vir valde famosus in peritia juris et morum honestate conspicuus, et domino Ottoni cardinali, qui tunc legatus erat in Anglia, familiarissimus. Hic tam districtam<sup>3</sup> formam et tam exquisitam a ministro generali acceperat, et præcipue ut excommunicati essent de facto quicumque sibi quocumque modo celarent aliqua, vel dicta revela-

A.D. 1225-50. rent, a qua sententia nullus absolvere posset nisi ipse, insuper et omnes accusationes ad ministrum generalem deportaret, quod tanta fuit vero conturbatio fratrum, qualis nunquam in Ordine fuerat. Convocatis enim fratribus Londoniæ, Suthamtoniæ, Gloverniæ, et Oxoniæ, in multitudine nimia, et ultra modum id morantibus per mutuas accusationes, item per suspiciones sæcularium foris, intolerabilis subito per totam provinciam tempestas orta est. Tandem, visitatione utcumque completa, statim celebratum est provinciale capitulum Oxoniæ, et contra Fratrem Heliam unanimiter appellatum propter visitationem. Verum potestatem habuit visitator, et in mandatis acceperat, ut alia quædam faceret, quæ cederent in notabile gravamen fratrum. Divertit ergo in provinciam Scotiæ, et convocato capitulo, voluit visitare. Fratres autem formaverunt appellationem suam, et formatam proposuerunt, dicentes se esse auctoritate capituli generalis a ministro Hyberniæ visitatos, nec aliam visitationem se velle recipere. Ergo, omnibus turbatis, turbatus et ipse non modicum, rediit in Alemanniam, secum habens seriem suæ visitationis. Frater autem W. de Esseby, quem visitandi gratia miserat in Hyberniam, omnibus neutiquam peractis, profectus est ad eum Coloniam. Igitur cum venissent fratres Romam, mox petiverunt ut fratres de cætero in suis locis visitarentur per capitulum generale, secundum quod se habet constitutio de visitatoribus. Dixit vero Frater Arnulfus penitentiarius Domino Papæ, quod "si Diabolus fuisset incarnatus, non invenisset subtiliorem et fortiorem laqueum ad illaqueandas animas, quam fuit illa visitatio."

In capitulo visitationis Fratris Willelmi de Colvile, prædicavit quidam contra contractionem debitorum, et dixit quod "ita fuit de procuratoribus, sicut fuit de quodam sacerdote, qui consuevit singulis annis facere festum Sancti Nicholai. Et ecce, contigit ut fieret “ ita pauper quod non potuit consuetum convivium celebrare, et instante ipso die, cum pulsaretur matutinus, jacuit in lecto suo et cogitavit, pulsante campana prima et respondente, Io ke fray; Io ke fray, et pulsante secunda et respondente A crey; A crey; et cum cogitaret unde solveret, pulsabant ambæ, et videbatur ei quod dicerent, Ke de un, ke de el; Ke de un, ke de el.” Et surgens fecit festum ex mutuo. Et approbatus fuit sermo a capitulo.

A.D.

In capitulo visitationis Fratris Wygredi accusatus fuit multipliciter sanctæ memoriæ Frater Eustacius de Merc,<sup>1</sup> tunc temporis gardianus [Oxonie], et per diem et dimidium exclusus a capitulo. Alius autem quidam, de quo minus credebatur, statim fuit sanctificatus; et ait frater ille, “O me miserabilem! Ille homo tam famosæ sanctitatis, et tam probatæ religionis, et precipuæ discretionis, ita visitatus est; et ego sic evasi! Quis dabit de cetero quicquam de judiciis hominum?”

duas; ut esset scilicet una Scotiæ et altera,<sup>1</sup> ut prius, Angliæ nominata. Voluit enim, ut dicebatur, quod sicut Ordo Fratrum Prædicatorum xii. habet priores provinciales in toto orbe, vice xii. Apostolorum, sic et ipse sub se haberet<sup>2</sup> lxxii. ministros, vice lxxii. discipulorum. Factus est minister provincialis Scotiæ Frater Henricus de Reresby; sed antequam conveniret<sup>3</sup> ad ipsam obeundam, mortuus erat: successit igitur<sup>4</sup> ei Frater Johannes de Kethene,<sup>5</sup> gardianus Londoniæ, qui omnia loca ultra Eboracum capi fecit; in quibus plures utiles personas et honestas ad ordinem recepit. Hic præcipuum zelum gerens in divino officio devotionis exemplar semetipsum exhibuit. Hic venerabilem patrem nostrum Fratrem Albertum in loco Leycestriæ cum debita reverentia recepit, et ab eo fratribus exponi regulas humiliter imploravit. Igitur cum per plures annos provinciam Scotiæ probabiliter rexisset, reconjuncta provincia Angliæ, a ministro generali Fratre Alberto minister Hyberniciæ creatus est. Ipse quoque, quod dignum memoria duxi, in capitulo generali Januensi, bonæ memoriæ Fratri Wilhelmo de Notingham, ministro Angliæ, una cum Fratre Gregorio de Bossellis, constanter astitit: ubi fere contra totum<sup>6</sup> capitulum generale causam feliciter obtinuit, ut privilegium indultum a Domino Papa de recipienda pecunia per procuratores penitus destrueretur; et expositio Regulæ secundum dominum Innocentium, quantum ad ea in quibus laxior esset quam Gregoriana, suspenderetur. Ipse quoque verbum fecit pro reconciliatione Fratris Heliæ inter omnes diffinitores generalis<sup>7</sup> capituli, et obtinuit ut moneretur per fratres ut ad obedientiam Ecclesiæ et Ordinis redire non differret. Ipse preterea in promovendo studio A.D.

A.D.

The Order
increases.

Crescente indies numero fratrum, non potuerunt<sup>2</sup> sufficere multitudini domus et areæ, quæ suffecerant paucitati; præterea,<sup>3</sup> per providentiam Dei, tales intrabant<sup>4</sup> frequenter personæ, quibus videbatur, et jure, honorificentius providendum. In nonnullis quoque locis ita inconsiderate se collocaverat fratrum simplicitas, ut non areas ampliari, sed ex toto domos amoveri oporteret. Hinc factum est, ut, vivente adhuc bonæ memoriæ Fratre Angnello, multa fieret tam domorum quam locorum ampliatio. Verumtamen<sup>5</sup> tantus<sup>6</sup> erat zelator paupertatis, ut vix permetteret vel ampliari areas vel domos ædificari, nisi secundum quod exegit inevitabilis necessitas. Sic evidenter patuit in infirmaria Oxoniæ quam construi fecit ita humilem, ut altitudo murorum altitudinem viri non multum excederet; et usque ad tempus Fratris Alberti domus ipsa diversorio careret. Similiter dormitorium Londoniæ persistente tecto immobili, muris lapideis, amoto luto, fecit stabiliri. Igitur sub Fratre Alberto mutatus est locus Northamptonæ et similiter locus Wygornia et locus Herfordiæ.

Sub Fratre Haymone quoque in nonnullis locis facta est arearum ampliatio; dixit enim quod "maluit quod fratres haberent amplas areas et colerent
" eas, ut habere possent pulmentaria domi, quam

Frater Robertus de Slaptun dixit mihi, quod dum essent fratres in quodam loco sibi mutuato, priusquam haberent aream, visum fuit fratri gardiano quod Sanctus Franciscus veniret ad locum; cui cum fratres occurissent, duxerunt eum in solarium, et sedit diu circumspiciens in silentio; et mirantibus fratribus, dixit gardianus, “ Pater, quid cogitas?” Et dixit ei, “ Circumspice domum;” et circumspexit; et ecce tota domus ex virgis, luto, et fimo lita; et dixit fratribus, “ Tales deberent domus Fratrum Minorum esse.” Et accepit gardianus aquam, et lavit sibi pedes, et osculatus est stigmata in pedibus ejus. Hæc, ut puto, acciderunt ipsi Fratri Roberto. Vidi autem et ego quendam prædicatorem famosum, qui fatebatur publice quod per solitudinem quam habuit circa domos eujusdam loci construendas, amisserat affectum prædicandi et devotionem quam consueverat habere.

Frater quoque Johannes, visitator Ordinis Fratrum Prædicatorum in Anglia, dixit de Fratre Willielmo de Abingdon, quod antequam construeret domos Clovernæ, incomparabilem habuit gratiam prædicandi; quod nunquam talis et tam gratiosus prædicator debuisset occupari circa ædificia; quia in tantum, ut dicebat dictus Frater Johannes, per solitudinem procurationis<sup>1</sup> vilem se reddidit, ut diceret ei dominus rex Angliæ: "Frater Willielme, tu consuevisti tam spiritualiter loqui; modo totum quod loqueris est, Da, da, da." Et alias, cum blanditiis ageret apud eum, petens aliquid ab eo, vocavit eum idem princeps serpentem.

Dominus quoque<sup>2</sup> Abbas de Certeseyc dixit mihi quod cum quidam familiarissimus suus de Ordine Prædicatorum peteret ab eo ligna, dedit ei unum lignum; qui cum diceret, quod molestius sibi videretur propter unum solum lignum diu<sup>3</sup> vexari, dedit ei aliud; et cum diceret quod Deus Trinus erat, et ideo tria dare deberet, respondit ei Abbas, "Per Deum, qui unus est, modo non habebis nisi unum solum."

Quum Frater Henricus de Burforde fuit inductus Parisius, non fuerunt in conventu ipso nisi circiter triginta fratres; et ædificabant tunc temporis locum qui appellatur Valvert; in quo domum longam et altam construxerant, quæ multis fratribus videbatur esse contra statum paupertatis ordinis. promotus est. Cui successit magister Rogerus de Wesham,<sup>1</sup> qui post decanus Lincolniensis ecclesiae, et postea Coventrensis episcopus factus est. Similiter et magister Thomas Wallensis, cum laudabiliter apud fratres in eodem loco legisset, in episcopum Sancti David in Wallia assumptus est.<sup>2</sup> Hi ergo semper existentes in omnibus fratribus favorabiles facta eorum et famam plurimum per diversa loca promoverunt. Igitur usque adeo fama fratrum Angliæ, et profectus in studio aliis etiam provinciis innotuit, ut minister generalis, Frater Helias, mitteret pro Fratre Philippo Walensi et Fratre Ada de Eboraco qui Lugduni legerunt.<sup>3</sup> Fratrem quoque Vincentium de Coventria Frater Albertus in adventu suo lectorem Londoniæ, germanumque suum Fratrem Henricum Cantuariæ lectorem constituit. Et sic paulatim per diversa loca positi sunt lectores; Frater scilicet Willielmus de Leycestria, Herfordiæ; Frater Gregorius de Bossellis, Leycestriæ; Frater Gilbertus de Cranforth, Bristollia; Frater Johannes de Westun, Cantebriæ; Frater Adam de Marisco, Oxoniæ. Et ita inundavit in provincia Anglicana donum sapientiæ, ut ante absolutionem Fratris W. de Nothingham, essent in Anglia triginta lectores, qui solempniter disputabant, et tres vel quatuor, qui sine disputatione legebant. Assignaverat enim in Universitatibus, pro singulis locis, studentes, qui decedentibus vel amotis lectoribus succederent. Quidam lector egregius, qui mecum studuit Oxoniæ, consuevit semper in scholis, magistro legente vel disputante, intendere aliis quam lectioni, utpote compilationi originalium. Et ecce, cum ipse factus fuisset lector, ita facti sunt ei indevoti auditores sui, ut diceret quod ita libenter clauderet cotidie librum suum et recederet sicut legeret; et compunctus ait, "Justo Dei iudicio nullus vult audire me, quia ego nunquam volui aliquem doctorem audire." Ipse præterea, cum amicis sæcularibus nimis assidue comitaret,<sup>4</sup> et occasione familiaritatis eorum fratribus, minus quam soleret, intenderet, exemplo ceteris extitit, quod solum in silentio et quiete discuntur verba sapientiæ; quod et mandata Dei, sicut dicit sanctus, nisi quieta mens scrutari non potest. Postquam autem ad se conversus quieti studuit, ita excellenter profecit, ut diceret dominus Lincolnensis quod "lectionem quam fecerat nescisset ipse fecisse." Unde postea cres-

Igitur cum jaceret immotus sicut lapis, venerunt duo demones et sederunt ad sinistram, et unus bonus angelus sedit ad dextram. Et inceperunt demones irritare eum calumniis; bonus vero angelus diu tacuit. Tandem dixerunt demones, "Quum sedent fratres in potationibus et garrulis, hora completorii, tunc observamus eos; quum recedunt, tunc habemus alibi facere." Et dixit bonus angelus, "Ecce, quanta est malitia demonum; volunt te ipso tœdio interficere, ne possis de cætero laudare nomen Creatoris tui." Fuerunt quoque<sup>3</sup> fratres plurimi, qui licet prædicationis vel lectionis officium non haberent, de gratissimo favore prælatorum, per obedientiam et ordinationem ministri provincialis in diversis locis confessiones tam religiosorum quam secularium audierunt. Inter quos præcipuus erat Londoniæ Frater Salomon, qui tam civium quam curialium generalis confessor extitit. Ab ipso, cum esset gardianus Londoniæ post languorem suum, ut supra dictum est, exegit sanctæ memoriæ dominus Rogerus episcopus Londinensis<sup>4</sup> canonicam obedientiam; sed cum ex longa familiaritate sibi amicabiliter obsisteret, dilationem<sup>5</sup> usque alias impetravit. In tanta siquidem reverentia dominus ille ordinem habuit, ut singulis fratribus se salutantibus assurgeret. Floruit quoque in officio confessionis bonæ memoriæ Frater Mauricius de Derham, qui cum invenisset quendam puerum diutius desperabili languore tabescentem, audita confessione sua, injunxit ei ut per singulos dies diceret tria Ave Maria, et peteret ut Beata Virgo impetraret sibi sanitatem, ut posset esse Frater Minor. Et cum sic faceret ad plenum, deinceps curatus est. Cum igitur circiter xvi.<sup>1</sup> annos haberet, fecit eum obligari, et quasi fratrem usque ad legitimam ætatem inter fratres conversari; qua completa, sine dilatione sub Fratre Angnello indutus est.

Floruit quoque Gloverniæ Frater Vincentius de Wygornia, pater totius provinciæ; qui tantæ abstinence tantique rigoris in se, et tantæ suavitatis et socialitatis erat ad subditos, ut sicut angelus ab omnibus amaretur; unde ob morum gravitatem et præcipuam prudentiam postea ad prædicationis officium et domini Coventrensis episcopi Rogeri confessor effectus.<sup>2</sup>

Floruit quoque apud Lenniam famosissimæ sanctitatis vir, Frater Galfridus de Saresburia, qui in austeritate vitæ se alterum, si dici potest, Franciscum exhibuit, in conformitate virtutis et suavitatis ac simplicitatis gratia, secundum Antonium. Tantæ vero pietatis fuit et compassionis in confessionibus audiendis, ut ubi non videret confitentes congrua signa compunctionis ostendere, ipse eos potius ad fletum suis fletibus et singultibus commoveret; sicut de viro nobili domino Alexandro de Bissinburne<sup>3</sup> contigit; quia cum sibi confiteretur quasi narrando quandam narrationem, flens amarissime frater ipsum flere coegit, et ad propositum intrandi Minorum Ordinem suis meritis et salutaribus consiliis provexit. Floruit etiam apud Oxoniam bonæ memoriæ Frater Eustacius de Merc,<sup>2</sup> qui postea gardianus loci et postremo custos Eboraci factus est. Qui consuevit narrare quod Sanctus Lanfrancus volens ingredi religionem, cum esset maximus theologus, induit habitum fratrum et perrexit per abbatias ad probandum statum monachorum. Et venit et percussit ostium chori cum pila sua, et cum videret monachos propter hoc respicere ad ostium et ridere, dixit, "Non est hic Deus." Et cum pervenisset ad Bek Harlewine, et nullus monachorum percutientem attenderet, intravit illuc in habitum conversi. Et cum celebraret Nicholaus papa concilium contra Berengarium, obtinuit licentiam eundi cum abbate suo, et ibi cum omnes consternarentur super dictis hæretici, petita audientia, dissolvit dilucide rationes suas, in tantum ut diceret Berengarius, "Aut tu es Lanfrancus,<sup>3</sup> aut tu es Diabolus." ## COLLATIO XII.

A.D. 1225-50. Account of the Ministers General of the Order. 1. Fr. Helias. A.D. 1227. 2. Fr. Johannes Parens.

Primus autem minister generalis post B. Franciscum fuit Frater Helias, qui fuerat scriptor Bononiæ. Cui successit Frater Johannes Parens de Florentia,<sup>2</sup> minister Hispaniæ, vir sapiens et religiosus, et summi rigoris. Quo per fautores Fratris Heliae absoluto, iterum factus est Generalis Frater Helias. In capitulo siquidem, in quo facta est translatio Sancti Francisci, voluerunt ipsi quos ad capitulum concesserat venire Frater Helias; nam omnes concessit illuc venire qui vellent contra ministros provinciales ipsum fecisse Generalem. Unde et acceptum a cella sua portaverunt cum manibus ad ostium capituli, et fracto ostio voluerunt eum collocare in loco ministri generalis. Quod videns Generalis Frater Johannes coram toto capitulo se nudavit; et sic demum confusi post maximam turbationem cessaverunt. Nam nec Sanctum Antonium audire voluerunt, nec aliquem ministrum provincialem. Credidit autem populus quod esset discordia quia corpus Sancti Francisci, tertia die antequam fratres convenissent, translatum erat. Quinque<sup>3</sup> vero milites novicii, qui sederunt in capitulo et omnia viderunt, flentes dixerunt quod “ad magnum bonum Ordinis proveniret<sup>4</sup> illa turbatio, quia Ordo nullum posset inordinatum tenere.” Et sic accidit quod omnes illi turbatores ad agendam penitentiam per<sup>5</sup> diversas provincias missi sunt.

Frater vero Helias, divertens ad quoddam heremitorium, permisit sibi crescere comam et barbam, et per hanc simulationem sanctitatis Ordini et fratribus reconciliatus est.

Ab hoc capitulo missi sunt ad papam Gregorium pro expositione Regulæ nuncii solempnes, cum ministro generali; scilicet Sanctus Antonius, Frater Girardus Rusinol,<sup>1</sup> domini Papæ pœnitentiarius, Frater Haymo, qui postea fuit generalis minister, Frater Leo, qui post fuit archiepiscopus Mediolanensis, Frater Girardus de Mutina, Frater Petrus de Brixia. Retulerunt etiam papæ quale scandalum fecisset Frater Helias, quia minister generalis revocaverat mandatum suum, ne scilicet possent fratres omnes venire ad capitulum qui vellent; et insuper quod indignatus ex hoc, priusquam fratres convenissent, fecisset translationem fieri. Qui satis motus ad hoc, quousque audiret quod in heremitorio tam singularem vitam duceret, valde offensus extitit erga eum. Contra<sup>2</sup> tamen in capitulo Reatino, absoluto Fratre Johanne Parente, concessit ut fieret ipse Generalis, et præcipue propter familiaritatem quam habuerat cum beato Francisco. Postea cum propter carnalitatem et crudelitatem suam totum turbaret Ordinem, appellationem movit contra eum Frater Haymo Parisius, et ipso invito, ad celebrandum capitulum generale convenerunt multi ministri provinciales et fratres probatissimi Cismontani, procurante factum Ordinis Vicario<sup>3</sup> Fratre Arnulfo, pœnitentiaro domini papæ Gregorii Noni. Igitur post diutinam concertationem, electi sunt de universo Ordine fratres qui Ordinis reformationem providerent. Qua provisâ, recitata fuit in capitulo generali coram papa, in quo fuerunt septem<sup>4</sup> cardinales. Post prædicationem vero papæ, quæ erat de statua aurea quam vidit Nabugodonosor, et

Stetit ergo Frater Haymo quasi timidus et tremebundus; Frater Helias vero sedit inconcussus in omnibus, ut videbatur, et imperterritus. Inceptit autem Frater Haymo breviter commendare dicta sua sicut reverendi patris, et contra intulit quod licet dixissent fratres quod vellent quod comederet aurum, non dixerant quod vellent quod haberet thesaurum. Insuper licet dixissent quod vellent ut haberet equum, non dixerant quod vellent ut haberet palafredum vel dextrarium."<sup>3</sup> Et statim Frater Helias, fractus impatientia, dixit palam quod mentiebatur; et fautores sui incipiebant similiter conviciari et succlamare; et alii ex parte contraria similiter contra eos. Tunc motus Papa præcepit ut silerent, dicens; "Non est modus religiosorum iste." Tunc diutius sedens Papa, quasi in silentio et meditatione, omnes in stuporem convertit. Interim suggestit dominus Reginaldus, protector Ordinis, palam Fratri Heliae, ut resignaret in manibus Papæ; qui publice respondit, quod noluit. Tunc Papa, primo commendans personam suam, et recitans familiaritatem quam cum Sancto Francisco habuerat, conclusit, quod "crediderat quod placuisset fratribus ministerium suum; sed ex quo non placuit, sicut tunc probatum fuit, absol“ vendum eum decrevit.” Et statim absolvit eum a ministerio generali. Factum est tam immensum gaudium et ineffabile, quale nunquam dixerunt se vidisse qui interesse meruerunt.

Deposition of Helias.

Igitur ingressus solus papa cellam quandam, vocavit ministros et custodes ad electionem; et priusquam scriberentur, vota singulorum audivit; et cum canonicè fuisset electus Frater Albertus Pisanus, minister Angliæ, Frater Arnulfus, pœnitentiarius, qui præcipue totum negocium promoverat, electione pronunciata, incepit “ Te Deum laudamus.” Et quia Frater Helias, ut dicebatur, nunquam fuerat professus regulam bullatam, unde et conscientiam habuit recipiendi pecuniam, statim provisum est ut ipse profiteretur, et in eadem forma totum capitulum, et continuo totus Ordo. Et sic factum est. Igitur celebrata missa a ministro generali, dixit idem fratribus, qui non erant de capitulo: “ Jam audistis primam missam, quæ unquam celebrata fuerit in Ordine isto a ministro generali. Eatis nunc cum benedictione “ Jesu Christi ad loca vestra.” In ipso capitulo factus fuit Frater Haymo minister totius Angliæ, et Frater Johannes de Ketene, qui fuerat minister Scotiæ, factus est minister Hiberniæ.

Fr. Haymo.
A.D. 1239.

Successit autem ei Frater Haymo, Anglicus, qui quæ ipse bene inceperat, sollicite promovere curavit. Sub ipso celebratum est primum et ultimum capitulum generale diffinitorum, quod nunquam fuit in Ordine propter insolentiam quidem eorum; quia scilicet omnes ministros qui in loco capituli fuerunt cum Generali modis omnibus voluerunt emitti a loco; quod et factum est. Igitur ordinatio quæ facta fuerat de isto capitulo subditorum coram Papa in absolutione Fratris Heliaë, et de custodibus et gardianis eligendis canonice, propter eorundem subditorum insolentiam in capitulo generali proximo deleta est. Voluerunt enim quidam fratres ut custodes ab Ordine penitus delerentur, dicentes eorum officia superflua esse.<sup>3</sup> Ipse in media hyeme citatus est a protectore Ordinis et aliis cardinalibus, cum esset citra montes, coram quibus egregie respondit ad objecta sibi, et gratiam maximam sibi<sup>4</sup> conciliavit.

In diebus suis venit mandatum a capitulo ut eligerentur fratres per singulas provincias Ordinis, qui dubitabilia regulæ annotarent, et ad ministrum generalem transmitterent. Electi sunt ergo ad hoc in Anglia Frater Ada de Marisco, Frater Petrus custos Oxoniæ, Frater Henricus de Burford,<sup>5</sup> et quidam alii. In ipsa vero nocte apparuit S. Franciscus Fratri mandatum tam protectori Ordinis quam et fratribus ultramarinis eximie placuit; et confirmavit testimoetiam cum decumberet, visitandum dominus Papa Innocentius IV. venire dignatus est.

Huic autem successit Frater Crescentius, medicus famosus, minister Veronæ,<sup>3</sup> cujus zelum inflammavit caritas, informavit scientia, confirmavit constantia.
 Nam tam contrarios sibi habuit fratres provincie sue ut in ipsa nocte capituli generalis, in quo electus erat, post querelam suam quam fecerat zelatoribus Ordinis de rebellione fratrum suorum, videret eum habentem dependentem usque ad cingulum suum, et audivit vocem de cælo factam super eum in hæc verba: "Iste est Mardocheus." Igitur cum audisset Frater Radulfus de Remis visionem, dixit statim,

 "Pro certo ipse erit hodie electus in Generalem."
 Cum autem fideliter et prudenter aliquandiu minis-

Dixit autem idem pater, quod "cum ex duobus parietibus construatur ædificium Ordinis, scilicet moribus bonis et scientia, parietem scientiæ fecerunt fratres ultra cœlos et cœlestia sublimem, in tantum ut quærerent an Deus sit; parietem vero morum permiserunt ita bassum<sup>2</sup> esse, ut pro laude magna dicatur de fratre, securus homo est; unde non venienter videbantur ædificare." Voluit autem ut fratres reverentiam suæ religionis et publicis meritis se potius tuerentur erga prælatos et principes, quam Apostolicis privilegiis; et ut essent minores inter omnes humilitate et mansuetudine.

Haymo.

Frater Haymo dixit quod sic fuit de fratribus qui noluerunt venire in conventum post infirmitatem suam, priusquam essent nimis fortes, ne forte non possent redire ad recreationem, sicut fuit de puero, qui debuit invitus doceri litteras, et cum dixisset A, dixit quod licet<sup>3</sup> æque bene sciret dicere B, igitur A nullo modo voluit; quod si diceret B, præciperet magister quod diceret C, et deinceps.

Dixit etiam quod cum adhuc secularis esset, ita delicatus erat, quod non potuit sine multiplicibus remediis

Cum rediret Frater Haymo a concilio generali, in quo provincialis minister factus fuerat, timens debilitatem suam cogitavit quod si posset pervenire ultra montes postea non timeret; accidit autem ut ubi plus timuerat fieret fortior, et in Francia debilior.

Frater Radulfus Remensis Anglicus post diutinos Incidens. labores venit in Angliam, et apud Sarum diutius contemplationi vacans feliciter obiit. Ipse narravit quod cum Sanctus Franciscus incederet per viam in frigido vento, et fieret pusillanimis, resumpto spiritu ascendit in montem, et exiit se et convertit contra ventum et dixit sibi ipsi, quod bene sibi esset si haberet unam tunicam.

Frater Johannes de Parma, minister generalis, in Incidens. pleno capitulo generali Januæ, præcepit fratri Bonifacio qui fuerat socius Sancti Francisci, ut diceret fratribus de stigmatibus suis veritatem, quia multi de his per orbem dubitabant. Et respondit cum lachrymis: "Isti oculi peccatores ea viderunt; et istæ manus peccatrices contrectaverunt ea."

Sed et Frater Leo, socius Sancti Francisci, dixit Fratri Petro, ministro Angliæ, quod apparitio Seraphyn facta fuit Sancto Francisco in quodam raptu contemplationis, et satis evidentius quam scribebatur in vita sua, et quod multa fuerunt tunc sibi revelata quæ nulli viventi unquam communicavit. Veruntamen dixit Fratri Ruffino, socio suo, quod cum a longe videret Angelum nimis territus fuit, et quod eum dure tractavit; et dixit ei quod Ordo suus duraret usque ad finem mundi, et nullus malæ voluntatis diu durare possit in Ordine; et quod nullus odiens Ordinem diu viveret, et quod nullus veraciter amans Ordinem suum malum finem haberet. Præcepit autem Sanctus Franciscus fratri Ruffino, ut lapidem super quem steterat Angelus lavaret et Frater Albertus dixit quod tria præcipue sublimaverunt Ordinem; nuditas pedum, vilitas vestimentorum, et abjectio pecuniæ.

Frater Walterus de Reygate dixit quod revelatum fuit cuidam fratri in provincia Sancti Francisci, quod dæmones omni anno celebrant concilium contra Ordinem, et tunc tres vias adinvenerant; scilicet familiaritatem mulierum, receptionem inutilium personarum, et contrectationem pecuniæ.

Frater Agnellus.

Primus igitur minister Angliæ fuit Frater Agnellus Pisanus, ut supra dictum est, vir prudentia naturali præcipue præditus, omni virtute, ordine, et honestate conspicuus. Qui post nuncium quod pro prælati Angliæ simul cum Fratrem P. de Theukesbury, tunc temporis gardiano Londoniæ, et fratribus Prædicatoribus in curia Romana commendabiliter consummaverat, infirmatus est Oxoniæ dysenteria, præ frigore, ut dicebatur, et labore quem pro pace reformanda inter dominum regem et marescallum suum in marchia Walliæ, et in discurrendo per Angliam sustinuerat.<sup>2</sup> Postquam autem fluxus per medicinalia restrictus fuerat, accepit eum iliaca passio et dolor lateris, unde vix a clamore continere se valuit.

A.D.

Clamavit autem per tres dies continuos antequam obiret, quasi continue, "Veni, dulcissime Jesu." Igitur, sacramentis ecclesiasticis rite peractis, ipse de successore requisitus ut consuleret, consuluit ut mitteretur Frater Hugo de Wellys ad Fratrem Heliam, et ut fratres peterent sibi concedi in ministum Fratrem Albertum Pisanum, vel Fratrem Haymonem, vel Fratrem Radulfum Remensem. Constituit autem, quantum in se fuit, vicarium Fratrem Petrum de Theukisbury; et sic petitis<sup>1</sup> singulariter suffragiis singulorum fratrum, completa commendatione, quam et ipse cum conventu dixit, feliciter expiravit. Videbatur autem socio suo Fratri Waltero de Maddeley, quod funus quoddam jacuit in choro, quod a cruce videbatur recenter depositum. Nam et quinque vulnera habuit in modum crucifixi Jhesu Christi sanguinaria. Cum vero crederet quod esset ipse dulcis Jesus Christus, appropinquans cominus vidit quod erat Frater Angnellus.

Dignum memoria quod vir venerabilis magister Serlo decanus Oxoniæ<sup>2</sup> monuit fratrem Angnellum quod raro comederet extra conventum. Accidit autem ut gardianus quidam eadem die qua prædicaverat populo, coram sæculari quodam, cum quodam monacho verbis jocaretur post prandium, siquidem comederant cum fratribus; sæcularis autem dixit clam fratri cuidam, qui erat suus secretarius, hoc non decere prælatum et prædicatorem. Gardianus autem idem dixit mihi quod malisset quod percussus fuisset lancea per medium costarum suarum quam tale dedisset exemplum. In tantum zelabant fratres honestatem ordinis, et præcipue Frater Angnellus, ut nec secretario regis parceret, sed amovit eum a curia, et non permisit quod aliquid mitteret vel acciperet.

Tam devotus autem erat in officio divino, ut non solum in missa sed etiam in choro, et cum esset per viam, videretur continue flere, ita tamen quod perpendi non potuit in strepitu, vel gemitu, vel deformatione vultus. Officium quoque dicebat semper stando, et acriter increpavit fratrem qui sedendo dixit in minutione horas suas. Cum autem sensit mortem sibi imminere dixit Fratri Petro de Theukesbury. Tu seis totam vitam; et cum diceret Frater Petrus quod non<sup>1</sup> fuerat sibi unquam generaliter confessus, percussit caput suum et incepit clamando plangere, et statim cum mirabili contritione est confessus ei de tota vita sua. Postea evocatis fratribus absolvit eos, et cum ex præcepto suo commendationem inchoassent, ipse sibi manu sua clausit oculos, et manus super pectus in modum crucis collocavit.

Post multos autem annos, cum nocte haberent fratres amovere corpus suum, cum sc. destruxissent capellam, in qua coram altari et in choro sepultus erat, invenerunt capsellam plumbeam in qua jacuit, simul cum fossa, plenam oleo purissimo, ipsum vero corpus simul cum vestimentis incorruptum, et suavissime redolere.

Statuit ergo in domo hospitum, nisi cum Prædicatoribus et fratribus aliarum provinciarum, semper silentium teneri in mensa. Fratres quoque voluit tunicas veteres novis superponere, et propter vilitatem et propter diuturniorem durationem. Clastrum Suthamtoniæ lapideum, licet cum magna difficultate, destruxit, quia scilicet homines villæ se objecerunt; et chartam seu compositionem quæ fuit inter monachos Redyngæ et fratres, quod scilicet pro voluntate sua non possent eos expellere, ferventissime eisdem restituit, et obtulit se fratres amoturum si vellent. De capella vero loci, quod non potuit eam humiliare, propter dominum regem qui eam construxerat, optavit ut cœlitus destrueretur.<sup>3</sup> Ipse collocavit fratres Cestriæ et Wyn-toniæ, sed cum difficultate magna. datum domini Papæ Gregorii, quod fratres Prædicatores nullum obligarent, quo minus posset ad quameunque vellet religionem intrare, nec fratres suos novicios, nisi completo anno probationis, ad professionem reciperent. Consueverunt enim ipso die ingressus sui, si vellent, profiteri, sicque<sup>1</sup> fecit bonæ memoriæ Frater R. Bacun. Ipsi ergo plurimum commoti impetraverunt postea<sup>2</sup> a domino Papa Innocentio IV., quod nullus Frater Minor suos obligatos reciperet; quod si faceret, esset excommunicatus de facto; et ipsi similiter annuerunt de nostris. Obligaverunt ergo tot modis,<sup>3</sup> et in tantum hoc privilegium publicaverunt, quod vix aliquem dimitterent. Sed non diu duravit ista tribulatio. Nam bonæ memoriæ Frater W. de Notingham et Frater Petrus de Teukesbury ostenderunt domino Papæ quid predecessor suus statuerat, et ipse circumventum se dicens, licet cum molesta dilatione hoc fieret, revocatoriam eis concessit. Dixit autem aliquando Frater Albertus, quod valde debemus diligere fratres Prædicatores, quia in pluribus profuerunt Ordini nostro, et occasionaliter instruxerunt nos ad futura pericula præcavenda.

Unde cum minutus fuisset aliquando cum conventu talem inter socios proposuit parabolam, propter novicium quendam præcipue, qui præsens erat, qui nimis sapiens erat in oculis propriis, et præsumpsit intromittere se de impertinentibus. Rusticus, inquit, quidam, audiens quod tanta quies esset et tot deliciæ in Paradiso, profectus est ut quæreret ubi esset, si forte aliquo modo posset intromitti. Petrum et ingressum petiit; a quo cum quæreret Petrus si leges Paradisi custodire posset et præponeret, dixit quod sic, dummodo eos sibi dicere dignaretur. Dixit igitur Petrus quod solummodo servaret silentium. Quod cum libenter annueret intromissus est; et progrediens per Paradisum vidit quendam arantem cum duobus bobus, uno macilento et alio pingui, et pinguem permisit ire sicut libuit et macrum semper stimulavit. Et accurrens<sup>1</sup> redarguit eum. Et statim affuit Sanctus Petrus et voluit eum expellere; pepercit tamen ei illa vice, et præcepit ut sibi caveret. Et statim profectus inde vidit hominem portantem lignum longum, et voluit ingredi domum, et semper vertit lignum ex transverso ostii; et accurrens docuit eum ut præponeret unum caput ligni. Et statim affuit S. Petrus, et voluit eum modis omnibus expellere; pepercit tamen ei et illa vice. Tertio profectus inde vidit hominem secantem ligna in silva; et semper pepercit veteribus truncis et cavis roboribus, et prostravit et dissecuit recta et viridia et quæcunque pulcherrima. Et accurrens increpavit eum. Et statim affuit S. Petrus et expulit eum. Voluit autem ut subditi superiores suos ubique haberent in reverentia, dicens, "Absit ut familiaritas pariat contemptum."

Et dixit taurus quod non potuit progredi. Dixerunt autem ipsi, quod ideo moderatius ibant, quia oportuit omnibus modis eos operari, et non ad tempus.

Fratrem Eustacium de Merc compulit pisces comedere, contra consuetudinem, dicens, quod multas bonas personas amisit Ordo per indiscretionem eorum. Dixit autem quod cum esset cum Sancto Francisco in quodam hospitali commorans, compulit eum sanctus duplicare cotidie quod comedere consueverat. Exiit etiam tam liberalis ut gardianum quendam graviter arguit et similiter Prædicatorem, quia non providebant conventui abundantius post laborem in solemnitate quadam. Tam magnæ pietatis et compassionis erat, ut obedientiam faceret cuidam fratri debili ut partes suas natales adiret, et per diversam<sup>1</sup> custodiam a loco in locum si vellet circuiret, et ipse si fratres gravarentur exhibitione sua sumptus pro ipso refunderet. Igitur postquam per duos annos et dimidium Angliam nobiliter rexerat, profectus est cum pluribus electis contra Fratrem Heliam, et post generale ministerium inter Anglicos Romæ feliciter obiit.

3. Fr. Haymo. A.D. 1238. Cui successit Frater Haymo, qui fratres, sicut erat benignissimus et dulcissimus, in omni pace et caritate tenere curavit. Ipse induit dominum Herfordensem episcopum, Radulfum de Maydenstone, secundum visionem quam de ipso habuerat, cum esset archidiaconus Cestriæ, quod scilicet venit quidam puer, cum sederet et diserneret clerum in synodo, et projecit ei aquam in faciem, et statim conversus est in puerum miserabilem. In diebus illis accidit, ut duo fratres valde famosi inirent in domum cujusdam frankelani, qui honorifice suscepit eos et abundanter exhibuit. Et cum sederent in prandio supervenit rector ecclesie, culpans eos quod non diverterant ad ipsum; et cum plurimum compulisset eos ut comederent appositas carnes, et modestiam suam movere non posset, iratus ait: "Comedite, comedite; nam frigus occidit corpora vestra, et gula occidit animas nostras:" et surgens abiit.

Item, Frater Willielmus consuevit narrare, quod Sanctus<sup>5</sup> Stephanus, fundator Ordinis Grandis Montis, posuit cistam quandam in loco secreto et tuto; et prohibuit quod dum viveret nullus accederet. Igitur temptati sunt fratres scire quid esset in cista, nam et ipse sanctus voluit ut omnes exemplo suo<sup>6</sup> haberent eam in magna veneratione. Post mortem ergo suam non potuerunt differre, sed fregerunt eam, et non invenerunt nisi chartam unam, continentem scilicet: "Frater Stephanus, fundator Ordinis Grandis Montis, salutat fratres suos, et supplicat ut observent se a sæcularibus. Quia sicut vos, dum neciebatis quid erat in cista, habuistis eam in honore, sic et ipsi vos."

Frater Albertus fuit Oxoniæ in prædicatione cujusdam juvenis fratris; et cum audacter damnaret ædificiorum sublimitatem, et alimentorum abundantiam, corripuit eum propter vanam gloriam.

Frater Ada de Marisco narravit quod puer quidam nimis delicatus cum infirmaretur, et rogaret eum pater suus ut pro amore suo comederet, sicut fuit suus filius carissimus; respondit quod non fuit suus filius. Similiter etiam respondit matri suæ cum ipsum in eadem forma fortiter rogaret. Cumque quæreretur cujus esset filius si non erat suus, respondit indignanter et proterve, "Ego sum filius mei ipsius." Sic est de his, qui sunt proprii sensus et voluntatis.

Frater Haymo, cum esset provincialis Minister Angliæ, dixit quod quidam fluctus percusserunt Ordinem, quum fratres fecerunt dedicari in arcibus suis cantarias et altaria, quod scilicet non possunt post converti in usus prophanos. Tantus enim zelator paupertatis erat, ut in provinciali capitulo in habitu vilissimo et scisso sederet cum extremis in refectorio ad terram.<sup>1</sup>

COLLATIO XIV.

De Spirituali Profectu quorundam Fratrum.<sup>1</sup>

Postremo, memoriæ commendandum credo, quod adhuc viventibus plurimis, per quos plantata fuit vinea Minorum in provincia Anglicana, et in ipsa et in aliis provinciis propagines suæ creverunt in tantum quod ad diversas dignitates et officia tam in Ordine quam extra fratres proficerent, et ipsi præcipue qui amplius se humiliaverant. Nam Frater Nicholaus, qui cum laicus esset literas didicit in Anglia, postea confessor domini Papæ Innocentii IV., et postea episcopus Assisii factus est.<sup>2</sup> Quidam quoque puer tenerrimus, qui cum laicus receptus est, et postea gloriosa Virgine sibi apparente, et digitum suum in os suum ponente, in signum prædicationis et lectionis, non solum prædicator et lector egregius, sed etiam in regimine Ordinis præcipuus habitus est. Quis autem enumerare sufficeret quam singulariter profecerunt, qui in principio adventus fratrum singulari fervore intraverunt? Et cum essent boni bachelarii et genere nobiles caparonem probationis præcaverunt, et postea plures in prædicationis seu lectionis officio et Ordinis regimine tam strenue tamque laudabiliter se gesserunt.

Frater Eustacius de Merc primo diu gardianus Oxoniæ, postea custos Eboraci, usque ad mortem consuetum modum abstinentiæ, vigiliarum, et corporalis exercitationis in seipso, ad alios autem angelici affectus suavitatem semper habuit; moriens quoque Matrem Misericordiæ frequenter in hæc verba medullitus allocutus est: "Per tuum, Virgo, Filium, per Patrem, per Paraclitum, assis præsens ad obitum meum et summum exitum."

Frater Robertus de Tornam, primo gardianus Lenniæ, postea per multos annos custos Cantabrigiæ, postremo ineffabili fervore, impetrata licentia proficiscendi cum cruce signatis in Terram Sanctam, cum tamen incomparabilem tam sæcularium quam fratrum in officio gravi adquisisset, tantæ nobilis suæ salvationis in morte signa monstravit, ut de salute sua nullus fidelis ambigere debeat.

Frater Stephanus de Belase, primo gardianus Lenniæ, postea custos Herfordiæ, tantæ fuit dulcedinis tantæque perfectionis, ut etiam lachrymis zelum cordis sui testaretur, cum videret quod rigor religionis laxaretur. Unde nimio desiderio quietis ab omni absolutus officio, habuit fructum suum in sanctificationem, et finem vero vitam æternam.

Frater Will. Coche, qui cum fortissimus robore foret, per præmaturus labores custodiæ Londinensis et curas alias penitus exinanitus est. Ab activa tandem ad contemplativam se transtulit, et plenus operibus in pace quievit.

Frater Augustinus bonæ memoriæ Fratris W. de Notingham germanus, primo domini Innocentii Papæ IV. familiaris, postea cum nepote ejusdem domini Patriarcha Antiocheno in Syriam profectus, postremo episcopus Laodiceæ factus est. Hic retulit publice in conventu Londoniæ se fuisse apud Assisium in festo S. Francisci, et fuit ibi papa Gregorius, et cum procederet ad prædicandum cantabant fratres, Hunc Sanctus præcelegerat; et subrisit papa. Narravit autem papa in illa prædicatione qualiter apud Venetias duo heresiarchæ conversi sunt, et missi ad ipsum cum litteris cardinalium, qui ibi erant legati, continentibus quod ambo illi hæretici una nocte eadem hora viderunt Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum quasi in forma iudicii sedere cum apostolis suis, et omnibus ordinibus qui sunt in mundo; sed Fratres Minores nusquam viderunt ibi, nec Sanctum Franciscum, quem quidam legatorum in prædicatione dixerat Sancto Johanni Evangelistæ in stigmatum collatione prælatum. Viderunt autem ipsum Dominum Jesum reclinantem se in gremio Sancti Johannis et ipsum se vicissim in suo. Cumque pro certo crederent hoc sibi ad confirmationem suæ opinionis ostensum, siquidem blasphemasse putabant legatum, et inde graviter scandalizabantur et prædicationi detrahebant; ecce, dulcis Jesus aperuit manibus propriis ejus vulnus lateris sui, et apparuit S. Franciscus intra pectus suum apertissime; et clausit dulcis Jesus vulnus et ipsum totaliter inclusit interius. Igitur expegefacti hæretici in crastino sibi invicem obviassent; narraverunt sibi mutuo visionem, et cardinalibus publice confessi, ad papam, ut dictum est, missi sunt, et ab ipso plene reconciliati.<sup>1</sup>

Post prædicationem vero venerunt novi milites ad papam, et ipse singulis sertum de floribus imposuit; et inde inolevit consuetudo ut omnes qui debent milites fieri in festo illo arma recipiant. In illo festo papa celebravit extra ecclesiam super tabulam sub divo, quia non potuit esse in ecclesia præ multitudine populi.

Frater Petrus de Theukesbury, minister Alemanniæ, contra regem et legatum et plures falsos fratres, cooperante gratia Dei statum Ordinis defendit, in tantum, ut usque in plures provincias fama facti perveniret, et zelus veritatis invincibiliter probatus est. Ipse speciali dilectione domini Lincolniae<sup>1</sup> ditari meruit; a quo plura secreta sapientiæ frequenter audivit. Dixit enim ei aliquando, quod nisi fratres foverent studium et studiose vacarent legi divinæ, pro certo similiter contingeret de nobis, sicut de aliis religiosis, quos videmus in tenebris ignorantiae, proli dolor! ambulare.

Item dixit Fratri Joh. de Dya, quod provideret sibi sex vel septem idoneos clericos de partibus suis, quos posset beneficiare in ecclesia sua; qui scilicet quamvis nescirent Anglicum, exemplo prædicarent. Unde constat quod non recusavit eos quos Papa instituit et nepotes cardinalium, quia nesciebant linguam Anglicanam, sed quia non quærebant nisi temporalia. Unde cum diceret ei advocatus in curia, "Canones hoc volunt," respondit, "Imo, canes hoc volunt." Surrexit et confessus est Anglice, flexis genibus, coram personis præsentatis sibi a cardinalibus, et tundeat pectus suum cum fletu et ejulatu, et sic confusi recesserunt.

Præterea cum quæreret camerarius Domini Papæ mille libras, in quibus<sup>2</sup> visitaverat curiam, volens ut acciperet eas a mercatoribus, respondit quod "noluit dare eis occasionem peccandi mortaliter; sed si sospes veniret in Angliam, deponeret eas in templo Londoniæ, alioquin nunquam haberet obolum." Præterea dixit fratri prædicatori, "Tria sunt necessaria ad salutem temporalem, cibus, somnus, et jocus." Item injunxit cuidam fratri melancholico, ut biberet calicem plenum optimo vino pro penitentia, et cum ebibisset licet invitissime, dixit ei, "Frater carissime, si haberes frequenter “ conscientiam.” Item Frater Petrus narravit, quod tetc.

 cum clerici Sancti Edmundi archiepiscopi peterent pro quodam consanguineo suo, qui fuit veredarius, respondit sanctus, “ Si biga sua fracta est, propter “ reverentiam precum vestrarum faciam eam reparari ;
 “ quod si reparari non possit, emam sibi novam :
 “ sed pro certo noveritis, quod statum suum nun-“ quam mutabo.” Item dixit idem sanctus episcopus, cum offerentur sibi quaedam pretiosa jocalia, et moneretur a suis ut ea reciperet, respondit : “ Si pren“ derem, penderem ; inter prendere et pendere non est “ nisi una litera.”<sup>2</sup> Item idem pater Frater Petrus narravit, quod cum dominus Robertus Lincolniae episcopus in principio suae promotionis plurimum in-digeret equis, venit senescallus suus, cum sederet ad libros suos, et denunciavit ei, quod duo albi monachi venerant ad presentandum ei duos palefridos pulcher-rimos ; et cum infestus esset ei ut eos reciperet, et allegaret quod exempti essent, penitus non adquievit, nec movit se a loco, sed dixit, “ Si reciperem eos, “ traherent me per caudas suas in infernum.”

Dominus Robertus Grosseteste, Lincolniae episcopus, ita graviter offendebatur aliquando, quod Minister non permisit fratrem quemdam morari in hospicio suo, quem aliquando habuerat, quod noluit alicui fratri, nec etiam confessori suo loqui ; et tunc dixit ei Frater Petrus, quod si omnia bona sua daret fratribus, et non daret eis affectum cordis sui, fratres ea non curarent. Et incepit episcopus flere et dixit, “ Væ vos peccatores ! quia nimis affligitis me ; quia
 “ non possum non vos amare, etsi talem vultum “ vobis ostenderim ;” siquidem fratres in mensa sua comederent ad latus suum, et tamen noluit eis loqui.

Ipse dixit ei quod loca super aquam non sunt sana, nisi fuerint in sublimi sita. Item dixit quod valde sibi placuit quando vidit manicas fratrum repeciatas.

Item dixit quod piper parvum melius fuit quam zinziberum in salsa.

Item dixit quod gaudebat quando vidit quod scholares sui non cessabant<sup>1</sup> de lectione sua, dummodo ipse eam sollicitè providisset; quia scilicet deesset sibi occasio vanæ gloriæ, et non amitteret aliquid de merito suo.<sup>2</sup>

Narravit autem eidem patri<sup>3</sup> Frater Mansuetus, nuntius domini Papæ Alexandri IV., in eodem loco, quod eadem die qua lecta fuit litera in audientia, in qua decreverat dominus Innocentius IV. octo sententias contra Prædicatores et Minores, amisit loquelam, nisi quod postea dixit "propter iniquitatem" "corripuisti hominem;" et frequentissime invocavit S. Franciscum; nam et in sanitate sua dixerat quod nullius sancti fuerat expertus tot suffragia. Dominus autem Alexander IV., cum esset Hostiensis, prædixerat quod certus fuerat quod Dominus cito auferret papam de medio propter favorem quem præstitit contra Ordinem. Veruntamen in obitu suo omnes familiares sui deseruerunt eum, præter Fratres Minores. Et similiter Papam Gregorium, et Honorium, et Innocentium, in cujus obitu fuit præsentialiter S. Franciscus. Frater Mansuetus dixit quod eadem die electionis suæ suspendit dominus Alexander IV. literam quam dederat dominus Innocentius contra Prædicatores et Minores; et postea palam factum quod fecit Papa revocavit eam. Decreverat enim Innocentius quod essent excommunicati omnes fratres, si alicujus parochianum aliquo die festo ad audienda divina recipere, et similia. Dixit etiam dictus Frater Mansuetus quod nullus mendicus, ne dicam nullus homo, miserabilis et vilis moritur quam papa quicumque.

Dixit etiam quod quidam frater stans in oratorio in oratione in cilicio vidit maximum exercitum v. millia militum equitum intrantem mare; et crepuit mare quasi essent omnes ex aere candente; et dictum est ei ab uno eorum, quod fuit Fredericus imperator qui ivit in montem Ethicæ. Nam eodem tempore mortuus est Fredericus. A.D. 1250.

Narravit etiam idem Frater Mansuetus, quod cum esset puer circiter decem annorum, informatus fuit a fratribus minoribus ut eucharistiam præcipue veneraretur. Ut igitur die Paschæ digne posset communicare cum adhuc esset puerulus, jejunavit fere totam quadragesimam. Et ecce ipso die Paschæ cum totus populus communicaret accessit quidam sceleratissimus et infamissimus homo ad communionem, nomine Gethius;<sup>1</sup> et percepta communionem sine debita reverentia, statim divertit et sedit super banchum, et cœpit garrulare cum astantibus, non plus curans quam si morsellum panis in ore suo teneret. Et ecce vidit Frater Mansuetus eucharistiam exire ab ore suo et ad magnum spatium areæ transilire in terram; et statim accessit ad sacerdotem, virum scilicet valde venerabilem, et retulit ei quod viderat; et illico præcepit ut quæreret eucharistiam ubi descenderat; et cum quæreret mox invenit eam in eodem loco, cum tamen populus diutius transisset ad communionem per locum illum et redisset. Igitur idem puerulus dictam hostiam et omnes<sup>2</sup> quæ super altare consecratæ remanserant reverenter accepit, et ineffabiliter in fide confirmatus extitit.

fridi Le Despensyr, accidit ut veniret semel ad dictam domum, et venit filius dicti<sup>1</sup> domini, Johannes nomine, puerulus, et sicut semper consuevit accessit ad eum familiarissime. Cum autem dictus puer ivisset cum domina matre sua in capellam et astitisset dicto patri Petro celebranti, et domum ivisset<sup>2</sup> denuo, fugit dictum patrem, nec potuit ullo modo compelli a matre ut ad eum accederet. Cunque quæreret mater causam pro qua fugeret, dixit quod viderat eum devorare infantem in capella super altare, et timuit ne faceret sibi similiter.

Frater Garinus de Essewel,<sup>3</sup> qui juvenis satis intravit Ordinem, et postea in tantum profecit ut non sine multorum admiratione in pluribus locis solempniter legeret, et in familiaritate magnatum prudenter se gereret, et in negotiis Ordinis laudabiliter se haberet; in prædicationis officio et studio contemplationis incomparabiliter excresceret. Demum in<sup>4</sup> eadem hora nona in complexu et osculis crucifixi obiit coram altari Suthamptonæ. Apparuit autem apud Sarum quidam frater diu ante mortuus, nomine Frater Johannes, Fratri Symoni de Wymborne, et dixit se bene valere, et Fratrem Garinum sine omni mora transisse purgatorium et ivisse ad Dominum Jesum Christum.

Ad tantam quoque perfectionem provincia Anglicana provexerat, ut frequenter diceret Minister generalis, Frater Johannes de Parma, cum esset in Anglia: O utinam talis provincia posita esset in medio mundi, ut omnibus esse posset ecclesiis in exemplum! Ipse quidem Generalis provinciale capitulum Angliæ celebravit Oxoniæ, in quo confirmavit constitutiones provinciales de parsimonia et paupertate ædificiorum. Cunque dedisset fratribus optionem de Ministro provinciali confirmando vel absolvendo, petiverunt eum comuniter confirmari.

Dixit autem dictus Frater Willielmus aliquando quod cum dominus Lyncolniæ sanctæ memoriæ, tunc temporis actum legens apud fratres minores Oxoniæ prædicasset in capitulo fratrum de paupertate, et mendicitatem posuisset in scala paupertatis proximum gradum ad amplexum cœlestium, seorsum tamen dixit ei, quod adhuc fuit gradus quidam superior, scilicet vivere ex proprio labore; unde dixit quod Beginæ sunt perfectissimæ et sanctissimæ religionis, quia vivunt propriis laboribus, et non onerant exactionibus mundum.<sup>1</sup>

Dixit etiam memorabilis pater quod quidam novicius erat qui voluit facere abstinentiam, et dixit magistro, suo quod proposuit paulatim temptare quid posset. Magister autem suus concessit ei cum gaudio; et cum aliquamdiu incepisset, et semper requisitus a magistro, "bene se habere" dixisset, tandem incepit timere quod fieret debilis, et dixit hoc magistro suo, et ipse respondit: "Cito pro Deo comedas et bibas, aut deficies, quia deficit fides tua. Sic et Petrus metuens mersus est."

Præterea dixit quod oportebat considerare mentem Sancti Francisci et intentionem in regula, alioquin, sicut insensibiliter crescunt pili barbæ, sic crescent superfluitates in Ordine. Oportet<sup>2</sup> etiam niti contra fluctus sæculi supra quam necesse est, alioquin trahet nos inferius quam intendamus; sicut facit aqua volentes transire et directe tendentes ad ripam oppositam. Præterea dixit quod nescit homo, si molestum sit ei amoveri a loco, nisi per experientiam, sicut non advertit quod pili hærent capiti nisi cum trahuntur. Ipse in scripturis sacris studiosissimus erat et studentes studiose promovibat. In mensis extra refectorium lectionem semper habere volebat, et affectu specialissimo nomen Jesu venerabatur, et verba

Sancti Evangelii devotissime recolebat; unde et super unum ex quatuor Clementinis canones perutiles compilavit, et expositionem quam idem Clemens fecit complete scribi in ordine procuravit. In meditatione post matutinum præcipue diutissime sedit, nec confessionibus nec consiliis de nocte, sicut prædecessores sui fecerant, intendere voluit. Dixit etiam quod sicut pejus est dare falsam regulam in faciendo quicquam quam male facere, sic pejores sunt pravæ sententiæ circa facta ordinis quam imperfecta opera. Difficillime creditit eujusquam relationi nisi vellet coram pluribus dicere id quod denunciaret, et super omnia suspicionis vitium vitare curavit. Familiaritates magnatum et mulierum maximo studio declinavit, et etiam mirabili magnaumitate iras potentium pro justitia parvipendit. Dixit autem aliquando quod magnates sibi familiares suis consiliis illaqueant, et mulieres utpote mendaces et malitosæ suis blanditiis etiam devotos dementant. Diffamatorum famam reformare dummodo eos pœnitere perpenderet, omni diligentia studuit, et desolatorum corda confortare, præcipue in officiis ordinis existentium, summa sagacitate curavit.

Igitur postquam circiter novem annos provinciam Angliæ rexerat in capitulo Metensi absolutus est, et ex parte capituli generalis missus ad papam. Sed cum pervenisset cum Ministro generali Januam, et socius suus Frater Ricardus percussus fuisset pestilentia quæ supervenit, fugientibus aliis, propter solatium socii sui remansit, et similiter cum eo percussus est et mortuus. Fratres autem Angliæ, audito quod absolutus erat, et ignorantes ejus decessum, convocato provinciali capitulo reelegerunt eum. Quod cum Generalis minister audisset potius motu affectionis quam judicio rationis factum, convocato iterum per vicarium, scilicet Fratrem Gregorium de Bosellis, capitulo, mandavit ne alias absolutum per generale capitulum reeligerent; confirmationem tamen electi demandavit Fratri Johanni de Ketene, Fratri Adæ de Marisco, et Fratri Johanni de Stamfordia. Electus est autem Frater Petrus de Teukesbury et ibidem confirmatus. <sup>1</sup>In absoluteione Fratris Heliæ quæsitum fuit a Papa Gregorio si posset tunc iterum eligi, et respondit papa quod non.<sup>1</sup>

Cum vellent quidam fratres quod nullo modo contraherentur debita, dixit Frater Willielmus mihi quod non debuerunt fratres obligare se aliquo modo ad solutionem, nec tempus certum præfigere solutionis, sed poterant licite obligare suam sollicitudinem quod operam fidelem darent ut fieret solutio. Dixit etiam quod in centum casibus possent fratres licite contrahere debita. Dixit quoque quod non peccaret frater si per manum suam dispensaret pecuniam alienam in eleemosyna.

William of

Dixit insuper quod oportuit eum post visitationem ludere parum ut averteret memoriam ab auditis. Ipse dixit mihi quod suscicaret dulcis Jesus Ordinem novum ad excitationem nostram, quod puto impletum in Ordine de Pœnitentia Jesu Christi. Nam fratres de Ordine Sancti Augustini prius fratribus recommendaverat in capitulo Stamfordiæ; fratres quoque de Ordine de Carmelo, quos dominus Ricardus de Grey in Angliam duxit, cum rediret comes Ricardus a Syria, in familiaritatem fratrum nostrorum ubique diu ante receperat. Fratres autem de ordine Trinitatis, quos magister theologus Johannes, apparente sibi Christo Jesu, cum celebraret, præsentem episcopo Parisiensi et clero sub Innocentio III. divinitus instituit, diu ante venerunt in Angliam.<sup>2</sup>

Frater Willielmus dixit quod cum diutius moraretur in conventu Romæ et fratres nullam pitantiam habe-

rent, nisi castaneas, ita impinguatus est ut plurimum erubesceret. Præterea dixit mihi quod cum nutriretur in domo patris sui, et venirent plurimi pauperes precantes elemosynas, dedit eis de pane suo, et accepit frustum ab eis, quia videbatur ei quod suavior fuit panis durus, qui petebatur pro amore Dei quam delicatus quo ipse vesebatur et sodales sui, unde ut suum tam suavem facerent, ibant pueruli et petebant ab invicem pro amore Dei.

Frater Petrus recepit primo fratres de Pœnitentia Jesu Christi, et recommendavit in capitulo Londonsensi; qui in provincia tempore concilii Lugdunensis ortum habuerunt, per quemdam novicium qui expulsus erat. Tertio anno administrationis Fratris Petri venerunt fratres de Ordine Martyrum in Angliam, quorum fundator erat quidam Martinus, qui fuerat Parisius quasi fatuus nobilium Alemannie.<sup>1</sup>

Liberet si liceret occasionem salutarem salutis dispensatori, quanquam imperito sermone, tamen affectione sollicita, in tantis salutarium causarum cogentiis qualitercunque subinducere. Sed quid? Conceptum sermonem quis tenere poterit? Sit Altissimo Salvatore superexaltata benedictio, qui salvandis animabus contra tam nefaria periculosorum temporum facinora ad metropolitanam tantæ sedis celsitudinem sublimavit archipresulem, quem et dignitas inclyti generis et pii pectoris humilitas, innocentiae placida suavitas et sedulitas serena benevolentiae, sobrietatis decor eximius et insigne decus castitatis, rectitudinis æmulatio et detestatio pravitatis, titulis clarissimis insignire conspiciuntur. Igitur quam legendum fore constabit cunctis sæculis si non tam fulgens lucerna in tam spectabile candelabrum culminis ecclesiastici divinitus collocata, et valida virtute, et splendida discretione, et fervida dilectione, luceat omnibus qui in domo Dei sunt. Quod dumtaxat fieri valebit divinitate propitia, si specialis ille sacerdotum æmulator cum effectu audiatur, qui primatem pontificum alloquens ait: "De cætero oportere te esse, " considera, formam justitiæ, sanctimonie speculum, " pietatis exemplar, assertorem veritatis, fidei defen- " sorem, doctorem gentium, amicum sponsi, sponsæ " paranympum, cleri ordinatorem, plebun pastorem, magistrum insipientium, refugium oppressorum, " pauperum advocatum, miserorum spem, tutorem " pupillorum, judicem viduarum, oculum cæcorum, " linguam mutorum, baculum senum, ultorem scele- " rum, malorum metum, bonorum gloriam, virgam " potentium, regis patrem, sal terræ, omnibus lumen, " sacerdotem Altissimi, vicarium Christi, Christum " Domini."

Sed numquid hæc sic se habere poterunt si non indefessa satagat vigilantia, ut inseparabiliter assistant et validi adjuutores, et consilarii fideles, et mundi ministeriales, et iudices justis? Proinde foras fiant necesse est pestes ecclesiæ pernecabiles,<sup>1</sup> contra quas propheta tam terribilia contorquet fulmina, illos condemnabiliter reprobans quos inflat pompatici fastus ambitio, quos lacerat mobilis affluentiae conquisitio, quos inquinat fœdantis lasciviae colluvio, quos absorbet inexplebilis concupiscentiae vorago. Ubi dicit Isaias, lv. g. : “Omnes bestiae agri venite ad devorandum ; universæ bestiae saltus. Speculatores ejus cæci omnes, nescientes universi, canes muti non valentes latrare, videntes vana, dormientes et amantes somnia, et canes impudentissimi nescierunt saturitatem. Ipsi pastores ignoraverunt intelligentiam, omnes in viam declinaverunt unusquisque ad avaritiam suam a summo usque ad novissimum. Venite sumamus vinum, et impleamur ebrietate, et erit hodie sicut et cras, et multo amplius.” Licet certe nihil actum esse dignoscitur, nisi ante omnia illud impleatur in opere salvifico quod sub tam salutari oratione impetravit legislator, sic inquit, Numeri xxvii. e. : “Provideat Dominus Deus spirituum omnis carnis hominem qui sit super multitudinem hanc, et possit exire et intrare ante eos, et educere illos et introducere, ne sit populus Domini sicut oves absque pastore.”

Ex quibus liquet quod cum singulis ovilibus juris dominici fuerit pastor providendus, oportet homo secernatur a bestia. Quis autem sit homo? Ostendit quod dicit : “Faciamus hominem ad imaginem<sup>2</sup> et similitudinem nostram.” Igitur homo est qui non tam naturaliter factus est ad imaginem, sed etiam gratuito reformatus est ad Dei similitudinem ; factus quidem ad imaginem ingeniti Patris per memoriam mentis gignentem, ad imaginem unigeniti Filii per intelligentiam rationis genitam, ad imaginem procedentis Paracliti per amorem voluntatis procedentem. Reformatus vero ad Dei similitudinem cum est in mentis memoria æterna Patris paritas, cum est in rationis intelligentia vera Filii claritas, cum est in voluntatis amore sancta Paracliti tranquillitas. Soli ergo homini, tam sic condito per naturam, quam sic reformato per gratiam, mundi creaturis præesse jussit auctoritas divina; cum priusquam præmisit: "Faciamus hominem ad imaginem et similitudinem nostram;" subjunxit consequenter: "et præsit piscibus maris et volatilibus cœli et bestiis terræ, universisque creaturis."

Annon inexplicabiliter excellentior est universitas cœlestis ecclesiæ quam universitas mundialis creaturæ? Quamobrem si tum<sup>1</sup> homo, sic per divinum diffinitus eloquium, dominari debet in regno mundi, quanto magis præter hunc talem nullatenus quis principari valet in regno cœli. Iste etenim solummodo super subjectam plebium multitudinem, et per patrocinium potentiæ, et per consilium sapientiæ, et per solatium benevolentiae, lege recti regiminis esse cognoscitur; propter quod postquam monstravit animabus præficiendum hominem, adjunxit "qui sit super multitudinem hanc."

Quid autem eidem incumbat indeficienti satagere vigilantia subinfert, "et possit exire et intrare ante eos." Exire quidem ad ministerium prædicationum, ad exempla operationum, ad dispensationem sacramentorum. Intrare vero in cubiculum orationis, in secretarium meditationis, in sanctuarium contemplationis. tificalis excellentiæ fastigium, secundum arduos evangelicæ sanctionis ascensus sublimer est evocata; præsertim diebus pessimis periculosissimi temporis, cum conspiciantur, prohi nefas! pæne per universum orbis Christiani spatium, qui salutis operandæ cœleste ministerium sunt assecuti, et altissimam dignitatem, et clarissimam veritatem, et suavissimam sanctitatem, in fastum pompaticæ potestatis, in quæstum evanidæ facultatis, in luxum sordidæ voluptatis, tanto detestabilius quanto damnabilius, heu! heu! heu! detorquere. Propter quod contra regnum Dei usquequaquam sæculis omnibus inaudita, quasi abysso rupta et soluto Satana, omniformis grassatur immanitas; hinc concutientibus sævientium violentiis, hinc seducentibus fraudantium fallaciis, hinc dissipantibus schismaticorum pertinaciis, hinc subvertentibus hæreticorum versutiis, adeo ut quasi plus cognoscimus in horrendis rerum evidentiis, quam ex oraculis vatum formidandis conjicimus, et depopulationem animarum inestimabilem, et inexplicabilem corporum stragem, insiccabili lacrima jugiter lugeat electorum pia congregatio.

Annon ruinas istas in manu prælatorum sustinet ecclesia, qui non tantum irritam facientes legem Moysis sine ulla miseratione moriuntur, verum et deteriora merentur supplicia, conculcantes Filium Dei, et pollutum ducentes sanguinem Testamenti in quo sanctificati sunt, et Spiritui gratiæ contumeliam facientes? Hi sunt enim quos execrans Isaias ait: “ Omnes bestię agri, venite ad devorandum; omnes bestię saltus; speculatores ejus omnes cæci; nesciunt universi, canes muti, non valentes latrare, videntes vana, dormientes, clamantes somnia; et canes impudentissimi nescierunt saturitatem; ipsi pastores ignoraverunt intelligentiam; omnes in viam suam declinaverunt, unusquisque ad avaritiam a summo usque ad novissimum. Venite sumamus vinum et impleamur ebrietate, et erit sicut hodie sic et cras,

 “ Judices domus Israel, qui abominamini iudicium, “ et omnia recta pervertitis; qui ædificatis Sion in “ sanguinibus, et Jerusalem in iniquitate: principes “ ejus in muneribus iudicabant, et sacerdotes ejus in “ mercede docebant, et prophetæ ejus in pecunia divi“ nabant, et super Dominum requiescebant, dicentes: “ Numquid non Dominus in medio nostrum? Non “ venient super nos mala propter hoc causa vestri?
 “ Sion quasi ager arabitur, et Jerusalem quasi acervus “ lapidum erit, et mons templi in excelsa silvarum.”

Quid igitur restat? Nisi ut inter tam formidanda ruentis ecclesiæ discrimina, electionis divinæ sacer pontifex beatissimum imitatus apostolum, in purissimis orationibus, in clarissimis meditationibus, in sanctissimis contemplationibus, mente quidem excedat Deo, sobrius quoque sit populo, in eloquiis vitæ, in exemplis innocentiae, in charismatibus gloriæ; in illo divina inclinans ad humana, in isto humana elevans ad divina. Ita videlicet ut cum diviniissimo Legislatore singulari prerogatam formam piorum præsulum præferente, vices ascendendi in montem et descendendi ad planitiem indefessa frequentans jugitate, in illo sublimetur ad divinitatis consortium, in isto humilietur ad humanitatis officium. Et cum sit angelus Domini exercituum in scala Jacob, nunc ascendens causam<sup>1</sup> mundi præferens ad Altissimum, nunc descendens clementiam Altissimi referens ad mundum, in illo consideret ordinem cœli, in isto ponet rationem ejus in terra. Hæc sunt certe ut vestra<sup>2</sup> melius novit cruditorum<sup>2</sup> industria, pater serenissime, quæ in districtissima formidandi examinis exactione inflexibili censura requirentur ab iis, qui ad horribilem altitudinem ecclesiastici regiminis sunt sublimati. the troubles of the times.

Non video quid cogat ut citius veniam, quam nunquam petivi, nisi vestræ jussionis urgentia, cum nec sit aliquatenus verisimile quod dominus Wygorniae ante instantem diem nativitatis Domini ad vos sit venturus; nec sicut post frequentem sperandum est experientiam, benedicta sit gloria Domini de loco suo, in causis salutaribus propter semetipsum vobis sit defuturus Spiritus consilii et fortitudinis, cum patientia et consolatione Scripturarum. Et si quid in me poterit consilii aut consolationis, quarum meministis in littera, numquid non præsto sum, cum hoc aut utilitas requirit aut compellit necessitas? Si nec corporis fatigatio, nec laceratio spiritus, quas in cunctis retro diebus, ita quod vix respirare licuit, sine intermissione, cum tantis anxietatis detrimentis, etiam nuperrime perpressus sum, nec onus intolerabile et importabile jugum, quorum mihi celeriter illud assumendum, subeundum istud, si officium eruditionis impendendæ post paucos dies debeam resumere, vacationi meæ provideri deprecant, vestræ judicet paternitatis circumspectio.

O frontosam rabiem! O pestem perniciosam, quibus heu! heu! diebus his pessimis, fasque nefasque confundentibus, et Dei hæreditas dissipatur, et polluitur templum sanctum ejus. Stupenda est belluinæ voracitatis virosa malignitas, quæ nec Dominum timet nec hominem reveretur; fiduciam habens quod influat Jordanes in os ejus.<sup>1</sup> Sed una vobiscum spero de misericordia ipsius cujus est opera gratiæ suæ non deserere, quousque compleverit, et illa de potestate tenebrarum eripere, quod divitias quas devoravit evomet, et de ventre illius extrahet illas Deus. Non cesso admirari, quamvis dudum mihi non incognitam, insatiabilem atrocis fraudulentæ cupiditatem, præter quam, prohi nefas! hodie nusquam acceptum aliquid, nusquam aliquid celebre conspiciamus. Sed quid? Postquam effrenata tyrannide solutus Sathanas debacchatur in animas, et non est qui recogitet, puto voces supprimendas, exprimendas lacrymas secundum illud prophetæ: “Quis dabit capiti meo aquam? et oculis meis fontem lacrymarum? et plorabo die ac nocte interfectos filiæ populi mei.” Quod sic fiat,<sup>1</sup> quia per apostolum veritas hoc loquitur: “Conteret Dominus Sathan sub pedibus vestris velociter.” Vagatus est in incertum cordis disturbati calamus.

præsentati, quid aliud aget pii præsulatus sancta sollicitudo, quam ut per sollicitam cœlestium eloquiorum exhortationem, anxiori diligentia, satagat illos, eripere de potestate tenebrarum mundialium et transferre in regnum Filii dilectionis æternæ. Absit a me pro ea quam dicunt promotione præsentis præsentati, aut talis cujuscunque, in causa simili, pontificis interpellere aliquatenus auctoritatem; cui certe licet super hoc sollicitatus fuisset, plane sum protestatus, quod nequaquam pro eo, nec pro quoquam in hac parte petitionem porrigerem, quem non præsumerem rationabiliter posse scire et velle, secundum immutabilia salutaris evangelii decreta, operandæ salutis in suscipiendis animabus, juxta pium pastoralis officii regimen, indefesso superintendere patrocinio. Præsertim cum in periculum mei capitis hoc facerem; et sicut indubitanter affirmavi, vestræ sanctitatis reverentia contra causas salvatoris æque supplicantiem suscipiat et provocantem. Verumptamen hoc satis terret, quod si iste sicut eidem suasi, a suæ præsentationis vocali jure recedat, cum, proh dolor! terra data sit in manus impiorum, per homines feris omnibus immaniores in animas, et insensibiliores cunctis lapidibus ad spiritualia, greges dominici universis bestiis, tam agri quam saltus, exponentur ad devorandum. autem putavi scribere vobis acta dictæ diei, pro eo quod memoratus dominus Symon qui toto tractatu bono modo sedulus interfuit ea plenius intimanda vestræ circumspectioni suscepit. Dominus Deus assit ecclesiæ suæ necessitatibus diebus istis, quibus dolemus indesinenter, efferatori mendaciorum evidentium pervicacia, impios tantummodo de suæ feritatis vehementia insanientes, conculcare justiores se. Remitto dominationi vestræ abbreviationem illam quam scripsistis de principatu regni et tyrannidis sicut misistis signatam signo comitis Leycestriæ. Dominus comes Leycestriæ si contingat eum maturius redire in Vasconiam, deliberatione cum domina comitissa et mecum super hoc habita, proponit primogenitum suum Henricum ad vestram remittere paternitatem, ut dum ætas est ei tenerior sub vestræ sanctitatis patrocinio, sicut hactenus Domino dante, proficiat per tempus aliquantum, quoad fieri poterit, in doctrina litterarum et morum disciplina. Si autem dictus comes moretur in Anglia, juxta pietatis vestræ salutare consilium, aliter de puero memorato disponere proponit. Dixit mihi comes Leycestriæ non ferens quasi vestrum examen<sup>1</sup> declinare, quod plus desiderat ut prævia veritate et inoffensa justitia, per vestri solius ordinationem controversia contingens homines suos de Leycestria sicut vestræ visum fuerit disertitudini conquiescat, quam ut in hac parte ordinationi illorum trium, qui nominati sunt, videlicet domini archidiaconi Oxoniæ,<sup>2</sup> domini J. de Crakhale, magistri Roberti de Wynkele, negotium committatur terminandum. Non bene novi utrum plus expediat. Verumtamen perspectis pluribus circumstantiis, ut video, securius erit quod factum memoratum dictorum sapientum, sicut provisum est, committatur discretioni definiendum. Fiat super hoc ut vobis fuerit cœlitus inspiratum.

salutare responsum. Ad cætera quæ mandastis dabitur opera, prout divinitus concedetur. Locutus est mihi comes Leycestriæ super saluberrimo triumphalis magnificentiæ proposito liberandis animabus, cordi vestro cœlitus immisso, qui supra quam a multis credi posset, illud extollit, laudat, et amplectitur, ut video, ardenti promptitudine grandium conceptuum ad id ipsum secundum consilia cœlestia paratus, se cum complicibus suis, si tamen inveniantur, constanter accingere. Verum de personæ vestræ corporali imbecillitate maxime sollicitus asserit quod non videt qualiter tanta difficultatum discrimina personaliter aggredi valeatis. Sed quid convenientius quam ut Dominus Deus spirituum omnis carnis, in debilitate carnali et spirituali robore, liget Behemoth ancillis suis qui infirma mundi eligit ut fortia quæque confundat; vetus ars hæc est omnipotentis sapientiæ, ut inde Satanæ subigatur pervicacia, unde amplius se erigit ipsius insolentia. Licet per varias causas obtenderit serenissima vestræ circumspectionis industria quominus inter mortales inveniatur qui vobiscum comitetur, audiamus ipsum, qui divinissimo illi prophetae, tamen ut reor humanitus aliquid perpresso, et relictum se solum conquerenti, "Derelinquam, inquam, mihi " in Israel septem millia virorum, quorum genua non " sunt incurvata ante Baal;" quique eripiendis animabus contrivit portas æreas et vectes ferreos confregit. Quid ergo? Numquid relinquetur locus hæsitationi quin idem ipse, contritis obsistentiis et repugnantiis confractis, quantumcunque desperabilium importunitatum, et vias patefaciat, et per avia dirigat, et aspera complanet, multitudini credentium in ipsum, quorum est cor unum et anima una, quibusque hæc est victoria quæ vincit mundum, fides nostra. Per ipsum nihil est invincibile, ut ad coronam vitæ victoriosam, et inter mortis discrimina quanto laboriosius tanto felicius pertingatur. Subsistentem stylum attraxit materia salutaris.

The Earl is much pleased with the Bishop's design.

Munchen-

Allocutus fui dominum Varynum de Munchensy<sup>1</sup> de nota propter quam citatus est, ut coram vobis compareat, et de conjuge sua secundum legitimas sacramenti matrimonialis exigentias, ut decet, tam honeste quam honorifice deinceps tractanda; qui pollicitus est hoc se Domino dante de cetero facturum. Acepi autem per testimonium plurimum merito credibile, ejusdam in spirituali necessitudine arctius constricti, qui propter speciale familiaritatis contubernium ipsius domini Warini et secretam et publicam melius novit conversationem, sub multiplici juramentorum assertionem, licet judicem movere non debeat, hujusmodi excusatio, eundem dominum Warinum a crimine sibi objecto penitus esse liberum. Sic qualitercunque res se habeat, credo consultum erit, ut per provisivam paternitatis vestræ sollicitudinem erroribus excessuum in posterum caveatur; et de consilio prudentum tanti proceris pareatur verecundiæ, tam elementi processu servata justitia, ut censura non frangat quod flectit clementia.

Doceat vos de omnibus clara quæ nunquam marcescit sapientia omnium sæculorum perpeti moderamine, profugans errores et excessus emendans. Meminerit vestri in bonum qui solus est bonus, benedictus Dei Filius, qui elementi bonitate incarceratis, capitali damnatione periclitantibus, perpensiori gratia prospicere voluistis in tam gratiosam absolutæ liberationis misericordiam. Conservetur optanda vestræ beatitudinis incolunitas in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine. De libro ethicorum gratia vestri bene factum est ut mihi videtur.

<sup>1</sup> The sixth baron died in 1255. It appears by the Fine Roll, 39 Hen. III., that his wife's name was Dionysia, who outlived him. A curious entry occurs in the Fine Roll, 19 Hen. III., giving this Dionysia, then widow of Walter de Langton, leave to marry whomever she pleased. She finds as her surety for the fine, this Warin de Munchensy.

Domino Lincolnicæ Frater Ada.

Cum venissem Oxoniam locutus fui cum magistro Johanne le Gracius, viro perspicacis ingenii et eloquii convenientis, eminentis litteraturæ et conversationis honestæ, secundum quod ostendunt tam rerum evidentie quam testimonia laudabilium. Qui licet vestræ dominationis dignitatem longe præferat cæteris ecclesiæ prælatis, ut eidem quanta subjectæ devotionis fide valet obsequatur, tamen non consentit ob causas plurimas, plurimum judicio plurimum rationabiles, curæ animarum quam suscepit renunciare, nec scholastica exercitia intermittere, quousque in jure canonico vel civili officium eruditionis impendendæ assumpserit, et sibi divinitus concessam juris illius vel istius scientiam aliis docendo communicaverit. Dixit autem quod si vestro sederit beneplacito, dum moratur studens in universitate Oxoniæ, vobis erit intendens in negotiis vestris, et ecclesiæ vestræ per se et per suos complices, prout valuerit, vigilantia sollicitudine; accessurus postmodum efficacius ad familiare ministerium vestrum, cum opportune ipsum vocare volueritis, completo proposito suo in scholasticis exercitiis, in quibus erit pro vobis, Domino dante, jugiter prout fieri poterit bono modo. Locutus sum etiam cum magistro Reginaldo de Stokes, medico, viro maturo et honesto, in artibus et in medicina provecto et experto, quem et conversatio socialis, et circumspecta discretio, et sermo maturus, et timorata devotio, juxta fide dignorum assertionem, plurimum reddit acceptum. Iste est in quem ad servitium vestræ dominationis evocandum animus meus amplius consentit, nisi alium eidem præponendum vobis Dominus insinuaverit.

J. le Gracius declines the bishop's invitation.

Hic jussionibus vestris paratus est obtemperare, secundum consilium vobis in Domino devotorum. Librum ethicorum Aristotelis quem scribi fecistis vestri gratia, ad opus religiosissimi viri fratris Hugonis de Berions, vobis inter mortales specialissime devoti, si miseritis ad locum fratrum minorum Londini, magister Petrus rector ecclesiæ de Wymbledon, medicus dominæ reginæ, vir excellentis litteraturæ et magnæ probitatis, de provincia oriundus, ipsum procurabit fideliter et secure transmitti, ex parte vestra, memorato fratri Hugoni, si vestro sederit beneplacito. Super hoc bonum erit maturare quod vestræ visum erit discretioni.

Conservetur desideranda vestræ beatitudinis incolunitas in Christo Jesu semper et beatissima Virgine.

Super iis omnibus vestrum, si placet, mihi rogo insinuetis beneplacitum, cum sic expedire censueritis. Si maturaveritis mittere librum Ethicorum Londinum, sicut prædictum est, per prædictum magistrum Petrum, qui utinam vobis esset cognitus et familiaris, maturius mittetur. Sic conveniret<sup>1</sup> ut æstimo fratri Hugoni de Beryonz.

Postquam recessi a vobis scripsi a Northamptona aliquot diebus ante purificationem Beatæ Virginis contra presbyterum illum pestilentem, qui frontosi furoris pervicacia, obsistente sibi Salvatore animarum, conatur pervadere regimen animarum in vicaria de Blokkesham. Scripsi, inquam, contra ipsum cum Deo, ut arbitor indubitanter, magistro Eustachio de Len,<sup>2</sup> officiali Cantuariæ, et pro re promovenda fratri Thomæ de Eboraco,<sup>3</sup> subjectissimo reverentiæ vestræ famulo, strenuo, discreto, et benevolo, et in omnibus quæ ad salutem spectant animarum audenti<sup>4</sup> vigore coelitus inflammato, mittens eisdem nihilominus tenorem processus habiti coram vobis in facto dicti pres-

Feria secunda post purificationem Beatæ Virginis venerunt dominus rex et domina regina Oxoniam. Ubi occasione duorum clericorum pro suis delictis incarceratorum, egit universitas scholarium apud dominum regem, ut per Cancellarium pro quocunque excessu vel facinore, clerici comprehensi et requisiti liberentur de carcere regio et reddantur Cancellario; quia<sup>2</sup> dominus rex concessit eis hoc fieri in delictis illis, in quibus Cancellarius vicem gerens episcopi potest exhibere justitiam, condignas pœnas infligendo. In atrocibus autem criminibus, in quibus requiritur aut depositio aut degradatio, nullatenus concessit ut reddantur incarcerati clerici nisi episcopo, vel ejus officiali, vel vicario ad hoc constituto; propter quod adhuc in confectione præsentium magna fuit contentions seditio inter juniores et seniores universitatis, illis nequaquam acceptantibus, istis vero multum approbantibus, in hac parte, dictam formam regiæ concessionis. Liberavit dominus rex præfatos clericos duos

Feria quinta post purificationem, licet promitteret eis dominus rex quod haberet colloquium cum prælatis et proceribus suis super dictam petitionem scholarium, et quod de eorum consilio, aut secundum formam petitam, aut per aliam competentem, eis provideret quoad fieri posset inoffensa justitia regni et ecclesiæ, quod super his futurum est in brevi postmodum scietur.

Perseverat domina regina, benedictio sit Altissimo, in salutari proposito suo, super præsentationem illorum, quos ad salutis ministerium evocavit, constanter, sapienter, et diligenter, ut res expostulat, satagens in hac parte conceptam Dei voluntatem adimplere, pro qua, si placet, quod et semper facitis, Salvatorem vigilantius interpelletis. Conservet vos in difficillimo salutis ministerio his diebus damnatissimis sapientia Altissimi, attingens a fine usque ad finem fortiter, et disponens omnia suaviter. Singulos articulos eorum quæ præscripta sunt, licet mihi non satis vacaret, vobis ex singulis singulorum causis insinuavi.

On the subject.

Vehemens inundatio anxiorum negotiorum, cujus primitus in littera meministis, pietati fidelium consternationis horrorem incuteret, si non insuperabilem fidei sublevatæ fiduciam afferret, quod apostolicæ strenuitatis pavida sollicitudo salubriter excitat, quasi sopiti Salvatoris, retentam sententiam, per quam omnipotenti summæ majestatis imperio reprimuntur venti dæmonialium nequitiarum, et mare malignitatis humanæ per-domatur, ut fiat ordinis reformati beata tranquillitas. Numquid aliquando et non perenniter: "Ecce," inquit, "vobiscum sum usque ad consummationem sæculi?" Sit clementissimo Dei Filio supersæculariter altissima benedictio.

Concessit divinitas propitia per sedulam sanctitatis vestræ pietatem sedari commotionum turbines in universitate Oxoniæ, ad honorem Dei et utilitatem studentium. Plurimum credo fore salutiferam visitationem quam in domo Godestowe fieri fecistis. Paternitatis vestræ sollicitudinem largitio divina remuneret.<sup>1</sup> Vos melius nostis qualia frequentius reportantur de inquisitionibus factis per capitula ruralia super præsentationibus q. .<sup>2</sup> cumque. Videtur autem mihi bene processum esse in facto sacerdotis præsentati ad vicariam de Blokkesham, qui ut ex probabili assertionem accepi in Hybernia sacerdos ordinatus est, non plus circiter decem annis postmodum elapsis. Et ideo ipsum ad vestram requisitionem factam in jure super sua ordinatione constat mentitum esse, utpote plane dicentem se ordinatum fuisse in sacerdotem a domino Sarum tempore antecessoris vestri. Consulo vero ut nisi renunciare velit juri quod habere videtur, omnimodis prorogetur negotium ejus usque post instans natale Domini, aut in omne tempus per exceptiones quæ abundare cognoscuntur. Spero enim quod Dominus dabit opportunitates congruas repellendi pestilentem, quominus irrumpat sanctuarium Dei. Insinuatum est mihi quod fornicationis prolem suscitaverit in villa quæ dicitur Bereford prope Blokkesham, cum ibidem divina ministraret, infamem obscenæ conversationis vitam agens ante pauca tempora.

Id quod auditum est de vicario ecclesiæ Sancti Egidii multos misit in admirationem. Item scripsi non sine damnis imminetibus ancipitem pendere expectationem in administratione plena rerum vestra-

Ab eo quod visum est de honoratione virginis desponsandæ discretis quos consuluistis ego non recedo. Mihi consultum foret sicut video ad quietem corporalem et mentalem vacationem ut in instanti natalicio Domini in partibus Oxoniæ remanerem. Quod si fieri dominationi vestræ non displiceret, optarem illud mihi insinuari; sin autem, indigeo mitti evectiones ut feria quinta proxima ante diem Nativitatis versus vos iter arripere valeam. Domino Lincolnie Frater Ada.

Mitissimi cordis propensiori gratiæ, quod exilitatis meæ qualiscunque devotio non sufficit, satisfaciat, oro, inæstimabilis clementiæ sempiterna retributio. Expresses his anxiety to go into retreat. Contristavit me sermo sapientialis, quem cartæ mihi transmissæ censuistis inserendum, cum eo quod subjunxit non tam conceptus veritatis quam humilitatis affectus; præmisistis enim, "Si verum est, quod nemo eligeret vivere sine amicis," adjicientes, "cum ego ut scis sine amici præsentia sim, aut homo non sum, sed brutum aliquod solivagum, quod solitudo delectat, aut tædet animam meam vitæ meæ." Certe verum est quod nemo eligeret vivere sine amicis. Nempe quicumque secluditur ab amicitiae contubernio, quae est mutua benevolentia in contrapassis, se ipsos videlicet a se invicem vera jucunditate suscipientibus, sui ipsius secundum optimum sui detrimento inexplicabili cognoscitur cruciari, et plus agere animum quam anima vivere convincitur, quia de amici vitali praesentia non laetatur.

Sed numquid putabimus hominem, idcirco sic dictum quia secundum intellectualem subsistentiam creatum, secundum decoram imaginem formatum, secundum sanctam similitudinem renovatum,<sup>1</sup> amicorum carere solatio, quem conciliat cum viventis Dei Filio individuum vitae consortium? qui secundum scripturam permanens in se omnia innovat, et per nationes in animas sanctas se transfert,<sup>2</sup> amicos Dei et prophetas constituit. Interpellat quoque Patrem: "Pater sancte," inquit, "serva eos in nomine tuo quos dedisti mihi, ut sint unum sicut et nos." Exauditus quoque pro sua reverentia subjunxit, dicens: "Et ego claritatem quam tu dedisti mihi dedi eis, ut sint unum sicut et nos uni sumus: Pater, quos dedisti mihi volo ut ubi sum ego et illi sint mecum; ut videant claritatem meam, quam dedisti mihi, quia dilexisti me ante constitutionem mundi." Respiciunt haec proprie ad electas animas; ad caelestes animos congrue refertur illud: "Ubicunque fuerit corpus ibi congregabuntur et aquilae." Et alibi: "Millia millium ministrabant ei et decies millies centena millia assistebant ei."

Num igitur quaeso dici poterit veri nominis homo, quem et perenne desiderium et studium caeleste, non tam electis animabus, quam caelestibus animis, in Dei Filio et consociat et aduat, amicorum superfelici destitutus præsentia, ut juxta superiorem sententiæ vestræ seriem, aut solivagium bruti fateamur, aut queramus animæ tædium? Cæterum cedat interim obsecro dilectio rationi, et concedat provisiva dispensationis vestræ dignatio, ut proficiscentibus vobis in salutis operationem ad partes septentrionis, exiguitatis meæ, prout fuerit propitia divinitas, ad profectum interioris hominis homo vacet exterior, et a placida dominationis vestræ pietate, hoc pro præcipuo muneris beneficio eximii suscipiam. Aspirante quippe Spiritu Sancto præsentiam spiritualem corporalis absentia nunquam valebit excludere. Cogito me in locum aliquem opportuniæ tranquillitatis transferre, quousque firmi<sup>1</sup> moderaminis sospes prosperitas vos reduxerit ibidem mansurum. Non pigeat precor super his quod vestro sederit beneplacito ut noveritis et volueritis insinuare.

Quam periculosum erit ni fallor si non ad honorem Divini nominis, et humanæ salutis incrementum, articulos illos personam vestram, ecclesiam vestram, domum vestram, populum vestrum contingentes, super quibus nuper habitum est colloquium, vestræ disertitudinis validæ virtutis auctoritate ad salutaris exitus consummationem, sine cujuslibet moræ dispendio, perducere vigilantissime satagatis. Præstet oro vobis altissimi<sup>2</sup> Dei patrociniū, præsidium Angelorum, Sanctorum adjutorium, suffragium sacramentorum, contra sævientia formidandæ malignitatis molimina, ad illum finem universa sanctitatis opera referre, ubi est Deus omnia in omnibus æternitate certa et pace perfecta.

Quid sibi volunt pastorum cunei, cum conspiratione populorum clerum, ut audimus, in regno Franciæ effrenata rabie pervadentes, non sine stupore cogitari potest sicut reor. De quibus expresse non scribo, conjiciens quod ad auditum vestrum relatio tam horrenda pervenerit.

Quod volui jamdudum sed nunc demum valeo longanimi vestræ sanctitatis expectationi, processum habitum his diebus in curia domini regis, super negotiis Vasconiæ, inclytum comitem Leycestriæ contingentibus, tenore præsentium summam innotesco.

"Princesses." I. 447.

Siquidem circa festum ascensionis Domini accesserunt ad præsentiam domini regis, in multitudine numerosa, Vascones tam clerici quam laici, coram domino rege, prælatis et baronibus, maliciosi mendaciorum compositionibus dictum comitem effrænati impetentes, super vexationibus, spoliationibus, fraudationibus, oppressionibus, et fere usque ad festum Beati Barnabæ hoc modo nequitiarum suarum molimina, die ac nocte, occulte ac publice, impudentiori rabie continuantes. Quibus favor et audientia solemniter et private, non sine suggestionibus iniquitatis, jugiter sunt concessi, stupentibus universis præcipue justitiam et æquitatem æmulantibus. Insuper et idem comes convicia et contumelias a domino rege coram multis et magnis, immoderatiore vociferatione, frequenter interim est perpressus, per omnia moderantiam mansuetudinis cum magnanimitatis maturitate, et ad suum dominum et ad adversarios suos, observans. Nescio si a longissimis retro temporibus cum aliquo procerum vel privatorum tam manifesta sit actum pervicacia; paucissimis præter dominum Wygoniensem,<sup>1</sup> dominum P. de Sabaudia,<sup>2</sup> et dominum P. de Monteforti,<sup>3</sup> inter tanta fastidia et discrimina presidium fidele ferentibus; cum tamen pontifices tunc præsentés, et dominus comes Cornubiæ,<sup>4</sup> et cæteri fratres domini regis, et majores de consilio, barones quoque regni, comitis Leycestriæ magnificam virtutem, fidem intemerabilem, triumphalem strenuitatem, justam intentionem eminenti extollerent præconio, auxilium quoque et consilium, ad conservandum eundem comitem sine periculo, jactura et dedecore, et meipso qualicumque nonnullos de majoribus eorum supradictis alloquente, spondere non omitterent.

Verum in tam frequenti vocali benevolentia semper experiebatur perraram realem amicitiam. Quid protendat<sup>1</sup> magistratuum vestrorum<sup>1</sup> execranda sæculis omnibus ignavia, vestra scio melius aestimat provida consideratio. Quid, inquam, nisi subitationis insperatæ formidandum excidium? Cum autem post diurnas impiorum concrepationes, vix extortum esset laboriosis instantiis ut comes Leycestriæ et viri plures potestate<sup>2</sup> validi et fidelitate firmi, eloquio rationabiles et perseverantia indefessi, opulentia præditi, in negotiis consulti, in difficultatibus animosi, sicut hac vice series causarum potissime declaravit, qui ex adverso sicut et præfati eorum adversarii, ad mandatum domini regis, sub salvo conductu de Vasconia venerant, sicut ratio cogebat, audirentur; memoratus comes Leycestriæ luculentæ rationis clara prosecutione, ab initio sui ingressus in Vasconiam usque ad præsentem diem, processus sui ordinem, tam in pacifico moderamine, quam in labore bellico, pro ecclesiæ dignitate et majestate regia, necnon tam cleri quam populi securitate pariter et salute, undique veraci testimonio subnixus, coram domino rege et suis magnatibus demonstravit, et singula reputatione digna ab æmulis denunciata singulis veritatis probatæ responsis confutavit. Insuper etiam viri prædicti, tam milites quam cives, qui domino regi et comiti Leycestriæ, tam bello quam pace, vigenter et strenue servierant, muniti litteris patentibus communitatis Burdegalensis, in qua quasi totum robur Vasconicæ ad distringendum hostiles, et fideles protegendum, consistere dignoscitur, ex scriptis authenticis per sermones disertos manifeste monstrarunt, quam potenti strenuitate, quam prudenti circumspectione, quam justo moderamine, quam perseveranti longanimitate, dominus comes terram Vasconicæ ad domini regis et hæredum suorum profectum et honorem, ad sublevationem devotorum, ad castigationem rebellium, ad universorum salutarem reformationem, non sine nimis personarum periculis, et profusis pecuniarum sumptibus, et maximarum difficultatum aggressionibus, acerrimarum molestiarum sustinentiis, usque in præsens gubernaverit. Efficacioribus etiam documentorum evidentium persuasionibus cunctis ostendentes, contra comitem Symonem non ob aliud concitatam esse prædictorum conspirationem, nisi quod sacrilegia, homicidia, concussiones, captivationes, angarias, rapinas, fraudes, sordes, quas efferatissima malignitate, nec Deum timentes, nec hominem reverentes, sine rege sine lege agentes, fœdera violantes, affectionem non curantes, jugiter exercebant, idem comes studiis quibus valuit coercere curabat; nunc terroribus pulsando, nunc blandimentis demulcendo, nunc legibus dirigendo, et ad formam honeste vivendi, ad censuram recte judicandi, ad ritum pie colendi, universos incessanter revocare satagebat.

Obtulerunt nihilominus, licet tam scripta quam lingua assertionum suarum firmam fidem fecerint, qui steterunt in parte comitis, quod vel corporali duello quotcunque personarum, vel quibuscunque modis aliis quos curia decerneret, indubitata certitudine fixæ firmitudinis, astruerent universos suarum propositionum articulos. Ad hoc petentes constantiori instantia, ut tam eis quam adversariis, per regiam providentiam necessitas imponeretur, sub quarumcunque cautionum securitate, in quibuscunque causis quis quem impeteret vel defenderet, ad parendum juri, et pro se judicata suscipere, et contra se judicata sustinere, sive coram domino rege in regno Angliæ, sive coram iudicibus ab eo destinatis in terram Vasconiæ; et propter hoc ipsum conductui suo renunciaturi si hostes sui in hoc idem consentirent. Sane dictus comes cum dicta parte sua dum dicto modo ista transigerentur ab initio usque in finem, quoniam<sup>1</sup> sic aestimabatur in pavescendis tam grandium causarum discriminibus, circumspectius posse provideri, et contra rancores odiorum, et contra repugnantias hostilitatum, et contra dissidentias jur-giorum, indesinenter supplici flagitabat industria, ut per provisivum regię celsitudinis imperium, forma pacis inter ipsum cum suis consentaneis, et adversarios cum suis complicibus, jam ante annum inita, necnon tam baronum quam pontificum instrumentis publicis, ac tam magistratuum quam optimatum juramentis solempnibus firmissime vallata, inviolabili fœdere deinceps ab universis servaretur, ipsius certe violatoribus animadversione debita plectendis.

Quibus omnibus rationabili diffusionem distinctius emensis, et licet cum multorum nostrę nationis displi-centia comiter intellectis, pars contraria comiti, imo magis domino regi, nihil horum facere valuit vel voluit, quia<sup>1</sup> onus probandi denuntiationes suas subire, et super quibuscunque impetitionibus aut defensionibus, coram quocunque vel in regno isto vel in terra sua, juri parere et etiam desiderabilem pacis inite reformationem custodire, cum impudentiori diffugio feralis insanie, penitus recusarunt. Ad hoc tantum agentes, ut in tanta rerum tam magnarum gravitate, mendacissimis suarum dilationum confictionibus, indubitata fides adhiberetur, et in quibuscunque articulis causam præ-sentem contingentibus, judicarium examen declina-retur, et comes Symon a custodia Vasconie, contra domini regis olim consultam dispositionem, de plano amoveretur.

Igitur a domino rege et magnatibus hinc inde ple-nius auditis et perpensis evidenter causarum meritis, dominus rex publice super altercationum nunc dictarum controversiis pronuncians, ipsa veritatis manifestatione fateri compulsus est, pro parte comitis et suorum, non esse locum inficiationi, quin ipsorum tam rationabilia proposita adversariorum commenta fallacia super men-

Si autem neutrum horum dominus rex eligere consentiret, supplicavit dictus comes, dum tamen prælati, proceres, et consilarii concordarent, ut custodiæ terræ Vasconiæ modis omnibus renuntiaret, per regiæ potestatis elementem prospectioem, [si] in tribus conditionum necessariarum<sup>1</sup> articulis, sibi secunda consultæ deliberationis diffinitione caveretur: videlicet, ne importabilia damna sumtuum incurreret, et magis ne dedecoris probrosam ignominiam incideret, et summe ne illi qui se et sua intemeratæ fidei strenuitate prævalida, pro domino rege et suis hæredibus, inter hostilitatum discrimina et moderamina gubernationum ipsi comiti non cessarunt adherere, periculis personarum aut rerum detrimentis aliquatenus exponerentur.

Feb. 2nd.

Verumtamen cum nihil horum pervenire potuisset ad effectum, tandem dominus rex, pro suæ voluntatis arbitrio, cæteris omnibus pusillanimi silentio torpentibus, ordinationes quasdam proprio motu conceptas, redigi fecit in scripta sigillo suo signata; videlicet de treuga firmitus tenenda inter partes dissidentes, et inter comitem et adversarios suos, usque ad purificationem Beatæ Virginis proxime futuram, et de sua profectioem vel primogeniti sui in Vasconiam ad idem tempus, ut tunc omnes controversiæ, sive litium, sive bellorum, per seipsum vel per suum primogenitum, in eadem terra sopiantur; et de præmittendo bajulum in Vasconiam, qui vice regis interim certa quædam negotia emersa et emersura ibidem expediat, et de castris quibusdam, et de captivis tum<sup>2</sup> existentibus in manu comitis restituendis et replegiandis, et de aliis pluribus ineptiis, nisi divinitas subveniat, plurimum nocituris; per omnia manifestissime sui exhæredationem et regni infirmationem, et comitis confusionem, et populi perturbationem, ex sententia sine intermissione procurans.

Rob. de Marisco cannot wait on the Bishop, as he has to take his Degree at Oxford. Hopes Grostete will attend.

Sit benignæ dignationi vestræ, quæ mihi parcere consensit, sempiterna retributio. Grave erit multum magistro Roberto de Marisco, sicut vos melius nostis, venire Lincolniam, in instanti solemnitate natalis Domini, sed tamen, sicut dignum est, vestro parebit beneplacito; quem vellem plurimum per manuumstrarum impositionem ad sanctum sacerdotium promoveri, priusquam illud fieret quod facere disposuistis. Cuiuscumque commiseritis illud, quod memorato magistro Roberto committere proposuistis, omnino consultum erit, ne quantumcumque laudabiles eidem collegas et compares assignetis, sed tamen subditos et coadjutores. Verendum semper est, ubi unicus authentica non præsidet potestate, in rebus administrandis ordinis tranquillitatem fore turbendam. Supervacuum est ad sapientem considerationem sollertis experientiæ in hac parte conari suasoriis.

Forte tempus inceptionis præfati magistri ultra diem quam designastis, si fieri commode possit, prorogari conveniret. Fiet tamen, Domino dante, ut volueritis. Si ratio non obsisteret et exhiberi valeret dominationis vestræ desiderata præsentia, vellem ulterius differri dictam inceptionem aliquot diebus. Causa subest puto nonnulla.

Plurimum admirandum est si clamor tam horribilium abominatum ad audientiam pietatis vestræ adhuc non pervenerit. Scio, et indubitanter scio, quam intolerabile sit sanctæ æmulationi vestræ tales pestes ecclesiarum custodias administrare, ne dicam profanare, vel per momentum. Miseremini ergo sanctuario Dei, miseremini filio spirituali, miseremini propriæ plebi, et pericula causarum tam gravium prospiciat auctoritatis vestræ indefessa vigilantia, ut etiam greges Domini, si fieri potest, ipso patrocinate, a rictibus eripiantur canum impudentissimorum, nescientium satietatem. Requests that the messenger to be sent into Gascony to the Earl of Montfort, may call for his letters.

Oct. 28th.

Pro eo quod tam diligenter de mittendo in Vasconiam me certificare voluistis, dignationi vestræ cum supplicibus assurgo gratiarum actionibus. Verum quoniam litteras domino comiti Leycestriæ et dominæ comitissæ transmittendas sic expedire nequeo, ut habeantur Bagedeni feria quinta, die videlicet Sanctorum Symonis et Judæ, sicut mandastis, humiliter rogo, veniam deprecans impotentia, ut nuncium a vobis in Vasconiam profecturum per me facere transitum jubeatis, qui ad memoratos comitem et comitissam litteras deferat, eisdem a me, Domino dante, destinandas. Ex eis quæ eruperunt de corde illius, per quem negotium quod nostis expediendum, si fieri potuisset, censuistis, in audientia dominæ reginæ me coram posito, conjici possunt motus, vix mitigabiles, ex variis occasionibus concepti erga germanum suum; fides tamen credo quod non violetur nisi, quod absit, ad intolerabiles dissensionum fomite, exasperatæ mentes, causis excrescentibus, inflammentur.

Nondum plene contuli cum Magistro Roberto de Marisco de personis aptis ad curam præbendalem, de quibus sermonem deliberatorium nobis imposuistis. Verumtamen sicut nunc video hæc occurrunt Magister Salomon de Dovoriam, ad sacerdotium per vos promotus, qui fertur laudabiliter egisse in ecclesia, quam de manu vestra regendam suscepit prope Northamp-

Valeat vestræ beatitudinis incolumitas in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine. Magister Johannes de Schersted rector ecclesiæ de Pokelington personaliter superintendens ovili dominico sibi commisso, vir ut æstimo zelans animas, sapiens et gnarus, cui conversatio probata est in tribus suis, creditur fore idoneus ad onera ecclesiastica quæcunque eidem imponenda, et per omnia sedulus in operatione salutis.

Solidos illos tredecim quos vestri gratia præcepistis de cleemosyna vestra deferri Oxoniam, ad opus pauperum scholarium, ipsi nondum perceperunt; quod forte per oblivionem est omissum. Numquid legislator liberandum populum Dei de dira servitute fornacis ferreæ divina jussione suscepit, nisi prius concussionem Ægyptii atroci morte multasset, et repressisset castigatione severa fratris calunniam? Annon prius auctoritas prophetalis pauperum relevavit inediam quam a tumidæ tyrannidis perdente perfidia oppressas animas temptasset eximere? Esther, pro gentis suæ salute efferatum mitigatura supplicationibus imperium, corpus suum humiliavit jejuniis, omniaque loca in quibus lætari ante consueverat crinium laceratione complevit, et deprecabatur Dominum Deum Israel. Judith contra ingruentes vastissimæ hostilitatis depopulationes, virtute virili fidelem fiduciam accingens, ingressa est oratorium suum, et induens se cilicio posuit cinerem super caput suum, et prosternens se coram Domino clamavit ad Dominum dicens: "Memento, Domine, testamenti tui, et da verbum in ore meo, et in corde meo consilium corrobora, ut domus tua in tua sanctificatione permaneat, et omnes gentes agnoscant quia Tu es Deus, et non est alius præter Te." Sed quorsum hæc? Num movere conabor ad res salvificas sollertem æmulationis cœlicæ pietatem, cui non est ambigendum quin persuaserit in causa salutis sapientia salutaris, attingens a fine usque ad finem fortiter, et disponens omnia suaviter. Sed ecce, ni fallor omnino, coram benigno pii pectoris iudice auxiam mœrentis animæ sollicitudinem licet hinc timor compescuerit, illinc tamen amor coegit. Concedat beatus Salvator, ut non id agentibus peccatorum meorum excessibus, cassi conatus in ventum verba proferantur. Nunquam oro sanctissimis sensibus sibilos serpentinos fraudulentia malignantium blandimenta cum effectu se gaudeant ingessisse.

Pro fratre Adam de Hekeshovre<sup>1</sup> si sic videatur super corporis vestri valetudine consulendo, bonum erit puto mittere ad ministrum nostrum, ante paucos dies Coventriam venturum, quem opto per paternitatis vestræ litteram exoratum, sine moræ dispendio, si fieri valeat, vestram personaliter adire præsentiam.

Mirandum prorsus erit si, quod absit, ipsis apud vestræ sanctitatis arbitrium non suffragetur divinarum sententiarum patrocinium. Fateor quod memoratis scholaribus in suarum necessitatum articulo, cum nonnullis quod dignum est æmulantibus ego qualiscunque plurimum compatior; intercedens amplius institi, eo quod instantiam meam frequenter factam in hac parte modicum sensi profecisse.

Of the great responsibility required in presenting to benefices.

Non ignoravit mea [tenuitas] quod, sicut scripsistis, collegium non possit suam voluntatem renunciare, post præsentationem alicujus ad beneficium ecclesiasticum nisi forte de voluntate præsentati. Sed intellexi per priorem de Neuham, quod et ipse, et suum collegium, et suos præsentatus, non obstante eorum præsentatione, vestræ starent ordinationi de ecclesia, quam præsentarunt, per vestram, si placeret, auctoritatem faciendæ. Formidans igitur precipitium animarum in quas totus Satanas, effrenata rabie, his sceleratissimis diebus debacchari conspicitur, clementissimi pectoris virtutem, licet sermonibus ineptis, sollicitare studui ad succurrendum, si fieri posset, tam horrendorum scelerum periculum. Sed esto, gratiam institutionis memoratus præsentatus secundum formam canonum assequatur; de beneficio per ipsius institutionem vacaturo, si fides est apud homines in cœlestia fœdera conjuratos, poterit ordinare salubriter vestræ dispensationis providentia. Quod nisi solito sollicitius in hoc casu et similibus argumentosa pietas de cætero vigilandum censeat, quid dicam nescio. Utinam omnibus iis, qui adversantur regno Dei, atrociam diræ crudelitatis tormenta contra cœlestes acies exercentibus, triumphalis dux castrorum invincibilium, si sententiis divinis non obsistit, in hac parte qualiscunque peccatoris suasioni consentiens, ei adhæreat peremitter, qui attingit a fine usque ad finem fortiter et disponit omnia suaviter. Forsan assumetur non indigne contra præsumptam exhortationem amplexanda cunctis illa Beati Hieronymi sententia qua dicitur: "Delicata doctrina est pugnanti ictus dictare de muro, et cum ipse "sis unguentis optimis delibutus, cruentum militem "accusare formidinis." Si hoc contra me dixeritis verissime sicut est dicetis. Veruntamen, numquid rogo hoc vel tolerabiliter cogitabitur contra vulnera martyrum, contra sudores apostolorum, demum contra benedictum Dei Filium, quem desideramus despectum et novissimum virorum, virum dolorum et scientem infirmitatem, qui non nisi in sanguine testamenti eduxit vinctos de lacu, et factus in agonia etiam pio cruore victoriosum rubricavit crucis patibulum, cujus certissimas voces qualibuscunque labiis balbutientis imperitiæ fari gestio?

O quam feliciter amplectendum video illud litteræ vestræ, videlicet quod vestra in hac parte, hoc est in liberandis animabus, non solum reddit vos religiosis et præsentatis ad curam animarum admissis, sed etiam pluribus coepiscopis vestris, militibus, et magnatibus præsentantibus, et domino regi, et etiam Curie Romanæ odiosum. Quod non jactastis insipienter sed humiliter insinuastis. Quid enim? An non istud est quo nihil pium præsulem honorat excellentius, veracius illustrat, delectat jucundius, et abundantius dilatat? Qualiter autem id, pro quo specialiter nunc totiens rescribitur, difficile putabitur validæ circumspectioni, circa quos<sup>1</sup> memorabis: "Sagittæ parvulorum factæ sunt plagæ "ipsorum;" ut nequaquam, cum opportunitas accesserit, cum præsentaturis ad curas animarum agat indefessa digni pontificis diligentia, sancta cœlestium consiliorum

Jam a diebus aliquot amplius solito super his quæ tam vestræ sanctitatis quam exilitatis meæ contingunt professionem, ecce coram Christo Domini, quid fieri opus sit prorsus nescio. Verum desiderarem plurimum si divinitus daretur vivæ vocis vestræ in Domino frui directione pariter et solatio, sicut reor non mediocriter in præsentiarum hoc rebus moderandis fore opportunum.

Locutus sum cum domino rege et consiliariis suis, transitum facientibus per Oxonian, et in medium deducentibus nescio quas querimoniarum fictiones, vobis, sicuti didici per dominum regem, non incognitas. Sed scio quod si constanter insistatur defensionis veritatis præbebit Dominus verus equo fortitudinem, et circumdabit collo ejus hinnitum, et suscitabit eum sicut locustas, ut contemnat pavorem nec cedat gladio; procul odoretur bellum, exhortationes ducum, et ululatum exercitus.

Conjicio ex his quæ audivi ex ore regis quod nisi vim pateretur clementia regalis ab improbitate contrstantium satis in Christo foret serena.<sup>1</sup>

sanctitudo et inspiratio prophetica? Quid enim aliud in universo regno caritatis ad tam horrendas principum majestates, ad tam pavendos præsidum magistratus, totum regnum cupiditatis tanta tantæ diuturnitatis pervicacia constipantes non resiliaret. O quam mirabilis, O quam spectabilis, O quam amabilis fructus laboris, per quem licet obsistentibus mundi peccatis principalis ad breve tempus frustretur intentio, tamen in tempus omne castrorum dominicorum propugnatoribus, diruptis capitalis oppugnantiae resistentiis, triumphalis egressus incunctati vigoris levigatur. Sit nomen Domini exercituum, Dei Israel, benedictum in sæcula. Accessit mentibus quasi de somno gravi evigilantibus ad eximiam gaudii suavitatem, per divinum ducatum, vestri regressus insinuata prosperitas; ut fieri valet inter tetras atrocium procellarum caligines, in perurgenti sæculi pereuntis excidio, super quibus, nescio quare, nihil mihi signaverit hactenus sanctitatis vestræ clementissima dignatio.

Aug. 14th. Scripsi dominationi vestræ in vigilia assumptionis litteram per Fratrem Radulphum monachum, paternitati vestræ destinatam, dolens plurimum quod ipsam sicut intellexi celeriter non acceperitis. Amantissimos Fratres Arnulfum et Arnaldum missos a Fratре Hugone de Barioc excellentiæ vestræ, et meæ exilitati, cum litteris et clenodiis<sup>1</sup> dulcedine refertis, suscipiat, teneat, et dimittat, ut noverit et voluerit consuetæ liberalitatis vestræ indeficiens affluentia. Rescribite mihi si placet obsecro ubi et quando debeam vobis occurrere, cum Angliam divinitate propitia intrabit, ut detinentiarum importunitates ad hoc ex eo commodius explicare valeam.

Benedicta sit indeficiens dispensationis divinæ clementia quæ nunquam deserit de ipsa præsumptionum expectationem, sed semper in assumptis salutis operandæ negotiis, quanto terribiliora cernuntur imminere discrimina, tanto lætiora curat præstare solamina, non tam paventis animi refocillando languores quam diffidentis ignaviæ animando torpores. Hæc ideo dixerim, quoniam,<sup>1</sup> sit vestræ dignationi sempiterna retributio, littera suspensæ menti nuper transmissa, diutinæ præstolationis ancipitem sollicitudinem non mediocri sublevavit exultatione. Quid ergo in tam salvifico totius regni Dei negotio, quod illuminationes supernæ tam magnificæ virtuti cœlitus inspirarunt, fore consultum arbitrabimur, nisi ut apostolici operis beatitudinem apostolica prosequentes constantia penitus in Illum referatis, qui divinissimos apostolos triumphalis certaminis hujus primicerios invictissimo confirmans vigore: “Dum steteritis” inquit, “ante reges et præ“sides nolite cogitare quid aut quomodo loquamini.

“ Dabitur enim vobis in illa hora quid loquamini. “ Non enim vos estis qui loquimini sed Spiritus Patris “ vestri qui loquitur in vobis.” Sed quid? In hac parte operæ pretium fore nunquam ambigitur magis pietas orationis quam peritia dictionis. Scio quod sanctæ recordationi, sicut summe opus est, excidit nequaquam illud evangelice jugiter amplectendum, deridetur justis simplicitas, lampas contempta apud cogitationes divitum. “ Sufficit enim discipulo si sit “ sicut magister, et servo sicut dominus ejus.” Quantæ foret perfidiæ si divina patrocinia, si angelorum præsidia, si sanctorum adjutoria, si electorum precamina, causam suam fideliter agentibus unquam de fore putaretur. Licet aliud cuperem tamen sermoni finem facio, orans ut valeo omnis consummationis finem ad sui gloriam et ecclesiæ salutem hactenus inattentatum finire certamen. Qualiter audebit pius pontifex, quem divina sublimavit electio, et superna directio non deseruit, quasi sub specie consultæ pietatis grassantibus dæmonialium crudelitatum impietatibus, desertum pii Salvatoris gregem, quod absit, æternaliter exponere?

Postquam vobis ad eximium opus Dei proficiscentibus, peccatis meis ut vereor exigentibus, licet justo mœrore confectus in Anglia sum detentus cum venerabili patre domino Cantuariensi, primo in sua, deinde in Roffensi diocesi visitationis officium agente, secundum quod modicitati meæ visum est laudabiliter, prout valui eidem in memorato officio astiti, usque ad festum Pentecostes, quibus cordis angustiis et laboribus corporis explicare non valens. Cumque ad Londoniæ ecclesiam secundum canonicas sanctiones visitaturus accessisset, persona Londonensis episcopi visitata quominus aut capitulum Londonense aut aliquod collegium sibi subditum visitaret, episcopus Londonensis cum suo capitulo et quibusdam aliis ad sedem apostolicam appellarunt. Quos videlicet, tam episcopum quam subditos sibi obsistentes, sententia excommunicationis innodavit.<sup>1</sup> Qua de causa non parva commotio facta est, divulgatis mendacissimis obtreccionibus per provinciam, tam in clero quam in populo. Institit autem prædictus dominus Archiepiscopus, hoc ipsum domino rege jubente, ut secum propter memoratam causam celeriter proficiscente ad curiam Romanam iter agerem, plurimum renitente domina regina, et ut me detineret obnixius<sup>2</sup> laborante, verum in confectione præsentium quid super hoc futurum erat ignoravi. Puto quod et spiritualia et temporalia episcopatus vestri per fideles viros vigilanter administrarentur.

Statum regni Angliæ vestra melius novit sapientia, qui ut melioretur, sicut puto, fideliter laboratum est his diebus, et major solito super hoc licet tremula concepta est fiducia. Eveniet autem quod voluerit propitia divinitas. Non quiescit anima quousque secundum quod voluerit voluntas in cælo desiderandus omnibus sæculis felix exitus causæ vestræ mihi significetur. Utinam liberi domini comitis Leycestriæ H. et A.,<sup>3</sup> præstante Domino securitatem, sine moræ dispendio ad vos redeant.

Jan. 14th.

Ut arbitror ob nonnullas causas, tam rationabiles quam salutares, rescripsistis domino Cantuariensi quod executio summæ excommunicationis ferendæ pro injuria Cantuariensis ecclesiæ nuper in manerio de Lambethe illata, quæ sermone multiplici longe lateque populum et clerum fama laborante replevit, sine displicentia ejusdem domini dilationem suscipiat, quousque ad instans festum St. Hilarii Londinum pariter cum aliis episcopis præsentiam ipsius personaliter adeatis. Quocirca hoc rogo humiliter supplicans, quod scio postpositis metu sævientium et blandientium illectu æmulationis vestræ virtus circumspecta facere non cunctabitur, ut perpensis causarum meritis et Dei honorem et salutem ecclesiæ potissime respicientium, ad iteratam metropolitanæ auctoritatis obsecrationem sicut expedire censueritis, periculosa rerum magnarum negotia, per processum commendabilem ad salutarem exitum promovere sanctitatis vestræ curet studiosa sollicitudo. Valeat vestræ pietatis optabilis incolumitas, etc.

Aspiciamus scripturam tam succincto quam luculento sermone quales sint ad animarum regimen assumendi definientem, ubi ait, "Date e vobis viros sapientes et gnaros quorum conversatio sit probata in tribubus suis et dabo vobis eos principes." Quid ergo? Numquid putabimus quod hos insinuet Dei eloquium, quos ætas juvenilior per fumosos libidinum æstus, per inexpertas fatuitatum caligines, per temeraria præsumptionum præcipitia horribiliter vexatos exagitat, et non magis maturitatem provectiorem quam purior honestas, quam exercitior industria, quam confirmatior virtus, honorabilior compositio pacificat? Reverendissimo in Christo patri et domino F.,<sup>1</sup> Dei gratia Londinensi Episcopo, Fratres W. Prior Fratrum Prædicatorum Londini, A. Gardianus Fratrum Minorum Londini, et Thomas de Hales, supplicissimum dignæ devotionis famulatum.

Scimus, domine venerandissime, quod et melius novit clara vestræ pietatis industria, Christum Dei Filium, Dei virtutem, Dei sapientiam, Dei justitiam, Dei sanctificationem, Amatorem animarum, non nisi ad sui ipsius divinissimam comparationem ex Evangelio sub inexplicabili districtione cœlestes eminentias eorum, qui pascendis animabus sunt evocandi, exquisitissima præficientem diligentia; certe ut is dumtaxat ad sanctam salvificæ pastionis curam, cæteris omnibus districtius arcendis, ecclesiastico regimini præficiendus assumatur, qui summa satagit vigilantia, primitus, ut non intret nisi per ostium; secundo, ut proprias oves vocet nominatim; tertio, ut emittat eas ad pascua; quarto, ut ante eas vadat; quinto, ut vocem ejus audiri ab eis efficiat; sexto, ut animam suam pro illis ponat.

Quid est autem intrare per ostium nisi per Christum introire? Ipso dicente: "Ego sum ostium;" quod est in introitu Christo conformari in miti humilitate, in tenui paupertate, in salutari acerbitate. Quid vero est proprias oves vocare nominatim, nisi singulos subditorum per motus suarum affectionum, per studia suarum occupationum, per discrepantias suarum fortunarum cum benigno subventionis desiderio distinctius designare? Quid etiam est eas emittere ad pascua, nisi de excessibus culpæ, de erroribus ignorantiae, de defectibus impotentiæ ipsas per piæ sollicitudinis adiutorium vitalibus reficiendas alimentis educere? Quid est insuper ante eas ire, nisi per formam juste vivendi, per censuram juste judicandi, per ritum pie colendi, ipsis se imitandum exhibere? Quid est adhuc ut vocem ejus audiant efficere, nisi ad hoc idem et Dei patrociniū, et Angelorum præsidium, et Sanctorum suffragium, per indefessam orationis piissimæ jugitatem ipsis obtinere? Quid est denique animam suam pro illis ponere, nisi per carnis castigationem, per cordis compunctionem, per libidinum abdicationem, præsentis vitæ jucunditatem penitus interimere, sicque seipsum pro eisdem hostiam vivam, sanctam, Deo placentem, perseveranter immolare?

Cum ergo hæc sit senaria supernorum charismatum perfectio, quæ ad curam cœlicæ pastionis agendam secundum immutabilia pastoris æterni decreta, sicut ex his sanctionis divinæ sententiis liquet, exigitur, quam detestandum sæculis omnibus censebitur esse piaculum pestibus nefariis, aut auctoritatis officio, aut consilio cooperationis, sanctuarium Salvatoris aperire. Illos loquimur qui per regiminis ecclesiastici officium pastorale, et pervicacius arrogantes honorem et onus declinantes omnimodis, tam fastum caducæ potestatis, quam quæstum mobilis affluentiae, quam etiam luxum fluentis lasciviæ, frontosissimæ<sup>1</sup> voracitatis aviditate insatiabili sibi suisque necessariis procurare non formidant, cœlestia detrectando ministeria, et ineptias sectando mundiales; quos, sicut regni Dei hostes atrocissimos Scriptura Divinitatis pronuntiat filios Belial, nescientes Dominum neque officium sacerdotum ad populum. depopulantes, Filium Dei conculcantes, sanguinem testamenti pollutum ducentes, Spiritui gratiæ contumeliam facientes. Quid enim, proh nefas! in præsentiarum uspiam apud viros ecclesiasticos, heu, præter admodum paucos, aspiciamus, nisi aut arrogantias dignitatum, aut avaritias facultatum, aut immoderantias voluptatum, in quibus mentita professione animas perdere non desistant, pro quarum salvatione salutis Auctori coram throno Majestatis tam solemnem protestationem sponponderunt? Quamobrem summi Salvatoris provisiva bonitas tantorum discriminum malis immanissimis, superclementi occurrens dispensatione, non tam brevitate succincta, quam luculenta perspicacitate formam præficiendorum curandis animabus, per sanctam passionem, describens, ait: "Date e vobis
" viros sapientes et gnaros, quorum conversatio sit
" probata in tribubus suis, et dabo vobis eos principes:" viros videlicet, quibus sit et vigor invictus, et sensus indeceptus, et zelus irremissus; sapientes, per quos et morum honestas et veritas fidei fideliter annuntietur; gnaros, qui et cœlestia sacramenta et compendia terrena prudenter administrent; "quorum
" conversatio sit probata in tribubus suis," quibus videlicet tam super otio contemplandæ divinitatis, quam super humanitatis impendendæ negotio, in distributionibus ecclesiasticorum graduum, probatior experientia laudabile perhibeat testimonium. Quibus profecto, et non aliis, si seipsum negare nequit, principatum ad pascendas animas solummodo concedit Princeps ipse pastorum.

Igitur, desideratissime pater et domine clementissime, ob pavescendam rerum istarum considerationem, cum ad piam instantiam nobilis viri domini Ricardi de Rupella nuper interpellati essemus, ut præsulatus vestri sanctæ paternitati virum idoneum designaremus, qui per ipsum præsentandus ad ecclesiam de Wikendum, animas fidei prudentia pasceret, et verbo vitæ, et exemplo vitæ, Parcat, precamur, dominationis vestræ benigna dignatio servulorum suorum simplici devotioni.

Nempe si in hoc facto nostro nostra modicitas arguitur inconstantia, accedit ad excusationem, cum innumeris virorum illustrium exemplis, factum sempiterna commendatione dignissimum excellentissimi regis Assueri, benedictum Salvatorem potissime figurantis. circumspectione revocavit, secundum Scripturæ relationem novis epistolis pietatis veteres epistolas crudelitatis corrigendo.

metuere oporteat Johannem Mansell<sup>1</sup> velut impediturum legitimam collationem præbendæ de Thame nescio, cum patefacto quod nunquam in eadem præbenda jus aliquod nactus fuerit in præsentia domini regis coram solempni præsulum et procerum frequentia, cui affui etiam ego qualiscunque, personaliter liti cesserit et rem reliquerit in cubiculo regali Londoniæ, ut asseruit, præsertim propter reverendam regiæ majestatis complacentiam. Alias autem, quantum conjici potest ex iis quæ sæpe et multum in secreto et publico plurium auribus inculcat, quasi novo suæ salutis desiderio succensus, et insueta superni examinis formidine compunctus, si cor non dissideat a labiis, proponit in posterum quoad seipsum provenituum ecclesiasticorum potius obtenta diminuere, quam obtinenda cumulare. Sed qui conculcat leonem et draconem, et leonem conteret, et visitabit super leviathan serpentem veterem in gladio suo grandi, et duro, et forti, certe cito veniens ad liberationem suorum et sui gloriam.

Unde dominus episcopus moveatur circa factum præbendæ de Thame supra memoratum conjicere queo; scire nequeo. Quia vero in re magna modicitatis meæ consilium requiritis, respondeat vobis, oro, sine me ad magnum salutis incrementum magni consilii angelus. vivendi, unum quod subsistit in negotiis impendendæ caritatis, alterum quod consistit in otiosis contemplandæ veritatis, tertium quod existit ex utroque temperatum, videlicet actuoso, quod exercet veram caritatem, et otioso, quod tranquillat caram veritatem; quis non videt ad perfectam hujus tertii conversationem, quanta necessitate constringuntur, qui superiorem locum cœlici regiminis sub tanto reddendæ rationis discrimine sunt assecuti? Proinde quid superest quam, quum vobis jugiter incumbit et vices supplere pontificum, et curas informare clericorum, et mores honestare plebium, ut præ cunctis per contemplationem suspensi, ad cunctos per compassionem proximi, secundum exemplar quod monstratur in more ordinationum tabernaculi disponatis? Qualiter namque per prædicationem evangelii ministerium pastionis adimplebitis secundum quod præcipit apostolus, "Opus fac evangelistæ, ministerium tuum imple," nisi per contemplativam<sup>1</sup> vacationem in lumine conspiciatis quod per activam sollicitudinem in tenebris hominum faciatis? Si actuosa pastionis forma requiritur, quid congruentius occurrit quam quod personis apostolicis in Apostolorum Principe, post trinam suæ dilectionis interrogationem sub trina jussionis inculcatione, jam jamque cœlum ascensurus Pastor ovium injungere non cunctatur? Ubi secundum Sanctorum elucidationes, tribus modis veritas caritatis per pastores ecclesiæ communicanda præcipitur. Primum exhibent in documentis Scripturæ, ex quibus hinc certitudo fidei, illinc morum rectitudo demonstratur. Secundum præbent in exemplis justitiæ, per quæ hinc forma vivendi, illinc ritus colendi prærogatur. Tertium præstant in sacramentis vitæ, in quibus hinc gratia reconciliationis, illinc gloria beatitudinis largitur. Sed nihilominus otiosa pastorum speculatio de-sideratur, per quam sublimes animi rectorum regni Dei suspenduntur ad caritatem veritatis. Quid manifestius ipsam insinuat quam illa quæ in monte transfigurationis Primicerius pastorum tria tabernacula facere gestivit? Quorum primum ex piissimis orationibus erigitur, quas comitantur hinc angusta carnis maceratio, illinc anxia cordis compunctio; secundum per clarissimas revelationes construitur, quas adornant hinc discussio propriarum iniquitatum, illinc consideratio divinarum bonitatum; tertium in sanctissimis excessibus proficitur, quos consumant hinc divinorum superventuum susceptio, illinc supercælestium spectaculorum contuitio. Nonne prius positæ tres actionis negotiosæ partitiones cum posterioribus dictis tribus otiosæ vacationis distinctionibus et duodenarum virtutum per singulas illarum sex divisionum secundum binarium utrinque coenumeratis sanctificationibus sex mysticos gradus cum duodecim leunculis aureis altrinsecus per singulos istorum sex graduum secundum binarium dispositos patenter efficiunt? Quibus sex gradibus ascendunt apostolorum successores ad prægrandem thronum veri Salomonis, in sublimitate consessionis iudicaturi cum eodem orbem terrarum, istis omnibus secundum artem æternaliter viventem apud inaccessibleem sapientiæ claritatem ordinatis. O stupendam! O prædicandam! O venerandam tantæ professionis dignitatem! O exhorrendam! O detestandam! O execrandam tantæ sanctionis prævaricationem! Ad illam quidem maxime refertur illud apostoli: "Qui bene præsent presbyteri duplici honore habeantur, maxime qui laborant in verbo et doctrina." Ad istam vero præsertim intorquetur illud Jeremiæ: "Confundantur qui me persequuntur et non confundar ego; paveant illi et non paveam ego; induc super eos dies afflictionis, et duplici contritione contere eos, Domine Deus noster."; Ad hanc igitur apostolicæ celsitudinis nequaquam pervenitur, ut æstimo, felicitatem, nisi et invicta virtus publicæ potestatis violentias refrænet, et indecepta circumspectio fraudulentæ seductionis fallacias convincat, et irremissibilis æmulatio enervatæ assentationis blanditias decutiat, tam in compositione propria, quam in domestica dispositione, quam et in ecclesiastico moderamine.

Hæc sunt denique ad quæ præsertim archidiaconalis officii rectitudo respicit, quæ cum tanta terroris vigilantia sermo Divinus mortalium auribus ingerit, dicens: "Nec consideres personam pauperis, nec honores vultum potentis; juste judica proximo tuo." Et iterum: "Maledictus qui accipit munera, quæ excæcant etiam prudentes et subvertunt verba justorum, et dicet omnis populus, Amen." Et alibi: "Tu autem, Dominator virtutis, cum tranquillitate iudicas, et cum magna reverentia disponis nos." Succinxi sermonem sciens quod sufficit occasionem insipientem præstitisse sapienti. Cohibeo quoque calamum rogans ut non molestus [sit] tenor epistolæ, quem etsi tarditas præsumpsit hebetudinis, tamen devotio scripsit amoris. Præstet oro vestræ serenitatis inolitæ benignitati Divina dignatio ut in omnibus, quod prudenter decernitis, cohibeatis temperanter, agatis fortiter, justeque distribuatis, ad illum sapientiæ salutaris finem cuncta referentes, in quo Deus erit omnia in omnibus, æternitate certa et pace perfecta.

Valeat serenitatis vestræ suavitas in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine. Pro dilecto mihi Thoma juvene latore præsentium, qui et hoc a me per supplicem obtinuit instantiam, præsentem benevolentiæ vestræ dirigo petitionem, obsecrans quatenus intuitu pietatis eidem in suæ necessitatis negotio, quam idem, si placet vobis, viva voce est expositurus, consuetæ gratiæ favorem benevolum, quatenus rationi non obvenitur et adhæretur miserationi, impartiri non ducatis indignum.

vacarem redemptioni male perditæ temporis, quantum Divina gratia largiretur; et ecce disturbor, avellor, et concutior sicut in cribro. Si igitur sic erat futurum, quid necesse erat concipere? Licet vulnus compassionis impresserit, tamen attulit remedium consolationis. Nempe spiritus iste et salutis operandæ et temporis redimendæ, nisi pariat, non concipitur. Conceptus enim et partus id ipsum est cum voluntas in ipsa notitia conquiescit; adeo ut, secundum Scripturam, "Qui amat justitiam jam justus sit." Nam qui diligit legem implevit. Propterea etsi disturbance, avulsione, concussione, de quibus non ab re quærimini, et descendens pluvia, scilicet placidus prosperitatum illapsus, et venientia flumina, hoc est vehemens adversitatum accessus, et flantes venti, id est subtiles temptationum insultus, terribiliter immineant, certe mentem salubriter stabiliunt, erudiunt, emendant, quia in caritate, quæ nunquam excidit, radicatum et fundatum per Spiritum salutis, qui omnium est Artifex, omnium habens virtutem, omnia prospiciens.

Serenissimo in Christo patri et domino Th., Dei gratia Abbati St. Andreae Vercellis, Frater Adas salutem in Domino et subjectum in Domino deditæ devotionis famulatum.

Of the state of his friends in England.

Pro eo quod per inolitam paternitatis vestræ pietatem, tam liberaliter quam libenter, de affluentibus plenioris opulentiis plurium indigentis arcanas Christianæ sapientiæ sententias, cum tantis tam diuturnæ sedulitatis sudoribus, non tam meæ modicitatis insufficientis humilitas, quam universi cœlestis notitiæ cupidi, ad perennes in Christo dignissime consurgunt gratiarum actiones. Lætus consideravi, domine mi, nec immerito, desiderabilem status vestri prosperitatem, quam mihi vestri gratia signare voluistis. Cæterum mitto vobis, secundum tenorem mandati vestri, expositiones super Angelicam Lecture, etc. Fiduciam præstant deprecandi illa, quam multipliciter expertus sum, paternitatis vestræ clementia. Proinde devote supplico, rogans obnixius quatenus et expositiones super ministerium theologicum, quas<sup>1</sup> nuper edidistis, et quæstiones quas in præsentiarum tractatis de quibus diebus, tam de istis quam de illis, mihi litteratorie innotescere voluisti, quam tempestive fieri commode poterit<sup>2</sup> meo desiderio communicare velit.

Valeat sanctitatis vestræ benigna sinceritas in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine.

Urges upon him the evils of non-residence.

Bene valet (benedictus Deus!) amantissimus vester dominus Lincolnæ. De animabus in Anglia vestro regimini commissis, vestra non ignorat clarissima sapientia quam districta reddenda sit ratio in die formidandi examinis, pro quibus benedictus Dei Filius sa-lutiferæ crucis patibulum piissimi cruoris rubricavit profluvio. Quid ergo? An non sunt expavescenda divinarum sententiarum tonitrua, quibus trinæ passionis indefessam vigilantiam immutabiliter præcipit exhiberi circa salutem animarum per pastores, qui pro eisdem spiritualiter pascendis multiplicia carnalia sustentationis percipiunt stipendia. Vestrum igitur erit, mi pater venerande, illud Apostoli non segniter attendere: “ Qui non laborat non manducet;” et per salvificam sedulæ caritatis diligentiam satagere ut præfatis animabus vestris pastoris nunquam desit sollicitudo, per quam in grege Dominico, vestræ pietati commisso, quod sanum est custodiatur, quod infirmum est consolidetur, quod ægrotum est sanetur, quod confractum est alligetur, quod abjectum est reducatur, et quod perierat requiratur. O auditionem diram fulminantis comminationis contra pastores Israel, qui susceptis custodiis ovilis Domini superintendere detrectant! “ Si speculator viderit gladium venientem, et non insonuerit buccina, et populos non custodierit; si venerit quoque gladius et tulerit de his animam; ille quidem in iniquitate sua captus est: sanguinem autem ejus de manu speculatoris requiram, non populus terræ, sed ego.”

Nonne illa vox est ad pastores inter alias decem mille anxiores? “ Virum hunc custodi, qui si lapsus fuerit, erit anima tua pro anima illius.” Succingo sermonem, sciens quia sufficit occasionem dedisse sapienti. Nihil consultius videtur, desideratissime pater, quam ut in Angliam venire non pigritemini de negotio tantæ salutis cæterisque sanctitatem vestram contingentibus, divinitate propitia, secundum Dei leges ordinaturi. Iterum in æternum valete.

silentium, suspirantes filii pacis, cum Hezechia rege Judææ rogante quæ ad pacem sunt Jerusalem, clamare coguntur: "Venerunt filii usque ad partum, et virtus non erat pariendo." Qui sunt etenim filii, nisi divinæ pacis conceptus sancti, quos pia pacificarum mentium sollicitudine vos, vestræque sanctitatis collegium, tam vigilanter parere satigestis, ubi vis defecta conaminis, quæ salubriter concepit, nequaquam edidit efficaciter? Vereor in hoc salutis negotio benignitati dilectionis pacis parituræ conceptum seditionum perniciosissimæ pestis, draconem quem scribit celestium mysteriorum ille Contemplator, ubi dicitur: "Et draco stetit ante mulierem quæ erat paritura, ut cum peperisset filium ejus devoraret." Hoc quippe loco, nomine mulieris, quid convenientius exprimitur quam benignæ caritatis fecunda sedulitas, [quæ] divinitus conceptum pacis principem conatur ut pariat, ante quam<sup>1</sup> draco, qui est sensus seductivus sæcularis astutiæ, perseverat in insidiis ad divinæ prolis devorationem; qui secundum Dei Apostolum sit terrenus, animalis, et diabolicus; quum terrenus, nihil sectatur nisi mundialia mobilis affluentiae compendia, secundum illud: "Quasi Phytionis<sup>2</sup> vox tua de terra et de humo mussitabit eloquium tuum"? Quum alias nihil affectat nisi carnalia fluidæ voluptatis contagia, secundum illud:<sup>3</sup> "Nullum peccatum<sup>4</sup> sit quod non pertranseat luxuria nostra; nemo nostrum sit exsors luxuriæ nostræ. Ubique relinquamus signa lætitiæ, quoniam hæc est pars nostra et hæc est sors nostra." Quoniam diabolicus nihil ambit nisi dæmoniales pompaticæ gloriationis extollentias, secundum illud: "Superbia cordis tui extulit

Hunc sane sæculi sensum Scriptura Dei nuncupatione draconis insinuat. Iste namque haustu, perplexu,<sup>2</sup> et verbere letifero mortalia ingerit discrimina. Ille vero præsentis novissimorum dierum quæ nunc aguntur temporibus periculosis, ut ubique prolem pacis penitus extinguat, exitiales litium exagitat discordias. Quasi verbere, violentiarum injuriis concutiens; quasi perplexu, fraudum moliminibus seducens; quasi haustu, assentationum blanditiis absorbens, per inauditam frontosi furoris pervicaciam orbem terrarum vexare non desistit, adeo quod nequaquam sit qui luculenter non consideret Sathanam jam solutum aut in brevi solvendum, nisi quem secundum Scripturam percussit Dominus amentia, et furore, ac cæcitate mentis, palpitantem meridie sicut palpare solet cæcus in tenebris. Quis ejus, quem nunc loquor, amfractuosi serpentis perniciosabile virus non exhorreat, quem incessanter conspicit ad nihil aliud inhiare nisi ut in præliis controversiarum et dissensionum divisiones exsuscitet, et altercationum conflictus concitet, et pervasionum atrocitates exerceat? Quibus summa Majestas blasphematur, superna civitas provocatur, et salvifica caritas sauciatur, sedes Apostolica inquietatur, ecclesiarum fundamenta quatiuntur et pontificum præsidia oppugnantur, pastorum officia præpediuntur, clericorum honestas vilificatur et animorum salus contemnitur, cœleste sanctuarium profanatur, devotionis tranquillitas diverberatur et religionis gloria conculcatur, domus orationis infestatur, spelunca latronum concelebratur et ovilia Dei pervaduntur, oves Christi devorantur, greges Dominici disperguntur et subsidia pauperum absumuntur, principum gubernacula perturbantur, populorum salus subvertitur et unanimitas cordium laceratur, amicitiarum fœdera dirumpuntur et odiorum rabies inflammatur, et hominum societas dissipatur, virtutum disciplina destruitur, vitiorum insolentia defensatur, jurium moderamina pervertuntur, judiciorum rectitudo depravatur, documentorum veritas obtenebratur et innocentium mansuetudo vexatur, crudelitatum violentiæ debacchantur, fraudium deceptiones procurantur et injuriarum violentiæ exercentur, hæresum scissiones præsumuntur, schismatum rebelliones extolluntur et seditioum discidia concitantur, perditionum molimina suscitantur, hostilitatum depopulationes efferantur. Et quid plura? Ut sit ad unum dicere, horrendissimæ vastitates tormentorum infernalium rebus omnibus inferuntur.

Numquid non pessimis diebus instantium temporum sua sufficeret malitia, nisi, proh dolor! maledictis contentionum deliramentis, mentes in mansuetum claustralis conversationis tyrocinium conjuratæ ruentis mentis mala cumularent? Annon qui nunc dietus est draco, videlicet sensus ipsius sæcularis astutiæ, serpens ille est, qui per antiquam callidæ præsumptionis perniciem, paradisum Dei, hoc est, divinam religiosæ professionis plantationem, apud quam exuberat fontana perennium deliciarum affluentia, et irrepere non formidat, et hominibus factis ad imaginem Dei per imitatoriam validarum virtutum operationem, reffectisque ad similitudinem Ipsius per Deiformem<sup>1</sup> limpidarum veritatum contemplationem, ac perfectis in animam viventem, hoc est, animum felici fruitione jucunditatem, sub fuco justæ sedulitatis, execranda venena mortiferæ suasionis infundit, et pugnaces reprobandæ litigationis rixas, celebritate non tam defenda quam deridenda, proterviter ingerit sub obtentu salutis, luxuum iniquationes sub prætextu pietatis, quæstum inquietudines sub specie sanctitatis, pastuum inflationes pervicaciter perurgendo.

Porro contra tam noxias tantorum malorum varietates, electorum animis hoc unicum occurrit remediale solatium, quod benedictus Salvator, qui dies effrænatae tribulationis abbreviat propter electos, se promittit visitaturum in gladio suo, duro, grandi et forti, super serpentem tortuosum: visitaturum, inquam, per manifestum ultionis districtæ judicium, in gladio, videlicet Dei Verbo; duro, propter inflexibilem districtionis sententiam; grandi, propter immensam sapientiæ majestatem; forti, propter insuperabilem virtutis omnipotentiam; super serpentem, hoc est, super venenatum sæcularis versutiæ sensum; tortuosum, propter multiformes callidæ varietatis amfractus, qui gradiendi super pectus maledictione muletatus pulverem accepit in escam; hoc est, illecebrarum specierum innumerabilem exiguitatem in se trajiciendam per inexplebilem fomitis concupiscentialis aviditatem.

Numquid suspicandum quod in sugillationem civilia jura profitentium ita protulerim? Absit: sed anxius animus irrefragabilia divini sermonis testimonia contra cunctos putavit assumenda, qui aut traditiones legales, aut canonicas sanctiones, aut eloquia sacrosancta, aut quarumcunque litterarum peritiam, ad præfatas versutiæ sæcularis abusiones distorquere non verentur. Quæ nisi salutare reformandæ pacis conceptus placidis animabus divinitus inspiratos eosdem perversura, per impiam pertinacis impudentiæ procacitatem perperam irrupisset, nullatenus credi potest, quod ea quæ tam vigenter, quæ tam sapienter, quæ tam diligenter, quæ tam laudabiliter, quæ tam solemniter, quæ tam salubriter prosecuti estis, tam insperata subitatione negligerentur.

lethalia litigiorum exercitia, præsertim a sanctis claustralis observantiæ vacationibus, qui cunctis professionis ecclesiasticæ juris loquens, ait: "Non in contentione et æmulatione, sed induimini Jesum Christum." Et iterum: "Cum sit inter vos zelus et contentio, nonne carnales estis, et secundum hominem ambulatis?" Et alibi: "Jam quidem omnino delictum est in vobis, quod iudicium habetis inter vos. Quare non magis injuriam accipitis? Quare non magis fraudem patimini?" Et adhuc: "Quod si invicem mordetis et comeditis, videte ne ab invicem consumamini." Et, quo nihil est manifestius, "servum Dei te non oportet litigare, sed mansuetum esse ad omnes, docibilem, patientem."

O si vigilantius advertamus fortissimam sponsi perennis æmulationem, corruptiva contentionalium causarum piacula tam imperialiter reprimentem ab animabus per fidelem claustralis vitæ sponsonem, sibi [per] individuum vitæ consortium copulatis,<sup>1</sup> cum dicit: "Capite vobis vulpes parvulas quæ demoliuntur vineas." Quid enim sunt vulpes parvulæ nisi callidæ litigatoris subtilitatis argutiæ, quæ vineas demoliuntur; hoc est, instar vinearum animas exterius asperioris pœnitentiæ horrore squalentes, et ex rore gratiæ cœlestis vegetatæ interius, per vim vitalem amoris fervidi, vinum, quod est spiritualis lætitia, tam affectualis dulcedinis quam splendoris intellectualis, affluenter perferentes, corrodendo devastant; quas videlicet vulpes parvulas per cœlestes animos, qui sunt vigiles paranympsi inter sponsum Dei Filium et sponsam religiosam animam, sponsalium felicium connubiorum fœdera, interminatis devotissimæ sedulitatis officiis prosequentes, ipsa Dei districtio mandat exterminandas? Quidni modis omnibus arceantur istarum vulpium versutæ malignitates, quæ non solum vineas contemplativæ jucunditatis, verum etiam fruges justæ voluntatis, et oliveta piæ miserationis, nexibus caudarum, hoc est pertinacium conspirationum, et facibus ardorum ignium, id est ardorum concupiscentialium, apud notam Sampsonis historiam leguntur consumpsisse?

Quid igitur aliud restare poterit, mi desideratissime pater, quam ut serenissima sanctitatis prudentia funditus exterminet sæcularis sapientiæ caligines, quam tam terribiliter execratur sermo divinus, ubi ait: "Quod si zelum animarum habetis, et contentiones sunt in cordibus vestris, nolite gloriari et mendaces esse adversus veritatem. Non est enim sapientia ista deorsum descendens, sed terrena, animalis, et diabolica?" "Ubi enim zelus et contentio, ibi inconstantia et omne opus pravum;" et potenter conscendatis in eam, quæ superius irradiat, sapientiam, subsequenter ibidem tam desiderabiliter divinitus descriptam, quod sit, "primum quidem pudica, deinde pacifica, modesta, suadibilis, bonis consentiens, plena misericordia et fructibus bonis;" ab illa nimirum in istam per sanctam ecclestis voti professionem vos Ille vocavit, qui vos eripuit de potestate tenebrarum et transtulit in regnum Filii dilectionis suæ. Nempe secundum Sanctum Gregorium, illius est cor machinationibus tegere, sensum verbis velare, honorum culmina quærere, adepta temporalis gloriæ vanitate gaudere, irrogata ab aliis mala multiplicius reddere cum vires suppetunt, resistantibus cedere cum virtutis possibilitas deest, quicquid explere per malitiam non valet, hoc in pacifica bonitate simulare. Istius vero est nihil per ostensionem fingere, sensum verbis aperire, vera ut sunt diligere, falsa devitare, bona gratis exhibere, mala libentius tolerare quam facere, nullam injuriæ ultionem quærere, pro veritate contumeliam pati lucrum putare. Propter quod de personis religiosis, qui per sacram regularis vitæ professionem peculiaris Dei populus esse cognoscuntur, et tamen illam isti præponendam judicant, tam terribiliter auditur divina conquestio, qua dicitur: "Duo peccata fecit populus meus: dereliquerunt me fon-

Et quid dicam? Adaperiat, oro, Rex pacificus cor vestrum in lege sua et in præceptis suis, et faciat pacem: exaudiat omnino orationes vestras et reconcilietur vobis, ad ejiciendum de templo Dei negotiosas tumultuantium rixarum compugnantias,<sup>1</sup> tanto sollicitiori potestatis authenticæ censura, quanto secundum famosissimum metropolitani culminis fastigium, cæteris orbis Christiani ecclesiis, salutaria pacificæ vacationis exempla transmittere tenetur obligatius; quo fiat ut de regno Dei profugatis perditarum contentionum insanis, ad spectabilem tanti senatus imitationem, omnes ecclesiasticæ professionis gradus, secundum Apostolum, sciant quomodo oporteat eos in domo Dei conversari, quæ est ecclesia Dei vivi, conferentes se vobiscum ad pacificum magnæ pietatis sacramentum, “quod manifestum est in carne, justificatum est in spiritu, apparuit angelis, prædicatum est gentibus, creditum est in mundo, assumptum est in gloriam.” Quod ipse<sup>2</sup> nescio si quomodo laudabilius agi valeat, quam in tam vulgata tanti discriminis causa, ea quæ de supradicta pacis reformatione ad tam desiderabilem exitum tam magnifica perduxistis diligentia, etiam ad perennem inviolati roboris firmitudinem producere studeat sancta vestræ circumspectionis industria.

O si pensare dignetur clara subtilitatis consideratæ sollertia, quam frequenter apud modicitatem meam et justus dolor cor saucium lacerat, et confusam faciem rubor anxius suffundit, cum nec immerito et pontificalis reverentia, per inspectam meæ simplicitatis ignaviam se conqueritur esse delusam, et exprobrantium insolentia non indigne subsannat fraudatam insipientiæ meæ fiduciam! Utinam in hac parte sit vobis et securæ conscientiæ juge convivium, et opinionis integræ nomen immaculatum! Quamobrem novissime vestræ

Scituri quod sæpe memoratus dominus Lincolnæ pleni consensus benigna promptitudine, secundum quod eidem fuerit insinuatū, præsens negotium, Domino propitio, bona fide persequetur. Inspecta littera dilectionis vestræ mihi nuper transmissa et lætitiâ præbuit, et ingressit sollicitudinem. Nempe divinæ vocationis gratia lætificavit, et sollicitavit humanæ calliditatis consideratio. Sed quid? Numquid poterit esse in hac parte diffidentiae locus, cum Ipsum attendimus, cujus nemo poterit advertere cogitationes, qui stultam fecit sapientiam hujus mundi? Hoc indubitanter spero, quod quamvis per providum divinæ dispensationis consilium permittantur discoli temporaliter exercere modestos, tamen superni moderaminis salvificas ordinationes finaliter non valebunt irritare. Hoc est igitur puto non tam sanctorum desiderium, quam Dei voluntas, quorum et hoc et illud summopere curat perenniter, ut per cœlicam pastionem de salvandis animabus regnum beatitudinis perficiatur; quod salvificum onus per pium pastorem ab Auctore salutis vobis imponendum nullatenus recusetur, et nequaquam animæ illæ, pro quibus piorum pavescit caritas, vestræ sedulitatis regimine destituantur, exponendæ, quod absit! sicut formidatur, devoratori bestiæ arum agri. divinæ resistant vocationi. Qualiter autem non putabitur divinitus inspirata vocatio, quam nec ambitio caduci honoris, nec conquisitio nobilis affluentiae, nec affectatio voluptualis lasciviae, sed divini nominis exaltatio, sed operandæ virtutis dispensatio, sed proficiendæ salutis æmulatio indubitata fide conciliat?<sup>1</sup> Eapropter cum per regiae celsitudinis clementiam ad requisitam fratrum insinuationem, recumbentem in novissimo loco nuptiarum, ad superiorem ecclesiastici regiminis apicem miserator animarum humilitatis vestræ devotionem evocaverit; videlicet ad ecclesiam suæ Genitricis in municipio Oxoniæ regendam, secundum quod vobis fuerit cœlitus aspiratum; per salvificum amorem vos admoneo, per beatissimam misericordiam vos invito, per formidandum examen vos adjuro, ut propulsis quibuscumque formidosæ pusillanimitatis obtendiculis, fiducialiter ducatum militiæ cœlestis subeatis, invicti Regis dumtaxat innitentes patrocínio, qui ait: "In mundo pressuram habebitis; sed confidite, quia ego vici mundum." Quid etenim? Unquam invenire poterit subterfugium diffidentiae et probatus animus peritia doctior, et desiderium rectitudinis, ubi Christus et Dei virtus, et Dei sapientia, et Dei sanctificatio, se promittit, sub tanta protestationis firmitudine, ecclesiarum suarum rectoribus affuturum usque in sæculi consummationem? Scio quoniam in hac parte rebus tantæ reputationis consultum esse non poterit nisi consiliis salutaribus acquiescentes ad informationem cleri, ad ædificationem populi, ad exemplarem universorum sanctificationem, tam celebrem, tam spectabilem, tam amabilem curæ cœlestis administrationem admittere non differatis. tumennque sibi per fucum fictæ circumscriptionis blandiatur ex divina sententia, dum nequaquam diligere convincitur, qui secundum evangelicæ sanctionis observantiam ad dispensationem evangelicam vocatus, in curandis animabus suæ vocationis evangelii ministerium repudiare non formidat? Ait enim Auctor evangelizandi: "Si diligis me, pasce oves meas." Propria qui vocante divinitate pastionis refugit sollicitudinem exsors profecto divinæ dilectionis comprobatur. Dubitare nefas est quin impleatur officium sacræ pastionis duplici honore divinitus dignificandum, si forma pastoris, quam prærogat infallibilis certitudo, suscipiatur; videlicet ut cum Moyse, pastoribus animarum speciali prærogativa ad exemplum proposito, nunc ascendatur ad otium contemplandæ veritatis immotæ, nunc descendatur ad negotium impendendæ caritatis in planitie; has ascendendi et descendendi vices frequentando, quas Sanctus Augustinus [in] libro De Civitate Dei tam luculenta ratione prosequitur, ubi inter cæteras de hac re disputatus ait: "Locus superior, sine quo regi populus non potest; etsi ita teneatur atque administratur ut decet, tamen indecenter appetitur. Quamobrem otium sanctum quærit caritas veritatis; negotium justum suscipit necessitas caritatis. Quam sarcinam si nullus imponit, percipiendæ atque intuendæ vacandum est veritati. Si autem imponitur, suscipienda est propter caritatis necessitatem. Sed nec sic omni modo veritatis delectatio deserenda est, ne subtrahatur illa suavitas et opprimat ista necessitas."

Sed quid suasoriis immorer? Credo prorsus quod pia mens in causa pietatis, quam tantæ salutis tam clara cogit evidentia, sibi melius per irrefragabiles divinorum eloquiorum sententias, Christo magistrante, persuadebit. Valeat vestræ dilectionis, etc.

Littera quam modicitati meæ fidelis amicitia vestrae circumspectio nuper destinare curavit, licet cor saucium zelo compassionis anxaverit, tamen pavidæ menti spei remedium ingessit; proferebat etenim amaram agnitionem admissorum excessuum et corrigendorum actuum conceptum salutarem. Quid ergo? Qualiter illi quod tam formidabile discrimen aspiciamus, tum propter salutis ruinam, tum propter nævum opinionis, poterit fore provisum? Nullatenus profecto, nisi dumtaxat in hoc, ut post infusam necessariæ compunctionis gratiam, per spiritum consilii salubriter subeamus in spiritum fortitudinis, administrandam pœnitentialis exercitii perseverantiam piaculorum immanitatem condigna districtiois censura vindicantes indefesse; tanto siquidem solliciori rectæ rationis cogentia, nobis id agendum esse cognoscitur, quanto tituli clariores, tam ex dignitate gradus, quam ex scientiæ præcellentia, quam etiam famæ solemnio, detestandum nostræ prævaricationis facinus, et Dei offensam, et reatum conscientia, et proximorum scandalum perniciosius aggravarunt.

Sed quid? Attendamus, mi amantissime, quod cum prævariatricem animam provocans ad pœnitentiam præmississet divinius propheta: "Quam vilis facta es, nimis iterans vias tuas, et ab Ægypto confunderis;" aliisque tam terribiliter annexis tam clementer alias subjungit, dicens: "Vulgo dicitur, si dimi-

A letter of exhortation.

<sup>1</sup> John de Offinton was canon of Salisbury and chaplain to Pope Innocent IV. He died in 1251; see Mat. Paris in that year, who gives him the character of being "the most famous clerk in England." A letter in common addressed to him by Bishop Grostete and Ad. de Marisco will be found in Browne's Fasc. ii. p. 391.

“ serit vir uxorem suam, et recedens ab ea duxerit “ virum alterum, numquid reverteretur ad eam ultra?
 “ Numquid non polluta, contaminata erit mulier illa?
 “ Tu autem fornicata es cum amatoribus multis; tamen “ revertere ad me, dicit Dominus, et ego suscipiam te.
 “ Polluisti terram in fornicationibus tuis et in malitiis “ tuis; frons virilis meretricis facta est tibi; noluisti “ erubescere. Ergo saltem amodo voca me: ‘Pater “ meus, dux virginitatis meae tu es.’” Igitur quamvis inæstimabiliter, super cæteros, sæculis omnibus horrendæ sint atrocitates scelerum, cum auctores perditionis inveniuntur, qui salvandis animabus ecclesiastici regiminis celsitudinem sunt assecuti, contra quos inter cætera divinæ comminationis fulmina tanto fulgore sævit prophetalis sententia, qua dicitur: “ O sacer“ dotes! si nolueritis audire, et si nolueritis ponere “ super cor ut detis gloriam nomini meo, dicit Domi“ nus exercituum, mittam in vos egestatem, et male“ dicam benedictionibus vestris, et maledicam illis, quo“ niam non posuistis super cor. Ecce ego projiciam “ vobis brachium, et dispergam super vultum vestrum “ stercus solemnitatumstrarum.” Quorum etenim, pro nefas, incogitabilem pervicaciam incomparabiliter plus quam cæteras mortalium impietates, utpote profes-sione tenentium, destruentium legem Domini, tam terrifice condemnat illud Apostoli: “ Irritam quis faciens “ legem Moysi sine ulla miseratione duobus aut tribus “ testibus moritur; quanto magis putatis deteriora mereri “ supplicia qui Filium Dei conculcaverit, et sanguinem “ testamenti pollutum duxerit, in quo sanctificatus, “ est, et Spiritui gratiæ contumeliam fecerit.”

Sed quorsum hæc? Ut quid ad humiliatam animam terroribus insisterem? Occurrunt inter scribenda spec-tabilia toti regno Dei cacumina, David, Petrus, Paulus.
 Si David adulterium, si Petri negationem, si Pauli blasphemiam, et in iis omnibus ineffabilem supernæ dispensationis misericordiam, non tam tremulis quam fiducialibus oculis contemplerur, numquid ultra locus

erit vel præsumptionis vel diffidentiae? Quibus profecto rumentibus<sup>1</sup> nemini superest securitatis electio. Quibus item surgentibus neminem premit pusillanimitatis desperatio. Proinde quid aliud restat, magister mi desideratissime, quam ut et violatus Dei honor reformetur, et lapsus nostræ conscientiae relevetur, et scandalum ecclesiae reparetur? Illud quoque deinceps in nobis efficiatur, quod ait propheta, personarum ecclesiasticarum primicerius, beatus Petrus Apostolus: “Carissimi, obsecro vos tamquam advenas et peregrinos abstinere vos a carnalibus desideriis, quæ militant adversus animam, conversationem vestram inter gentes habentes bonam, ut in eo quod detrectant de vobis, tamquam de malefactoribus, ex bonis operibus vos considerantes glorificent Dominum in die visitationis.” Hic perpetrati reatus ignominiam perpitia divinitate superexcellat restituti status gloria, necnon ministerium pascendarum ovium, et virtus invicta, et industria circumspccta, et æmulatio sancta, perficiat ut in die reddendæ rationis, cum iis qui bene præsent, propter exempla salutaria et propter perfecta gubernacula, duplici honore digni habeamini.

Protractionem epistolam excludit temporis angustia. Sed scio quia sufficit occasionem præstitisse sapienti. Ignoscat, obsecro, mansuetudinis vestræ suavitas si devotissimi vestri qualiscunque caritas visa fuerit styli durioris exercuisse vehementiam. Si quid poterit aut pauperis objecti devotio, aut affectus indigni pectoris, vobis, Domino largiente, jugiter serviet ad salutem pariter et honorem, in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine.

De fratre Gregorio Bosell, viro provido et benigno, mirandum est si sic egerit, sicut vestræ insinuatum est dilectioni. Quod autem mihi signastis erga eundem, sicut divinitus dabitur, implere curabo.

Si me mea non fallit æstimatio, mi amatissime<sup>1</sup> magister, hoc agebat ut valuit, etsi non ut voluit, permodicitatis meæ littera serenitati vestræ transmissa, devotæ dilectionis pavida sollicitudo, ut quod confoveret oleum exultationis fiducia de venia, de culpa compungentis pœnitentiæ vinum expiaret, et quod rigaret lacryma, lætitia vegetaret. Siquidem non solummodo quorundam, sed ulterius<sup>2</sup> omnium incolatum miseræ præsentis agentium conscientias alloquitur, qui ait: "In die bonorum ne immemor sis malorum, et in die malorum ne immemor sis bonorum." Nempe sic semper est vivendum, præsertim ducibus castrorum cœlestium, ut et amaram humanæ malignitatis acrimoniam dulciflua divinæ bonitatis consideratio temperet ne desperatio præcipitet, et nihilominus dulcifluam divinæ bonitatis considerationem amara malignitatis humanæ recordatio constringat, ne præsumptio superbiat. Sed quid? Numquid non amplius elevat misericordiæ relaxatio quam districtio iudicii deprimat? Annon misericordia super exaltat<sup>3</sup> iudicium? Certe scriptum est: "Misereris omnium, quoniam omnia potes, et dissimulas peccata hominum propter pœnitentiam; diligis enim omnia quæ sunt; et nihil odisti eorum quæ fecisti." Et post pusillum: "parcis autem omnibus, quoniam tua sunt, Domine, qui amas animas." Si quid juxta quod pie præsumitur in commisso visitationis officio ecclesiæ Dei reformandæ, non tam canonicæ traditioni, quam sanctioni evangelicæ vos et collega vester, vir commendabilis, studiosa incesseritis vigilantia, ut libet latius linguæ loquantur occurrit divinus apostolus sui silens erudiendo, mihi autem inquires: "Pro minimo est ut a vobis judicer aut ab humano die. Sed neque me ipsum judico; est nempe qui querat ante judicet." Verumptamen audiamus Scripturam, universis mortalibus clamantem: "Quis gloria-bitur mundum se habere cor?" Et iterum: "Omnes justitiæ nostræ," etc. Propter quod, "beatus," inquit, "qui semper pavidus est." Et iterum: "Verebar omnia opera mea, sciens quod non parceres delinquenti. Si enim lotus fuero aquis vivis, tamen sordibus," etc. Quid ergo? An non longanimiter sustinebimus arguentes quantumcunque nobis conscii non fuerimus, cum constat quod ob id justificati non simus apud Eum, de quo scriptum est: "Cœli non sunt mundi in conspectu ejus, et in Angelis suis repperit Ipse pravitatem."

Ad id quod epistolæ inseruistis de conciliandis cordibus personarum insignium, videlicet vestri et magistrorum Symonis de Valentia et Roberti de Marisco, a quibus in pacifico pastionis moderamine tanta pendet salus animarum, totis exilitatis meæ viribus, præter salvificam æmulationem pacis reficiendæ in viris ecclesiasticis, me mei compellit apud unumquemque vestrum singularis amicitiae necessitudo. Desiderabilis status vestri incolumitas, quam ex tenore litteræ mihi transmissæ perpendere potui, sit Divino nomini benedictio, cordi meo lætas ingessit gratiarum actiones. De reditu vestro tamen tam festino non modicam concepi admirationem, licet noverim quod ipsum requisierit causarum grandium urgens consideratio. Igitur viriliter agite, et mens vestra confortetur in Domino, de quo sperandum indu-bitanter, quod per Ipsi clementissimam dispensationem, qui non despicit præsumentes de se, quantumcumque videantur insperati eventus sanos salutarium propositorum conceptus retardare ipsos, propter sui nominis honorem et salutem Ipsi fideliter obsequentium, ad laudabilem supra quam optari valeat consummationem perducere dignabitur. Etsi multiplex experientia tenuem præstet fiduciam, ad habenda super negotiis de quibus scripsistis circumspecta, secundum quod res requirant, consilia, Divinitate tamen propitia, in cujus manu corda sunt regum, diffidendum nullatenus est, quominus humiliati sub potenti manu Dei omnem sollicitudinem nostram in Ipsum projiciamus, quoniam Ipsi est cura de nobis, quod justum est juste persequendo ambiguos actionum nostrarum exitus ad certum finem Divinæ voluntatis dirigamus.

Valeat serenissima nobilitas vestra. Valeat et illustris comitissa. Valeant et carissima pignora vestra. Valeant et omnia dignam dominationem vestram contingentia, in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine.

Quamobrem si quod intendimus proveniat, bene quidem; sin autem, certissime speremus longe desiderabiliora quam concepimus; per omnia sit Divino nomini superexaltata benedictio, perenniter quoque observetur et Filio Dei fides inviolata, et legiti-

mun fœdus filiis hominum. Immodica visa est littera serenitatis vestræ mihi nuper transmissa, illam, quam,<sup>1</sup> nec immerito, fateor erga nobilitatem vestram inter mortales specialem concepi affectionem, quasi in iis quæcunque vestræ scripsi discretioni, super quam conveniret claros excellentiæ vestræ titulos expresserim. Super quo cor meum hætenus non reprehendit; cum in hoc, ut reor, nec ab exemplis recesserim sapientum, nec rationis obvenerim exigentiis. Certum etenim est quod licet ignobilis animæ stultitia, et suis honoribus elevetur in superbiam, et suis laudibus dejiciatur ad ignaviam, tamen illustris animæ sapientia, et ex illis ad humilitatem inclinatur, et ex istis ad virtutem animatur. Propter hoc, mi desideratissime comes, in hac parte nec virium<sup>2</sup> timeo discrimen, nec meam accusationem, sperans quod ex hoc divinitatis clementia et vobis et mihi pariter fiet in sapientiam. Quanto magis præcipitem ruentis mundi processum conspicio, tanto districtius formidandas Divinorum judiciorum sententias indubitanter adverto universis quos bestialis vesania non infatuavit. Sed quid? In hoc tantummodo consultum erit electis, ut Salvatoris sui jussionibus obtemperent; ubi cum horrendas sæculi ruinas præmisisset, subjungit: "His autem fieri incipientibus, respicite; et levate capita vestra, quoniam appropinquat redemptio vestra." Protractiorem epistolam temporis excludit angustia.

toleratis? Nempe quod expectavit præsentia hoc experientia representat. Meminit, ni fallor, prudentiæ vestræ clara circumspectio, quam frequenti sollicitorum examinum colloquio auribus nostris invicem ingressimus, quam aspiciamus oculis execrandam seductivæ calliditatis impudentiam, licet ob imminentes falsitatis stupendæ suspiciones, considerata fidelitatis animosæ fiducia, ambiguum prægrandis negotii discrimen subire nequaquam formidaverit. Sed quid? Certe mitigant afflictionum præsentiam præmeditationes periculorum, secundum amplexandam divini Gregorii sententiam, qua dicitur: “Minus feriunt jacula quæ providentur, et nos “tolerabilius mundi mala suscipimus, si contra hæc per “providentiæ clypeum munimur.” Hæc est etenim circa fidelem electorum militiam salvifica dispensatio, ut sublatis sæcularis confidentiæ subsidiis, totaliter se conferat triumphalis militantium fortitudo ad supernæ virtutis insuperabile præsidium, quæ de se sæculis omnibus clamat, dicens (Prov. viii.): “Meum est consilium “et æquitas, mea est prudentia, et mea est fortitudo; per me reges regnant et legum conditores “justa decernunt; per me principes imperant et potentes decernunt justitiam. Ego diligentes me diligo; et “qui mane vigilant ad me invenient me.” Qualiter, inquires, illam diligens ad illam vigilabo? Audiamus illum ad magistratus mundi directum præcipue prophætæ sermonem (Mich. vi.): “Indicabo tibi, O homo, quid sit “bonum, et quid Dominus quærat a te. Utique facere “judicium et diligere misericordiam, et sollicitum ambulare cum Deo tuo.” Ut, videlicet, ab iis qui præsumt in judicio per censuram districtiōnis plectantur discoli, in misericordia per affectum mansuetudinis sublevantur devoti, in sollicita Divini comitatus ambulatione, per cultum divinitatis ordinentur universi. Brevitas temporis et varietas occupationum et cursoris vestri acceleratio non permiserunt, licet hoc plurimum optarem, hac vice prolixius scribere. Ideo litteram pariter et incipio et finio; hoc monens, hoc obsecrans, hoc obtestans, ut quanto Divinitatis clementia nomini suo dans gloriam, et vestræ devotioni dans gratiam, supra quam æstimari poterit, magnifica sua voluntatis negotia, per laboriosam vestræ sollicitudinis efficaciam, prosperiori favore prosequi dignoscitur, tanto misericordia indulgentiori et fideliori veritate, directiore justitia et tranquilliori pace, ex tota cordis affectione, ex tota animæ districtione, ex tota virtutis intentione, amplius in Auctorem salutis assurgat salvifica mentis generosæ dilectio. Quid enim? Quanti sceleris fore putabitur, si inde contra Divinitatem inolescere<sup>1</sup> contingat arrogantia? Unde secundum assertionem Scripture peccatum maximum et negationem contra Deum altissimum admittere convincitur, divinam ordinationem damnabiliter evacuans, qui ex Ipsius muneribus non proficit, in ipsum formidandum est iudicium ingratiitudinis, quæ legitimum exhæredat filium. Libuit littera, quod voce non licuit, adire videlicet desideratam vestræ serenitatis præsentiam. Quod utinam concedatur mihi divinitus cum opportunitate maturiori personaliter adimplere! Supervacuum putavi scribere vobis de iis, quæ plenius vobis scripsit venerabilis dominus Lincolnæ, qui, benedictus Deus, corpore valet et spiritu. Valent et amabiles liberi vestri, ut spero, proficientes ætate pariter et gratia. Agendum est

Ex propositis Divinorum eloquiorum testimoniis profecto cernit illustris vestrę claritatis industria, quod non nisi divinę legis custodia repugnantiam legis Divinę poterit edomare. Quis enim ambigit, præterquam is quem obtenebravit perfidię caligo, quin rabiem inmanem crudelium misericordium benigna mansuetudo subigat; quin fallacem calliditatem perditorum fidelium simplicitas veridica refellat; quin iniquam persuasionem diripientium distribuentium largitio recta obtineat; quin inquietam perniciem discordium concordantium pacifica sedulitas triumphet? Hęc est certe superni regiminis provida moderatio, per quam sudoris vestri vigor invictus, in virtutibus misericordię et veritatis, justitię et pacis, crudelitatum et seductionum, rapacitatum et discidorum,<sup>1</sup> vitia superabit. Sed numquid impetu subitaneo, et non dispensativo tractu? “ Non ejiciam eos a facie tua anno uno, ne terra in solitudinem redigatur et crescant contra te bestię; paulatim expellam eos de conspectu tuo, donec augearis et possideas terram.” Ait ergo, “ Non poteritis eos delere pariter,” ne cessante hostilitatum incursu velut solitudo terra sileat, et tam facinorum quam flagitiorum dæmoniales bestię per otiosam lascivientis ineptię vecordiam et crescant et multiplicentur contra te, animorum vim evacuantes, et enervantes robur corporum, et, quod absit, parva laudabiliter, vituperabiliter collabuntur.

Quin potius militia triumphalis castigata pavore sollicito, et vigenti exercitior oborata, non tam in propria strenuitate gratiose consistat, quam proficiat gloriosius ex perversitate aliena. Huic accedit evidenter illud beati Augustini, [in] libro De Civitate Dei,<sup>1</sup> quod prudentia Scipionis “nolebatur æmulam olim imperii Romani armis subactam Carthaginem dirui, et decernenti ut dirueretur contradicebat Catonis astutiæ, timens infirmis animis hostem securitatem, et tanquam pupillis civibus idoneum tutorem necessarium videns esse terrorem. Nec eum fefellit sententia reipsa quantum et quam vere diceret; deleta quippe Carthagine, magno scilicet terrore Romanæ reipublicæ depulso atque extincto, tanta de rebus prosperis orta mala continuo subsecuta sunt, ut corrupta disrupta est concordia, prius sevis eruentisque seditionibus, deinde mox malarum connexionem causarum; bellis etiam civilibus tantæ strages cederentur, tantus sanguis effunderetur, tanta cupiditate proscriptionum ac rapinarum ferveret immanitas, ut Romani illi qui vita integriore mala metuebant ab hostibus, perdita integritate vitæ crudeliora paterentur a civibus.” Et quibusdam interpositis: “Avarus vero luxuriosusque populus secundis rebus effectus est, quod Scipio Nasica ille providentissime cavendum esse censebat, quando civitatem hostium maximam, fortissimam, opulentissimam nolebatur auferri, ut timore libido premeretur, libido pressa non luxuriaretur, luxuriaque prohibita nec avaritia grassaretur; quibus vitiis obseratis civitati utilis virtus floreret et cresceret, eique virtuti libertas congrua permaneret.”<sup>1</sup>

mum timoratum devotionem, si ad ecclesiam piam æmulationem, si ad proceres socialem honorationem, si ad tirones munificam subventionem, si ad plebes regituram defensionem, si ad calamitosos affluentem miserationem, si ad modestos favorabilem benevolentiam, si ad fœderatos inviolatam pactionem, si ad discolos districtam coercionem, si ad universos ordinatam dilectionem, procurantes omnimodis et adjutoria valida, et consilia diserta, et munda ministeria, et judicia examinata, perseveranter servaveritis et inter terrificos tubarum clangores, et inter horribiles conclamantium vociferationes, et inter diros armorum stridores, inter stipatos castrorum congressus et inter pæcipites corruentium occasus, et inter profluos sanciorum cruores, et inter miserabiles morientium ululatus, de adversariis profecto illud divinitus implebitur: “Fugit impius nemine persequente;” de vobis vero, “Justus ut leo confidens absque terrore erit.” Quod si ducem magnanimum salvandis hominibus rebus humanis contingat excidere, quid unquam æstimabitur aut gloriosius, aut decentius, aut salutaris, quam propter causam vivendi, vivendi finem facere.

Succingo sermonem, sciens quod in cartulis alias vestræ discretionis destinatis, licet minus eleganter, non tamen inaniter characteres pinxerim; nihil scribere non permisit amoris solliciti pavens affectio. Cæterum cum attonita mente consideramus fulgurantem hastam Divinæ districtionis, sæculis omnibus inauditas formidandarum ultionum immensitates his diebus exercentem, et super prælatum et super clericos, et super principes et super populum, quæ et summa rerum culmina et dejecit, et dissipavit, et attrivit; quid aliud quam desipientia humanitatis revocatur ad Divinitatis sapientiam, quæ attingit a fine usque ad finem fortiter et disponit omnia suaviter? De tam necessario salutis negotio quod nostis in regno Angliæ operando, cujus mora summum indubitanter trahit periculum, dolendum fore permaxime censeo, aspiciens illud nescio quo frustratum in Omnipottentis iudicio. Occurrit quiddam arctius eminentiæ vestræ commendandum, licet magnanimitatis sit conceptum corde sermonem, liberiori audentia, non habito personarum delectu, patenter proferre, tamen omnimodis opportunum est magnanimo intra cordis domicilium linguæ motus moderari, ne dum immoderatus ut libet laxata locutio ad offensam provocat, magnifica magnanimarum virtutum opera præpediantur; propter quod ait Dei sapientia: "In ore fatuorum cor eorum, et in corde sapientum os illorum; totum spiritum suum profert stultus, sapiens differt et reservat in posterum. Homo sapiens tacebit usque ad tempus, lascivus autem et imprudens non servabunt tempus." Attendendum quoque non segniter puto, quod tam in divinis quam in humanis litteris inter virtutum excellentias, loquendi circumspectio vigilantiori commendatione præcipitur, cum inconsideratio sermocinandi secundum sapientiæ testimonia et religionem divinam et humanam necessitudinem perniciosius evertere dignoscitur.

Circa festum Sancti Lucae indignationis regiae motus incurri, ut reor, propter verba vitæ. Unde nec ad præsentiam domini regis aut reginæ mihi fas est accedere; fiat voluntas Domini. Mitto vobis transcriptum litterarum papalium pro lamentabili depopulatione partium Antiochensium domino Cantuarie directarum, si forte tantæ hostilitatis vastitatem Terræ Sanctæ tam periculose imminentem, aut famæ relatio aut signatio litteræ nondum ad vos usque detulerit; transcriptum etiam litteræ mihi a domino Cantuarie pro memorato negotio transmissæ, cui ego litteratorie cum quanta valui instantia supplicavi, ut me a memorata commissione exoneraret, et illam in aliquem prælatorum Angliæ transferret: mitto, inquam, memoratam litteram mihi directam, ut si opus fuerit ope vestra liberari insufficientia mea valeat a tam molesto gravamine. In confectione autem præsentium adhuc ipsius responsum super hoc expectavi.

Et cum sit prudens eloquii mystici minus curandum putavi explanandis Scripturæ testimoniis superius positis insistere. Contristaret excessus piæ recordationis magistri Radulfi de Cantuaria,<sup>1</sup> ni ad lætificandum occurreret videlicet præsumptio, quod in conspectu Domini pretiosa sit mors ipsius quam præcessit usque ad exitum vita laudabilis. Poterit autem vestra discretio, si placet, cum domina comitissa et fratre Gregorio mihi signare quod expedire videatur de successore eidem substituendo, necnon de personis ad ministerium vestrum evocandis, ne in hac parte tædium inferat diuturnior expectatio certitudinis.

Non sine causa vestram exhortor in Christo pietatem, anxissime obsecrans quatenus scribere velitis Ricardo de Averinges,<sup>2</sup> ut non permittat ministeriales viros in Anglia, quibus est rerum commissa custodia, animas pro quibus mortuus est Auctor Vitæ perneceabiliter trucidare. Sed si dilationem præsentem pia patientia perferamus, spero indubitanter quod expectatio cedet ad salutem et complacentiam, Salvatore melius disponente secundum occultum sui beneplaciti, quam secundum planum nostri desiderii. Cæterum super negotio, quod nostis, videtur mihi nihil fore scribendum, hac vice, præsertim cum agatur de re maxima, et hinc speretur salus summa, illinc vero timeantur extrema pericula, et secundum sensum sapientis mortua littera unicuique sensum præferat, vox autem viva plures formas demonstrat, et nullatenus muta scriptura sic respondere valet sollicitis interrogationibus sicut potest sermonis multiplicitas. Et scio certissime quod nullo modo innotescunt aut tam prudenter aut tam salubriter ea quæ sunt agenda maxime circa res grandes per characteres scripturæ, quæ copiose et utiliter per diligentiam tractatum et multiformitatem discussionum ex illuminationibus patefiunt Divinæ clementiæ, cum honor Dei sincere quæritur et propter vitam æternam laboratur. Nonne propterea et beati Apostoli, quorum unusquisque inæstimabilem Spiritus Sancti affluentiam suscepit, et tota ecclesiasticarum personarum discretio et mundi principes, qui tanta splenduerunt sapientia, et populorum sæcularium conciones, a temporum exordiis per colloquiorum vivaces disquisitiones ea quæ recta sunt investigare non desistunt, et ea quæ exsequenda sunt disponunt. Proinde rogo vestræ non displiceat serenitati, si de illo facto tam ambiguae formidinis, secundum quod voluistis non rescribo, quia nullo modo video expedire, ne forte per aliquam incuriam, quam nescio cavere, per scriptum causis salutaribus, quod absit, ingeneratur irreparabilis detrimenti periculum.

Grates vobis refero, quod mihi communicare voluistis rumores Terræ Sanctæ, quamvis plurimum tristes et permaxime timendas. Valete semper in Christo et beatissima Virgine. Habetis præsentiam dominorum Lincolnæ, Wygornia, Fratris Gregorii, in quibus, ut Cujus enim vel execrabilem animam non consternat, adeo quod ultra non sit spiritus, cum considerat felicissimum Catholicorum potentatum regem, victoriosos castrorum fidelium duces, bellicosos Christiani certaminis proceres, prævalidos devotæ militiæ populos, qui cum tanta fidei certitudine, cum tanta fortitudine fiduciæ, cum tanto dilectionis fervore, cum tanto timore Divinitatis, cum tam potenti virtute, sollicitudine tam vigili, tam pia æmulatione, constantia tam longanimi, ad hoc se accingere meruerunt inspirati divinitus, ut pulsus hostibus regni Dei, ad divinam formam vivendi, ad divinam censuram judicandi, ad divinum ritum colendi, restituerent hæreditatem Dei; et profusas opum copias exponentes, et armantes robustos bellatorum exercitus, et gravidas classium multitudines instruentes, et jura cœlestis imperii latius distendentes? ## CXLVI.

The true motives and purposes of victory.

Notum est universis, quos rationis expertes non vexat insania, quia periculosa laboris bellici certamina et dignum initium, et justum processum, et salutarem exitum sortiri divinitus cognoscuntur, cum et virtus impavida et sensus inerratus vel disertus, et zelus devotus, per omnia satagit ut subactis piæ pacis hostibus, ordinate, pacifice Dei populus quod prudenter discernit gerit fortiter, temperanter cohibet, distribuit innocenter ad cultum summæ Divinitatis, ubi pax nihil aliud est quam ordinatissima et concordatissima jucunditas fruendi Deo et invicem in Deo; illum videlicet felicitatis finem indesinenter referat, ubi est Deus benedictus, Deus beatus Salvator, rex pacificus, omnia in omnibus, æternitate certa, pace perfecta, secundum prælibationem in terris et secundum satietatem in excelsis. Quid enim aliud docemur in illo monarchiæ mundialis principe, qui ait: "Cum pluribus gentibus imperarem et universum meæ ditioni subjugassem, volui nequam potentiam abuti magnitudine, sed clementia et lenitate gubernare subjectos, ut absque ullo terrore vitam silentio transigentes optata eunctis mortalibus pace fruerentur." Ad hoc sane secundum supernarum legum decreta desudant exercitia præliorum, ut regni Dei adversarios ferrum edomet, quos verbum non æmendat, et instar viventium in polo disponantur degentes in solo. Sed quid? Qualiter hoc fieri continget? Profecto non aliter nisi ut secundum exempla castrorum triumphalium, tam gloriam Dei et populi liberationem æmulantium, in confessione propriarum iniquitatum et divinarum bonitatum consideratione, cum gratissimis lacrymarum profusionibus, hominibus insufficientiam et omnipotentiam Creatori rependamus incessanter cum illis de quibus canit tam solemniter ecclesia: "In hymnis et confessionibus benedicebant Dominum, qui magna fecit in Israël, et victoriam dedit illis Dominus Omnipotens." Nunquam, oro, clementissimi cordis catholica magnanimitas horum sustineat oblivisci.

Dominus rex, dominus archiepiscopus, domina regina, R. comes, dominus Petrus de Sabaudia, cæterique nonnulli prælatorum et procerum erga personam vestram in Anglia, sicut ex evidentibus sermonum indiciis conjici potest, longe sereniorum solito, sit benedictus Deus pacis et dilectionis, conceperunt benevolentiam.

The king and the nobility better inclined to the earl than formerly.

Cum liberaliter concessisset carissimus pater fratrum minorum, Angliæ minister, ut Frater Gregorius de Bosell, vobis et vestris in Christo fidelissimus, ad vos venire acceleraret juxta quod domina comitissa requisivit, quoniam ego instanti anno lecturus Oxoniæ nullatenus evadere potui quin, suspensa lectione, domino archiepiscopo Cantuariæ assisterem, nisi per fratrem Gregorium absentiae meæ defectus suppleretur, cum magna de benignitatis vestræ discretione fiducia ordinatum est, ut me, secundum quod Dominus dederit, impendente eruditionem Oxoniæ, memoratus Frater Gregorius stet cum præfato domino Cantuariæ; unde dilata est ad præsens ejus ad vos profectio, impleturi per Dei gratiam beneplacitum vestri opportuniore tempore. Ab aliquot diebus intimis visceribus flagrans desiderium, ut spero, cœlitus, concepi desiderabili serenitatis vestræ frui colloquio, confidens de gratia clementissimi Salvatoris, quod per inviolabilem fidei vestræ serenitatem, adjutorium pariter et consilium, peccatis meis non obsistentibus, divinitus præstabitur, ut per viam rectitudinis proficiam ad tam diu suspiratam pacis divinæ felicitatem. Licet per ineffabilem illius clementiam, cujus proprium est misereri semper et parcere, cœlestium illuminationum eventus miraculose orbem Christianum his diebus lætificaverint, tamen plurimum formidandum fore creditur, quod nisi vias suas catholica fidelium nationum cum dignis pœni-tentiæ fructibus, et nequaquam, ut est hodie, addens prævaricationem, correxerit ecclesia, implebit Divinorum judiciorum dira districtio, quod scriptum est: "Ante

Greg. de Bosell cannot attend the earl at present.

"ruinam exaltatur cor, et extrema gaudii luctus
"occupat."

Regrets that the Earl of Cornwall has advised delay in a business of great importance.

Nequaquam mirandum est si anxiolem saucio cordi molestiam littera vestræ dominationis ingesserit, insinuans quod inclytus comes Cornubiæ tantam maximi negotii cogentiam prorogandam censuit per tam magnum periculosi temporis intervallum. Augmentavit etenim quam plurimum angustiam, quod ad memoratum negotium salubriter expediendum summe necessarium, nobilitatis vestræ præsentiam, quantacunque rerum magnitudo subducit, sicut reor, cum non mediocri salutis optatæ detrimento. Sed quid? Contra formidabiles ambiguum eventuum exitus hoc infallibile semper recurrit remedium, quod secundum salutaria exempla virorum triumphalium Illi diligentia indefessa supplicetur, de quo scriptum est: "Tu autem, Domine vir-
"tutis, cum tranquillitate judicas, et cum magna re-
"verentia disponis quæ circa nos." Cum etenim ignoramus quid agere debeamus, omnem sollicitudinem nostram in Ipsum projiciamus, qui amat animas. Hæc est certe sapientiæ celestis dispensatio, ut nonnunquam præsidium auferat humanum desperabili causarum difficultati, quibus magnifice disponit divinum præstare patrocinium cunctis sæculis, perpetua clamante vigilantia, "Cum placuerint Domino viæ hominis, inimicos quo-
"que ejus convertet ad pacem." Cæterum, quales, obsecro, benignissimæ serenitati gratiarum actiones modicitatis meæ poterit referre devotio, per quam tam exilis meriti pauperculæ tantæ dignationis benevolentiam tam liberaliter scribere voluistis?

De his hæcenus. Ad hoc, O domine desideratissime, annon nefarium judicabitur, juxta quod persuadent exempla nobilium, convincunt efficacæ rationum, præcipiunt auctoritates sapientum, si quos et dignitas sanguinis, et claritas ingenii, et strenuitas militiæ titulis illustrent clarioribus, nequaquam et irreprehensibilis forma vivendi et inflexibilis censura judicandi et inviolabilis ritus colendi, spectabilioribus insigniant virtutibus? Quale namque fore putabitur si, quod absit, quem naturæ gloria honorandum sublimavit, hunc dejiciat conculcandum ignominia vitiorum? Studeat, ergo, jugiter eximia vestræ serenitatis industria, ut eidem sit facies hilaris; hoc est<sup>1</sup> sint oculi pudici, sint aures disciplinatæ, sit lingua discreta, sint manus validæ, sint pedes honesti, sit pectus piûm, sit cor latum, sit conscientia pura, sit gestus maturus, sit habitus moderatus, sit opinio integra, sint consiliiarii fideles, sint ministri sinceri. Apex quoque vester sit devotus ad prælatos, sit fidus ad principes, sit consultus ad proceres, sit socialis ad milites, sit affabilis ad plebes, sit amabilis ad omnes, sit severus ad rebelles, sit suavis ad unanimos, et ut sit ad unum dicere, servetur ad superiores obedientia et reverentia, ad compares honor et amicitia, ad subditos miseratio et munificentia. Hæc idcirco sub modulo brevitatis perstrinxerim, ut qualitercunque commonefiat ingenuæ mentis eminentia, [inter] tam grandium occupationum turbamina, sicut sapientis monet eloquium, qui ait: "Da occasionem sapienti et sapientior erit." Propter quod oro pia suscipiat dignatio quod sollicita præsumpsit affectio; licet sermo conceptus in prolixum extendi conaretur, compescuit calamum ad succingendam epistolam temporis angustia.

Urging her

Breviter scripsi, quia prolixius scribere non vacavit. Ex illa Dei sententia, qua dicitur, "Faciamus ei adjutorium simile sibi," evidenter instruimur, quia uxor viro districtissime tenetur, et per vigoris constantiam, et per discretionis prudentiam, et per benignitatis clementiam, jugem juvaminis impendere sedulitatem, ad omnia in quibus, aut Deus colitur, aut juste vivitur, aut recte judicatur. Propter quod omnis anima conjugal, quæ modis omnibus hoc implere non satagit, individuum vitæ consortium, in quod secundum legem matrimonii intemperate servandum conjuravit, damnabiliter violare convincitur. Cujus prævaricationis reatum præcunctis mentes incurrere comprobantur, quæ per dæmoniales irarum furores amantissimam conjugii pacem perturbare non formidant. Proinde contra tales formidabiliter illud occurrit, "Virum stultum, id est, animum, interficit iracundia et parvulum occidit invidia." Nempe dum per iram mansuetudo amittitur, divinæ imaginis similitudo vitiatur, sapientia perditur, vita amittitur, justitia relinquatur, socialitas destruitur, concordia rumpitur, veritas obumbratur. De ira rixæ, tumor mentis, contumeliæ, clamor, indignatio, pusillanimitas, blasphemæ proferuntur. Quam necessario sequitur tristitia, de qua malitia, rancor, pusillanimitas, desperatio, torpor circa præcepta, vagatio mentis erga illicita nascitur. In ira cor palpitatur, in concussionem proximi propellit, in maledictionem linguam impingit, mentem intus devastat, odium carissimorum generat et foedus amicitiae dissolvit. Absit ut tam execranda pestis animum, tam multiplici illustrium titulorum gloria sublimatum, in ignominiam exitialis barathri detestabilem detrudat! Subveniat, oro, placidissima piissimæ Virginis gratia apud benedictum Auctorem pacificæ dilectionis, ut pax

Nec miretur, obsecro, perspicuæ considerationis subtilitas, quod rem acerrimam ex sanctorum eloquiis acrius Against

An non est Divinitatis injuria, speciem quam venustatis<sup>1</sup> decoravit privilegio, nescio quibus ineptis peregrinæ superinductionis fucare? Audiamus divinos Apostolos, quorum Princeps sic ait: “Mulieres subditæ sint viris suis, ut et siqui non credunt verbo, per mulierum conversationem lucrifiant, considerantes in timore sanctam conversationem. Quarum sit non extrinsecus capillatura aut circumdatio auri aut indumenti vestimentorum cultus; sed qui absconditus est cordis homo in incorruptibilitate quieti et modesti spiritus, qui est in conspectu Dei locuples.” Doctor etenim gentium, qui omnia omnibus factus est, ut omnes lucrifaceret, cunctis clamat mortalibus: “Mulieres in habitu, ornatu, cum verecundia et sobrietate ornantes se non in tortis crinibus, aut auro, aut margaritis, vel veste pretiosa; sed quod decet mulieres promittentes pietatem per opera bona.” Utinam perspicuum pectus panderet quanta sit anxietas cordi pavido, pro eo quod oportet dissuadendis tantæ perniciæ nugacitatibus insistere inter tot salutis negotia, de quibus, nisi per hujuscemodi fatuitates excluderetur, sermo tam necessarius foret habendus ad splendidissimam vestræ pietatis industriam.

Tactus dolore cordis intrinsecus, et foris faciei rubore suffusus, jam a diebus pluribus inhonestioribus famæ crebrescentibus molestiis, super dedecentiis statum vestrum maculantibus non mediocriter audiui, quæ mens amaricata nec immerito plangere non cessat. Quamobrem ob contemplationem Salvatoris, qui cum sit Pater misericordiarum et Deus totius consolationis, venientem ad se non eiecit foras, cui dictum est, " Miseris omnium, quia omnia potes, et dissimulas peccata hominum propter pœnitentiam, parcis autem omnibus quæ tua sunt, Domine, qui amas animas;" rogo, moneo, et adjuro, ut de cætero beneficientes multiplicibus honestatum incrementis, et conscientiam serenare coram Altissimo, et ad homines opinionem reformare studeatis, modis omnibus in iis quæ virum vestrum, et liberos vestros, familiam vestram, et communiter proximos vestros contingunt; vigilanter, rationabiliter, et pacifice, secundum exempla matronarum laudabilium vosmetipsas jugiter exhibentes. Scituræ quod ego, cum cæteris amicis vestris, secundum quod Divinitati placuerit et expedire videbitur, indefesse laborabo ad salutem vestram pariter et honorem, dum tamen huic suasioni, immo præceptioni divinæ consentire vestra benignitas voluerit cum effectu. eventibus domino comiti et vobis per Dei clementiam concessis, in litteris tam diligenter conscriptis, statum quoque memorati comitis et vestri liberorumque vestrorum desideranti animo innotescere non omisit. Sit benedictio supernæ dispensationi per omnia, quæ si obstiterit diffidentiae pusillanimitas indubitanter novit quod sub Divino patrocínio, in Angelorum præsidio, cum Sanctorum adjutorio, cunctas salutarium difficultates in manibus memorati comitis, sive sæviant hostes, sive proditores moliantur, sive obloquantur detractores, sive perversores insaniant, triumphali celebritate consummabit. Absit a serena regii cordis excellentia vana ficti timoris ignavia. Numquid hæsitare poterit humana suspicio ubi dignatio Divina ex præteritorum exhibitione expectationem futurorum consummare curavit? Sit ergo vobis in Auctore salutis certitudo infallibilis, quod ea quæ ratione salutari sunt inchoata salubriter adimplebit, propter Nominis sui gloriam et de se fideliter sperantium consolationem.

Utinam, sicut semper liberet, liceret sæpe vestræ sanctitatis animæ Deiformi pectoris anhelis spiritum avidum præsentare per litteræ colloquium, quod per officium linguæ non valeo! Obsistit hic nempe absentia corporalis amicitialibus animis juxta sapientum sententiam, licet non sine planctuum anxiamine ferenda tamen pro tempore quam dispensatio legitima salubriori necessitate mortalibus defectibus adesse compellit. Numquid non ille inviolabilis amicitiae superamabilis Fœderator eis, quos sui ipsius supercelesti dignificavit amicitia, "Vos," inquit, "dixi amicos, quia quæcunque audivi a Patre meo nota feci vobis omnia." Jam jamque corporali viduaturus præsentia præmittere curavit: "Ego veritatem dico vobis, expedit vobis ut ego vadam." Videlicet ne quantumcunque delectabili gratiæ tamen carnali hæreatis infirmitati. Sed ex ea, per eam, super eam in super desiderabilem gloriam certe spiritualem conscendatis alacriter. Huic consentit illud Apostoli: "Etsi cognovimus secundum carnem Christum; sed nunc jam non novimus." Porro hic occurrit admodum mirandus Peripatetici principatus præceptor primus qui corporalem absentiam inter maxima veracis amicitiae damna deputari contendit.<sup>2</sup> Quomodo namque veri amici, quorum amicam necessitudinem solummodo conciliat verus amor bonitatis, juxta quod probat memoratus sapientum primicerius, arbitrari poterunt amicitiae felici quod quicquam detrahat corporalis disjunctio, prope positos regalem declinare præsentiam, maxime cum vigeat causa, quam dominus rex non irrationabiliter tanti æstimat, nec insolentioris supercilii notam, nec odibilioris ingratitude oblocutionem, nec vehementioris indignationis motus aliquatenus, sicut creditur, effugeretis. Denique illustres animi sapientum, ex consideratione sæcularium phantasmatum in pomposis solemnitatum celebritatibus nitorem lanuginis præferentium, sublimeriter proficiunt ad insignem mendacis mundi contemptum. Super omnia verba vitæ contra tanta coelicæ salutis pericula impavidæ sanctitatis sapientia non tacebit, si hanc inspiraverit Is, qui omnium est Artifex, omnem habens virtutem, quique ante reges et præsides incogitados sermones subministrat ad salutem.

CLXXII.

The Queen and the Countess of Leicester require the writer's attendance. Would be glad to have his advice.

Hoc ago littera, quod lingua nequeo. Videlicet alloquor desiderabilem mansuetudinis vestræ paternitatem. Juvat enim quos salutaris necit necessitudo per scripturam spirituum exhibere præsentiam, cum personalem excludit necessaria dispensatio. Verum intolerabilibus vestrarum occupationum jugitatibus importunitatem prolixi sermonis ingerere, non tam improbum quam noxium fore putavi. Quid ergo? Ut quid multa? Porro unum est necessarium. Et quid hoc? Nonne hoc quod divinum Moysen docuit Is, qui ait, "Sine me nihil potestis facere;" et alibi, "In mundo pressuram, in me autem pacem habebitis?" Et adhuc inquires, "Quid hoc est?" Hoc est profecto sine quo superior locus ecclesiastici regiminis nisi provocandæ Divinitati et perdendis animabus non tenetur. Nostis autem, et quis melius? hoc esse illud, quod cum sævirent rebellantium violentiæ, cum insanirent insultantium convicia, cum urgerent malignantium molimina, pro quibus ait, “Aut dimitte eis hanc noxam, aut dele me de libro quem scripsisti.” Ipsi legislatori tam salutaris jussionis vigilantia præcepit Dominus nunc montis ascensum, nunc introitum tabernaculi. Et quid per ascensionem montis nisi limpida supernæ veritatis contemplatio? quid per introitum tabernaculi nisi ignitum orationis sacrificium? Quorum illa sine tranquillitate vacationis, suspensis quantumcunque salutaribus exercitiis, non attingitur; istud vero sine mortificatione passionum, repressis motibus quantumcunque sedulitatis, nequaquam celebratur. Propterea ignorare nequit nisi quem aut excæcaverit astutia sæculi, aut carnis illecebra captivavit, quam sit execrandus qui cœlicæ passionis ministerium profiteretur, et tamen in iis quæ dicta sunt, secundum summam intentionis æstimationem jugiter pergens in Dominum, cui est cura de omnibus, non immoratur. Hæc igitur scripserim non ut indefessam vestræ sanctitatis sollicitudinem aut doceam aut reprehendam; sed ut secundum sententiam Salomonis devota filiatio piæ paternitati præstet occasionem.

De his huc usque sufficiat. Novi namque quam efficaciter in hac parte et in similibus sibi persuaserit desuper vobis data sapientia. Scripsit mihi domina regina litteram affectuosam et efficacem, ut, cum opportunitas se offerret, præsentiam ipsius adire non omitterem; quod mihi non mediocriter foret grave et molestum. Instat etiam domina comitissa Leycestriæ quod ad eam veniam circa instans festum Sti. Michaelis, et etiam per Sept. 29th. aliquem magnum super similibus sum sollicitatus. Vestrum erit super hoc quod vobis sederit mihi si placet signare. Quid me velit vestra paternitas facere post præsentem autumnum precor expresse signare.

Valeat vobis, oro, et virtus invicta, et sensus indeceptus, et zelus irremissus ad illius operis consummationem, quod propitia Divinitas vobis et quibusdam filiorum vestrorum ad veram Ordinis reformationem nuper inspiravit. Genua pietatis vestræ complexus deprecor humiliter, supplicius obsecrans ut meæ parvitatibus insufficientiam Divinæ velitis commendare miserationi, per salvifica vestri et filiorum vestrorum fratrum minorum suffragia, eosque qui mecum per vestram laborant ordinationem. Salutari peto obsequio mei carissimos patres et fratres, fratrem R., fratrem W., cæterosque fratres filios vestros, in Auctore salutis.

Valeat vestra paternitatis incolumitas in Christo, etc.

Quamobrem indubitanter credi debet quod, Divinitate propitia, ante prolixa temporum curricula, ad honorem Domini, et cleri doctrinam, et populi salutem, si eidem de continuitate studii provideatur, laudabiliter proficiet ad prædicationem Verbi Dei, in eloquii promptitudine, qua præditus esse cognoscitur, quo etiam nonnulli longe inferiores ad officium eruditionis impendendæ, ut opinor, in Scriptura Sacra sunt designati de discretorum consilio. Verum oculata fide conspicio, secundum quod cogit mea necessitas, et utilitas mea requirit, quia quicumque fratrum mihi in adiutorium tam varii et tam continui laboris fuerit associatus, postposito ecclesiastici sudoris exercitio, illum jugiter oportebit defectibus meis supplendis, et viis meis dirigendis, et oneribus meis supportandis insistere, etiam nonnunquam, si ipsi geminaretur et virtus et industria et longanimitas Absit igitur a me ista tyrannidis impietas, ut velim in præfato fratre tantos divinæ dispensationis profectus aut attenuari, aut retardari, aut impediri ob privatae commoditatis considerationem. Præsertim cum mihi sine communi dispendio in competenti consortio, sicut hactenus vestri gratia factum est, valeat per Salvatoris misericordiam provideri. Per experientiam quoque conicio quod nequit, quantæcunque sit mansuetudinis seu quanticumque vigoris, præfatus frater A., sine corporis gravamine et mentis inquietudine, nisi quatenus urgentia mitigat obedientiæ salutaris diurnos æstus et vigiliis nocturnas, mecum indeficienter sufferre.

Cum igitur per certissima compererim argumenta, quod ad subveniendum meis insufficientiis, quantum secundum Dominum fieri valebit, perfectam in Christo gerat voluntatem vestræ discretionis inolita benignitas, fiducialiter rogo quatenus, si vestræ non displicet sanctæ paternitati, desideratum in Christo fratrem Laurentium de Sutthon ad me sine moræ dispendio in subsidium societatis, si tamen in hoc ipsum ipse consentiat, remittere dignemini præfatum fratrem A. Londinum ad studendum, intuitu Christi, quod et ipse, si vestro sederit beneplacito, plurimum desiderat, nihilominus maturius mittere consentientes. Si autem dictus frater Laurentius aliquem satis tolerabilem patiatur defectum, insignitus tamen est quam plurimis ad assistendum meæ parvitatibus idoneitatibus, quamvis vulgaris pertinacia non sic sentiat. Nunquam tamen formidat sapiens odibilem inconstantiae notam, ubi supernæ veritati constanter inhæretur, quæ secundum rerum transmutabilium varietates diversas, tamen eadem manens, præcipit vicissitudines consiliorum. Quod quia stultorum superba jactantia pervicaciter exhorrescit, ipsi recedentes ab incommutabili veritate, et mutabilium eventibus innitentes, illud incurrunt cum despicabili ignominia, quod ex inani gloria fugiunt; adeo quod contra ipsos loquitur sapientia, dicens: "Stultus ut luna "mutatur, cum sapiens sicut sol perseveret."

Valeat paternitatis vestræ sanctitas etc. Tanto propensiori diligentia præscriptæ petitionis effectum precor maturare velitis, quanto dum pendet anceps exitus arbitrii vestri, in hac parte series tranquillitatis non mediocriter æmulanda desiderandi moderaminis patietur detrimentum. In æternum valete in Christo.

Si petita superius concesseritis, bene quidem. Sin autem, quod bonum est in oculis vestris fiat per Dominum. Expedivi secundum quod mihi desuper dictum est apud dominum Lyncolniæ quæ mandastis.

Begs to be excused meeting him at Bedford on the score of ill-health and the urgency of his studies.

Proinde suavitatis vestræ supplico clementiæ, cum quanta valeo rogans intentione, quatenus perpensis studii urgentia cum angustia temporis, corporis valetudine cum animi molestia, parcat mihi vestræ sanctitatis pietas intuitu sancti Salvatoris et piissimæ Virginis, ne cogar cum multiplici mentis et corporis discrimine, sicut nuper mihi scripsistis, apud Bedford vobis occurrere, beneplacitum honorabilis reverentiæ vestræ per latorem præsentium meæ parvitatatis humilitati signantes, Domino propitio, per omnia, sicut dignum est, jussionibus vestris super id modicum quod potest obtemperare. Fratri W., Ministro Angliæ, Frater Adæ devotum supplicis obedientiæ famulatum.

On the true rest of man.

Distantia mille passuum inter Montem Oliveti et civitatem Jerusalem, obtineat mihi et cæteris filiis vestris cursu veloci breviter explicare orationis vestræ longanimitas indeficiens perventuris ad Sabbathum in utroque homine delicatum, certe placidam tranquillitatis perfectæ requiem, in affluentissimis dulcedinum absconditarum deliciis, cujus in litteræ vestræ primordio sub affectuoso meministis desiderio. Sic scilicet ut dextris sequacium divinitus apprehensis in divinæ majestatis manuactione perpeti<sup>1</sup> pariter pertingamus ex Monte Oliveti per iter Sabbathi in civitatem Jerusalem; videlicet ex Sabbatho gratiæ per viam vitæ in Sabbathum gloriæ; viam, aio, vitæ excellentiorem vivificæ caritatis directionem, quam inæstimabiliter extollens Apostolus, "Adhuc," inquit, "excellentiorem" viam vobis demonstro. Si linguis loquor hominum "et angelorum, caritatem autem non habeam, factus sum velut æs sonans aut cymbalum tinniens." Iter revera Sabbathi, quo<sup>2</sup> speciosis bonæ voluntatis plebibus tam pie quam feliciter ambulaturis a monte<sup>3</sup> gratiosæ pietatis ad civitatem gloriosæ felicitatis, mille mysticarum dimensionum passibus, hoc est, mille vivificarum<sup>4</sup> virtutum profectibus spiritualiter integrato<sup>1</sup> productis ex vitalis decalogi denario, secundum quod est apud denariam effectuum sanctitatem. Secundo proficiat millenarium mille vivificarum virtutum passibus, quod nunc dictum est iter Sabbathi viam vitæ vivificæ distinguentem, in uno sui terminorum habentem montem lætificæ miserationis, in alio civitatem pacificæ visionis; in utroque Sabbathum delicatum hominis utriusque. Porro secundum gratiosam prægustationem in tempore, secundum gloriosam satietatem in æternitate. Forsitan exiet nescio quis nemo, omnis veritatis omnino nescius, qui ex vesaniori dæmonialis arrogantiae cæcitate altissima cœlestium eloquiorum mysteria blasphemare non formidans, deridendus deridere præsumens, quippe ridere potes de ridiculoso, illud quod ingenii tardioris angusta tenuitas hic nunc exprimere conata est. Utinam affectu simplici, quo de Domino sentitur, in bonitate et in simplicitate cordis quæritur de ratione denarii bis ducti ad productionem millenarii, conficientis integraliter iter Sabbathi, quem ex derisione terribilem objurgans Auctor eloquii mystici, ait: " Qui erudit derisorem, ipse sibi injuriam facit." Et iterum: " Ejice derisorem, et exhibit cum eo jurgium." Numquid quæ in utroque Testamento tam subtili commendantur exquisitione numerorum rationes vacare putabimus a mysteriis? Legamus si libet doctorum ecclesiæ, Gregorii, Augustini, Bedæ, et cæterorum commentarios, si doceri dignemur quam sint investigandæ rationum numeralium arcana potestates, præ cæteris universitatis perfectæ speciebus ad patefacienda salvifica mysticorum eloquiorum latibula. Amen.

Opus esset hic sermo longus et interpretabilis, si non rectius eligeret insipientis affectio animo sapientis Scripturarum studioso, ut sit sapientior occasionem præstitisse. Causa levis, gravis instantia, admirari cogunt recusationem inexorabilem.<sup>1</sup> Si mansuetudo, si consideratio, si sanctitas, si longanimitas exhibendæ caritati et veritati conspiciendæ, præsertim in divinissimarum solemnitatum tantis concurrentiis, sollicitius accomodandæ veracius cognoscantur, numquid non secus faciendum fuisse judicabitur? Dum insuper et celsitudinem pontificalem, et filialem devotionem, et æmulationem amicabilem, et rationabilem persuasionem, rupta cujuscunque necessitudinis obsistentia, conculcare non pigeat, hic certe reor formidandam exercendæ potestatis ambitionem. Sit summæ sollicitudinis vestræ suavitati cum illuminatione cœlica salus sempiterna! Habito consultæ deliberationis tractatu, prout divinitus datum est, juxta jussionis vestræ tenorem, cum prædilectis patribus Johanne domini papæ nuntio, Thoma de Eboraco, et R. Cornubiæ, accito ad id ipsum viro provido gardiano Oxoniæ, super mandato ministri generalis dicto fratri Cornubiæ directo, licet concorditer visum fuerit quod idem frater R., propter multimoda valetudinum suarum discrimina, missis excusatoriis ad ministrum generalem, non tam secunda conscientia, quam obedientia intemerata, remanere valeret in consuetis studiorum exercitiis Oxoniæ, tamen provisum est per memoratos fratres quod idem frater R. propter temporis angustiam maturitate celeri vestram Londini adeat præsentiam, ut per vestræ circumspectionis industriam quid facto opus sit convenientius innotescat.<sup>1</sup>

Jan. 31st.

tunc et alias propositarum quasi primaria fuit, quod vos, qui mihi vice Dei præsidetis, de fratrum nostrorum consensu, mihi officium eruditionis impendendæ in sacris eloquiis imposueratis, cujus jussionibus non obtemperare animo volenti et devota promptitudine mihi fore cognoscitur nefarium scelus prævaricatæ professionis. Alia autem fuit, insufficientiæ meæ multimodi defectus, quos coram throno Majestatis protestatus sum, licet hoc rei ambiguitas non cogeret longissime subsistere citra sufficientiam et validissimæ virtutis, et clarissimi sensus, et æmulationis sanctissimæ, et constantissimæ stabilitatis; et præter hæc amplius universos opinionis integerrimæ, quæ quidem omnia inevitabili necessitate requiruntur in viris, qui tanto archipræsuli ex decreto cœlesti debent assistere in potentibus adiutoriis, in consiliis timoratis, in ministeriis mundis. Tertia quoque fuit, jam fatiscientis ætatis annosa prolixitas, propter quam potissime mihi summopere consultum erit, ut satagam deinceps omnimodis et frequentias curiales et aulica exercitia penitus declinando, sub regularibus professæ religionis observantiis actuosam sollicitudinem diminuerè, et augmentare vacationem otiosam; si quo modo concederetur rebus humanis post dies paucos excessuro prægustare divinas jucunditates in tempore, quibus satiandi sumus in æternitate; ut illuc inoffense feratur inter turbamina temporalium discriminum liberum absolutæ mentis desiderium, ubi est Deus omnia in omnibus, æternitate certa et pace perfecta. Quarta etiam fuit privilegium apostolicum pro me a fratribus impetratum, cui obvenire non debeo, ne cogar in alicujus prælati aut principis domestico laborare contubernio. Quintum insuper fuit, districtum domini regis mandatum, quo interdictum fuit domino archiepiscopo ne me, velut proditorium inimicum, ad comitivam suam evocaret. Sexta nihilominus fuit, commissiones causarum inter dominum regem et dominum Menevensem, et inter eundem dominum et dominum abbatem

Glovernæ, propter quas licet mihi alias concederetur agere de judicio, nequaquam personali præsentia dominum archiepiscopum comitari. Septima denique fuit, quæ super omnia in hac parte cogitabilia me maxime faciunt exhorrescere ipsius domini archiepiscopi personalem assistentiam, sæculis omnibus atrocitas superstumpenda de strage animarum, quæ, proh nefas! jugiter hactenus fieri assuevit, pro eo quod nunc auctoritate provisionum, nunc jurisdictione metropolitana, nunc ratione patronali, si personaliter adessem, indesinenter aspicerem ecclesiam Dei dissipari, sanctuarium Dei profanari, Filium Dei conculcari, sanguinem testamenti pollui; curis gregum dominicorum traditis nunquam curaturis, ignavis, impiis, et pervicacibus, sed eosdem vastaturis, direpturis, prodituris, dæmoniali rabie superatrocissimi furoris concitatis. Quibus tam superhorrendis spectaculis si assistens reclamem, nihilominus exercebuntur facinora tam nefariæ crudelitatis. Sin autem connivendo sileo, quod absit! mors mihi erit.

Cum igitur nunc septem proposuissem causarum ob-sistentias, quominus fieret de me quod fieri voluit sæpe dictus archiepiscopus, ad omnia rationabili respondit pro-secutione secundum æstimationem astantium, promittens se secundum meæ modicitatis insinuationem erroribus correctionem adhibiturum. A domina regina quoque, ut ipse mihi postea dixit, obtinuit litteras cum propriis destinatas, qui postquam veni Oxoniam misit mihi litte-cum eodem comite, super arctioribus negotiorum articulis collocuturum in Domino.<sup>1</sup> Hæc modo scripsi, licet ipsa dicta vel facta scriptura non æquiparet, ut, si dignum duxeritis, quæ et qualiter volueritis rescribatis.

Cæterum vestræ innotescat paternitati, inter dominum Cantuariensem et dominum Wyntoniam discordiarum discrimina nuper exorta, post plurimos diutinorum tractatum labores, in hac forma conquievisse: videlicet quod dominus electus juramento solenni coram domino archiepiscopo, in præsentia suffraganeorum, comitum, et baronum, et complurium aliorum clericorum et laicorum, suam purgavit innocentiam super injuriis contra dictum dominum Cantuariensem in manerio de Lameæ et alibi præsumtis. De offensis autem et excessibus ex utraque illatis compromissum est in duos episcopos ad hoc datos a domino Cantuarie, videlicet dominum Wygorniam et dominum Norwycensem; secundum quod ipsi decreverint emendæ fiant hinc inde, ad honorem Dei et ecclesiæ. De controversia autem hospitalis in Suwerk,<sup>2</sup> quæ fuit occasio omnium dissensionum, in hac parte, compromissum est in dominum comitem Cornubiæ, qui per se, vel coassumptis sibi ad hoc duobus episcopis vel pluribus, neutri parti suspectis, super omnibus hanc controversiam contingentibus immutabilem proferat diffinitionem. Videtur, benedictus Deus, quod unanimitas firma, contra spem mortalium, erit inter dominum archiepiscopum et suffraganeos suos, et eorum omnium ad invicem, in prosecutione omnium causarum ecclesiæ apud summum pontificem et dominum regem, ut optata sanctis omnibus qui in terra sunt ecclesiæ et regni reformatio proveniat, prout fuerit propitia Divinitas. Sicut fuerit voluntas in cælo, sic fiat.

Rescripsi domino archiepiscopo ad singulos articulos litteræ suæ, secundum quod mihi competere videbatur in Domino, adjiciens quasi necessitate compulsus quod laborabo, quatenus licito modo fieri poterit, personaliter adire præsentiam ejus circa instantem mediam quadragessimam, ut habeatur secundum Deum fixa devotio super eo quod ipse tam vigili petit instantia. Scripsi etiam dominæ comitissæ Leycestriæ per cursorem suum a vobis redeuntem, quod si fieri poterit opportune accelerabo Boloniam accedere secundum comitis Leycestriæ et ejusdem comitissæ anxias petitiones, non videns quid aliud ei signare conveniret de hoc in præsentiarum.

Has written to the Countess of Leicester that he will comply with her wish if possible.

Finiat, oro, supernus Salvator in salutem sempiternam ista tam intransmutabilia vicissitudinum volumina. Quocunque me vertam? ubi et semper tolero, utinam longanimiter! intolerabilia variarum inquietationum examina. Præcipiat super ipsis quod beneplacitum est in oculis suis, et profuturum electis suis, omnia subjiciens sub pedibus eorum velociter, Verbum Domini, quod in æternum permanet, quod est, quia velociter currit sermo ejus, fidelis minister; ipso præduce vos proficitis in domo ejus. Amen.

Abscidi tria vocabula de litteris domini archiepiscopi, manente sensuum integritate, quia insinuabant sine fraude, ut reor, aliquid quod non vidi utrum sic se haberet rei veritas, ne forte sine causa præferrent displicentiam. De omnibus his, si placet, quid facto opus est signate, precor, in Christo Domino; quia sicut video hoc precari debeo, ut, sicut scripsi domino archiepiscopo, dominæ comitissæ Leycestriæ, fiat sub vestræ sanctitatis obedientia. Spero siquidem quod tempestive postmodum dabitur divinitus desideriis præconceptis directio salutaris. Amen.

Sincerissimam pietatis vestræ litteram, quæ non tam suavem æmulationem, quam sollicitudinem officiosam placidæ religionis erga modicitatem meam, sit oro sanctitati vestræ sempiterna retributio, se tota præferabat, in partibus Londoniæ constitutus suscepi feria secunda proxima post festum St. Lucae. Veni quoque in crastino Scti. Leonardi Oxoniam, ibidem secundum quod propitia fuerit superna dispensatio, quoad fieri valebit, juxta benignum serenitatis vestræ beneplacitum moraturus. Nempe licet domino Londinensi et fratri Johanni de Sancto Egidio, necnon et mihi, per litteram apostolicam delegata sit cognitio judicialis in eam, quæ vertitur inter dominum regem ex una parte, et dominum Menevensem ex altera parte, et nihilominus exilitati meæ incumbat ad mandatum papale cognoscere judicialiter in causa quæ vertitur inter Menevensem ex parte una, et dominum abbatem Gloverniæ ex parte altera, cum quibus collegis nescio. Et insuper dominus Cantuariensis et domina regina, cum benevolis eorum, vehementibus egerint instantiis, ut ipsius domini domestico jungerer contubernio. Provisiva dispensationis divinæ clementia mihi spero prospexit misericordius ab his, et hujusmodi molestissimis intolerabilium angustiarum occupationibus, per imperiosam regiæ majestatis obsistentiam, eximi pro tempore, sit divino Nomini gratiose benedictio, Deo melius aliquid providente. Oxoniam regressus vix respiro inter sibi succedentia turbaminum horrendorum cruciamina. Imperet Dei Filius, excitantibus ipsum viris apostolicis, ventis et mari, ut fiat tranquillitas magna.

Acceptissimo patri nostro, fratri Roberto de Thornham,<sup>1</sup> paternitatis vestræ filio probatissimo, quem multiplicius, ut vos potissime nostis, duplici honore conversationis et regiminis dignificant eminentiæ clariores, juxta præsentem suæ valetudinis exigentiam, quanta possum affectionis diligentia rogo, consolativa lati cordis industria subvenire curetis, propter divini Nominis honorem et considerationem fraterni profectus. Scio ad cœlitus persuasum importunum erit insistere supplicatorii. Credo fore consultum, ut dum medelæ corporali datur opera, memorato fratri vicario provideatur in vicario curæ spiritualis. Spero quod in his et in aliis docebit vos unctio quæ docet de omnibus.

De officio resumendo eruditionis impendendæ nescio si ante instans natalitium Domini fieri poterit quod opto, vobis hoc volentibus. Memini me Herefordiæ juxta conjecturam meam insinuasse discretioni vestræ, quod ante memoratum tempus hoc aggredi non valerem. Cogito tamen hoc maturare prout Dominus donaverit. Sicut fuerit voluntas in cœlo, sic fiat. Concedat, oro, Altissimus studiorum salutaribus exercitiis spiritum infallibilis consilii et fortitudinis insuperabilis, per Jesum Christum semper ad interventum beatissimæ Virginis. Pro vestibis sacris vestiat vos Sacrum Lumen, quo amicum sicut vestimento. In æternum valete. Amen.

Igitur ecce coram clementi sanctitatis vestræ patrocinio si pateret scisso pectore cor saucium nequaquam panderet mœrentis animæ superanxias acrimonias, redi-viva redundantia vitæ domicilium non sine luctu letum minitante concutientes atrocius. Quid enim? Si hoc quod vereor inexplicabilius evenerit, non video nisi ut in omne tempus, si tamen modicum restet, quoad vixero suspendatur, quod absit, et studium vivificæ veritatis agnoscendæ et otium salvificæ sanctitatis assequendæ. Quorum detrimenta, ne dicam damna, præsertim exitu propinquante, quis nisi perditissimæ vesaniæ vecordes excæcati non videt insiccabilis lacrimæ lamento prolixiori assequenda? Hic est enim planctus Unigeniti, quem ut valuit sermo prophetalis aperuit: “Quis,” inquit, “dabit capiti meo aquam, et oculis meis “fontem lacrimarum, et plorabo die ac nocte inter-“fectos filiæ populi mei?” In tetra spiritus mœsti<sup>1</sup> caligine, atro liquore<sup>2</sup> cordis linguæ calamus intinctus præsentibus pinxit characteres nocturnus, diurno quippe non vacavit. Denique quid dicam? Sileo quia nescio.

Sit vobis, oro, Christus Dei virtus, Dei sapientia, Dei sanctificatio, et vigor invictus, et sensus indeceptus, et zelus irremissus in his et in omnibus, per interventum superbenedictum beatissimæ Virginis. Non tam temporis quam mentis angustia angustavit epistolam. Rescribite maturius precor quod inspiraverit spiraculum Omnipotentis. Talibus litteris scripsi qualibet quod volui, quamvis ut volui non valui. Amplius tamen expressi. Sit, opto, pietati vestræ recommendatior Hugonis Cote, per Angelorum præsidium et vestrum ministerium, divinitus edomanda indomabilis pervicacia. Amen.

Discussions in the University of Oxford on the admission of Thomas of York Regent in Theology.

Feb. 22nd.

March 8th.

Ut sanctæ paternitatis vestræ discretioni processus his diebus habitus super facto fratris Thomæ de Eboraco promovendi ad officium eruditionis impendendæ divinorum eloquiorum,<sup>1</sup> juxta quod in præsentiarum et utilitas pia requirit et compellit justa necessitas, plenius innotescat, præsentem cartam, seriem rerum<sup>2</sup> continentem, deliberatione prævia sinceritati vestræ destinare consensi. Igitur cum supplicationum diligentia per quindenam integram a festo Cathedræ Beati Petri sub aliquo intervallo usque ad Sabbathum vigiliæ xl. Martyrum, pro negotio memorato sollicitus apud universitatem protensa<sup>3</sup> fuisset, secundum quod vobis plenius, ut reor, retulit carissimus pater, frater J. custos Oxoniæ, memorato Sabbatho convenerunt cancellarius et magistri et bachelarii quidam, qui prius elegerant de se vii. commissarios, ut ordinarent super eo quod petatum est, de præfato fratre Thoma, et formam statuti conciperent super incepturis in theologia deinceps; qui septem commissarii ordinaverunt, quod sicut petatum est, hac vice frater Thomas inciperet, non obstante impedimento objecto eidem, scilicet quod in artibus non rexerit; insuper statuentes vice cancellarii et universitatis, quod in posterum nullus incipiat in theologia nisi prius inceperit in liberalibus, et unum librum canonis aut Sententias legerit, et publice in universitate prædicaverit. Et si quis pro aliquo, qui hunc defectum patitur, preces magnatum auctoritate armatas impetaverit, penitus universitatis privetur privilegio, et quod huic statuto subscriberent et cancellarius et omnes magistri regentes in Sacra Scriptura, et frater Hugo de Mistretune, et cæteri magistri regentes in decretis et legibus, et duo rectores pro artistis, et frater Ada dictus de Marisco. Quæ cum recitata fuissent coram omnibus, et quia non consensi ut scriberem propter causas quas obtendebam, dilatum fuit colloquium usque in crastinum, sc. Dominicam quadragesimæ. Quo die, cum ob plures causas, quas prius obtenderam, et assererem me nullatenus subscripturum, post varias altercationes ab hucusque in feriam secundam continuo secuturam, pro rogatum est negotium; quum præsentibus cancellario et magistris et scholaribus iteravi adhuc rationes, aliquibus additis, propter quas non adquievi in hac parte eorum voluntati; ut sicut omnes quasi aggregatæ, quia quando alias actum est multum instanter, ut tale statutum roboraretur auctoritate universitatis, ego ipse quantum valui egi omnimodis ne hoc fieret, contradicens, sicut visum fuit, non sine assignatione causarum majorum exceptione qualicumque. Semper etiam et continue post hoc hucusque dissentiens, reatum levitatis incurrerem si subscriberem, cum, causis sentiendi similiter se habentibus, super eodem dissimiliter sentirem. Adhuc etiam quod vitium falsi evidentius admitterem, si quasi victus cupiditate obtinendi quod petebam statuto subscriberem, quod mihi non placuit, corde a digitis dissidente. Et nihilominus cum videatur infallibiliter, quod in frequentes eventus, licet cancellarius et universitas sibi retinuerint potestatem dispensandi ex causis opportunis contra statutum hujuscemodi, tamen sicut fieri assolet præsertim in hujuscemodi universitatibus, sicut frequens docet experientia per contradictionem uniuscujuspiam posset talis gratia aut perperam retardari aut impediri penitus. Unde etiam ille repelleretur in quem clarior gloria concurreret meritorum, et quem divinitas approbaret, reprobaret inhumanitas. Insuper quod non expediret nec deceret ut mei assensus vel subscriptio requireretur ad sua statuta roboranda, qui jam per triennium quasi foras factus cessaverim a docendi officio in eorum universitate. Denum, quod ipsorum gratia, tam humili toties postulata supplicatione, inhonestius violata degeneraret in sævitiam, quam mihi nisi sub extorta consensione non concederent.

Subfuit præ omnibus his ratio potior, quam suppressi de judicio, quæ vehementius obstitit quominus in hac parte requisitis cancellarii et universitatis præberem assensum. Præter quæ omnia, sicut præfatis Sabbatho et Die Dominica, feria secunda præcise asserui coram omnibus in hæc verba: "Ego isti statuto vestro nec scribo nec illud statuo, nec consentio nec etiam tradico, cum licet sit periculosum admodum, et mihi non complacitum, non videtur secundum planum sui præferre iniquitatem;" rogans ut precibus supplicum suorum tam frequenter interpositis benevolam adhiberent assensum. Quibus sic excursis factum est, ut de voluntate cancellarii et universitatis, memorati commissarii seorsum fierent, omnibus præsentium negotiorum articulis sine moræ dispendio finem imposituri. Ego autem cunctis corde valefaciens de concione recessi, expectans super universis responsum cancellarii, qui mihi per cartulam præsentibus inclusam manu propria statim conscriptam respondere sui gratia curavit.

May 9th.

Post hæc autem omnia feria quarta sequente, scilicet die Beati Gregorii, profectus sum Tyngehyrst ad dominum Lincolnæ multis ex causis valetudinem satis molestam sustinens oculorum. Sit benedictio divino Nomini, relicto honore, quem mihi ademptum non doleo, dilectissimo patri fratri Petro de Manners præsidendi in inceptioe fratris Thomæ de Eboraco, ad gloriam divini Nominis, præconsulto super eodem omni gratia dignissimo patre, honorabili fratre Matthæo, priore fratrum prædicatorum in Anglia. Scimus enim eum multum offendisse, et ob hoc offensam fratrum incurrisse. Propter hoc sollicita erit vestra pietas et fratrum commotiones, prout possibile est, sedare, et ejusdem infirma supportare, et etiam per suaves collationes, si quæ in eo incepta sunt confirmare, et eundem ad meliorem spem provocare.

Cæterum eum et illa temporalia quæ habuit, per consilium vestrum dereliquit, vestram rogamus clementiam quatenus quamdiu infra terminos vestros sit, eidem per providentiam vestram in victualibus provideatur. Ei quidem sicut alii pauperi subveniri potest, et eo misericordius, quo in sæculo stetit periculosius. Rogamus insuper, quatenus apud ministrum negotium ejusdem promovere velitis.

CXCVII.

Fratrī W., Ministro Angliæ, Frater Ada salutem, et tam debitam quam devotam per omnia subjectivis obedientiam.

Notum sit honorabili paternitatis vestræ pietati, quod cum dilectus frater de Maddele ad me Oxoniam accessisset, et ego eundem, juxta quod mihi visum fuit, secundum tenorem mandati vestri fuissem allocutus,

In commendation of Walter Maddeley, whom he considers ipse mihi respondit se nequaquam procurasse apud ministrum generalem ut per ejus auctoritatem ab Anglia vocaretur in alia provincia collocandus, asserens quod nec etiam adhuc hujus rei gerit desiderium, cum certa pro incertis, sicut circumspicte protestatur, nullatenus sint deserenda. Cæterum tenorem mandati, quod minister generalis ad vos destinavit pro fratribus mittendis Parisius, prior ipse mihi retulit, quam eidem super hoc aliquid expressius insinuassem. Ad hæc, de investigandis expositionibus Sacræ Scripturæ in libris originalibus Sanctorum cum eodem contuli, sicut mandastis, qui prompta devotione paratum se obtulit, ut dignum est, omnino non tam ad hoc, quam ad omnia quæcunque ei salutariter duxeritis injungenda. Quoniam igitur modicitatis meæ consilium super instanti articulo emittendorum fratrum de provincia vestra requirere voluit vestra circumspicte discretio, perpensis ut valeo rerum circumstantiis, vobis innotesco quod, ut video, satius est, tam fratre Johanne de Westun<sup>1</sup> quam fratre W. de Maddele<sup>2</sup> in præsentiarum apud vos retentis, per reliquos mandatum generalis impleatis, studio Parisiensi in præsentis necessitatis urgentia providentes. Sic enim, ut puto, et opportunius Divino servietur honori, et fratrum utilitati cumulatius prospicietur, et commodius cari nostri, de quibus sollicita est vestra paternitas, ad ecclesiasticam utilitatem per eosdem in futuris temporibus efficiendam, propitia Divinitate, proficiant.

Adhuc in calce litteræ non exiliter mirandum censeo, quod carissimo fratri W. de Maddele, qui onus Divinæ eruditionis impendendæ sibi jamdudum impositum diligenter hactenus continuavit in obsequiali adjutorio, nescio per quam circumspiccionis severitatem nondum fuit provisum. Unde cogitur nimirum non solum spiritum vitalem per studiorum vehementiam exhaurire, verum etiam manu propria scriptitando in dies corporale robur atterere, cum non sit fortitudo lapidis fortitudo sua, nec caro ejus caro aënea est. Et quid est quod cæteris fratribus officio legendi deputatis, præsertim quibus successit, in magnis provisum est voluminibus, et in sociorum subventuum<sup>1</sup> adjutoriis, iste solus videtur non curari; qui tamen, ut audio, hanc divinitus est assecutus gratiam, ut sit in legendo suavis, acutus in disserendo, in scriptis et eloquiis tam fratribus quam sæcularibus utilis et acceptus. Erit igitur vestrum, si placet, per sedulam piæ paternitatis sollicitudinem in hac parte, sicut expedire noveritis, absque moræ dispendio, et paci mentium consulere et studentium providere propectui.

Rogavit me dilectissimus mihi in Christo frater R. de Falle, gardianus Stanfordiæ, quod et quantum valeo, scio, vestram interpellare pietatem, ut ei in pacifica consolatione per paternam elementiam prospiciatis. Rogo, pater mi carissime, salutari obsequio mei, si placet, sanctam et amabilem societatem vestram sigillatim<sup>1</sup> in Christo.

Mandastis etiam de tribus fratribus vobis per litteram exprimendis, quos ad ministerium vicariæ in absentia vestra jam instante exilitas mea censeret<sup>1</sup> fore nominandos. Ad hæc signastis, ut de facto fratris Thomæ de Eboraco, non immerito fratribus in Christo carissimo, vobis insufficientiæ meæ consilium intimarem: propter quod discretionis vestræ paternitati, quatenus mihi veritatis contuitus non obducitur, suadeo quatenus dictum fratrem Thomam ob claritatem ingenii, et literaturæ peritiam, et moderamen honestatis, quibus divinitus est insignitus, præcipiatis studio Divinorum eloquiorum applicare, lectiones doctorum audiendo, et investigando scripta dictorum, dum adhuc juvenilis ætas maturiora tardat experimenta nequaquam eidem hac vice onus impendendæ eruditionis imponentes. Secundum conjecturam meam, si frater Thomas de Eboraco in officio legendi fuerit occupatus, citius forte eveniet quod de ipso timetur. De quo mihi bonum videtur, quod assignetur fratribus Oxoniæ pro lectore, ipsum retinendi gratia ad multimodas, Divinitate propitia, utilitates;<sup>1</sup> alias, si sic Dominus de ipso ordinaverit, ut alibi quam in regno Angliæ propter electorum utilitatem occupetur, non est securum per cautelas humanas supernæ dispensationi contravenire.

Rogavit me frater Hugo de Leukenor, frater boni moris et spei laudabilis, vestram interpellare pietatem, ut non displiceat sanctitati vestræ fratribus injungere, quibus est assignatus pro lectore, ut eidem providere, secundum quod competit, satagant, aut ipsum ab obligatione dictæ assignationis, si sic vestro sederit beneplacito, absoluto, non querantur.

As Greg. de Bosell has consented to stay with the Archbishop, the writer requests the rules may be dispensed with, and that Gregory may have liberty to sit on horseback or in a carriage.

Inter prægravantes occupationum angustias fere intercepto vitæ spiraculo, vix anhelis spiritus anxietas, rupto soporis silentio, noctem agens insomnem ut assolet, præsentis voces raptim emittere potuit. Utinam scisso pectore transfixi cordis angores filiales pater pius aspiceret! Hæc idcirco dixerim, quoniam dolores remittit miseri ipsos insinuasse clementi. Modicum erit formidanda, licet malignius insæviat, sævitiosa rabies, immo per Ipsum, qui dat equo fortitudinem, et circumdat collo ejus hinnitum, suscitans eum sicut locustas, exultandum est, pergendum in occursum armatis, contemnendus est pavor, nec cedendum gladio. Quid enim? Audiamus triumphalem castrorum cœlestium propugnatores: "Si consistent," inquit, "adversum me castra, non timebit cor meum. Si exurgat adversum me prælium, in hoc ego sperabo." Et alibi: "Non timebo millia populi circumdantis me. Exsurge, Domine; salvum me fac, Deus meus." Respondi quæ docuistis. Epistolam abbreviavit importunitatum prolixitas. Nempe temporis angustia et occupationum varietas, agonia studii et inquietationum turbamina, prolixos litterarum tractus excludunt. Copia quoque scribendorum scribendi cogit inopiam. Etenim si vacaret, quis inter tanta salutis discrimina, inter tot violentias rebellium, in tantis moliminibus insidiantium, in tam salutarem et omnibus sæculis spectabilem conjuratus professionem, quantum divinitus permetteretur rebus non consuleret per sollicitam epistolarum frequentiam, ubi vivas vocis energias conserere non permittit locorum distantia? Mitto vobis duas bullas de facto fratrum prædicatorum et minorum, pro quibus frater P. de Theokesbury moratus est post solutum capitulum generale,<sup>3</sup> quia non constitit mihi an illas hætenus receperitis, quas reliquit frater P. cum in Angliam rediret.

Recommendationes dominis cardinalibus et fratribus faciendas, secundum quod injunxistis, ante confectiorem præsentium, illis quos in curia inveni feceram, præterquam domino Egidio. Dominus Hostiensis, dominus S. de Comite, dominus Reiverius, dominus Ricardus Hambury, nondum venerant citra montes.<sup>4</sup> Conjicio quod per ministrum generalem vocabuntur ad concilium aliqui fratres discretiores de singulis provinciis, super quo audivi fieri sermonem. Unde videtur mihi quod bonum erit, ut vos cum fratribus sapientioribus conferatis super eis, quæ judicaveritis petenda et proponenda in tempore concilii, si quos oporteat mittere.

De consueta vestræ benignitatis sedulitate confisus, quanta possum affectione suppliciter rogo quatenus per strenuam religiosæ pietatis interventionem, quam, sicut multiplicibus comprobatur experimentis, ad causas salutare expediendas indefesse geritis efficaciam, apud dominam Blancam,<sup>1</sup> excellentissimam reginam Francorum, secundum modum quem insinuaverit propitiâ Divinitas, satagere velitis, ut inter illustres viros comites Tolosæ et Leycestriæ desideranda pacis reformatio proveniat per serenissimam ejusdem reginæ clementiam; quæ dudum sui gratia etiam meæ modicitati in hac parte suæ voluntatis manifestavit promptitudinem. Inveni quoque comitis Tholosæ ad pacem memoratam, secundum eor meum, mentem inclinatam. Comes vero Leycestriæ ad benevolum dictæ pacis consensum sufficienter est persuasus. Quid ergo restat quam ut intuitu Illius, qui pacificos Dei filiatione beatificat concordem affectum divinitus conceptos, ad pacatam perducat unanimam vestræ sanctitatis placida discretio? tanto propensioris diligentie sollicitudinem adhibendo, quanto præsens negotium propter gloriam Divini honoris universis amplius fore cognoscitur æmulandum. Valeat sanctitatis vestræ pia paternitas in Christo semper et beatissima Virgine.

Et sicut noverit discretio vestra quod mandatis apostolicis adversantur parentelam zelans honorem, adversor et obsto. Ad utrumque enim similiter et æqualiter teneor ex Divino mandato; apostolica enim mandata non sunt, nec esse possunt, alia quam apostolorum doctrinæ, et ipsius Domini nostri Jesu Christi, apostolorum magistri, cujus et personam maxime gerit in hierarchia ecclesiastica dominus papa, consona et conformis. Ait enim ipse Dominus Jesus Christus: "Qui non est mecum, contra me est." Contra ipsum autem nec est, nec esse potest, Apostolicæ Sedis sanctitas divinissima. Non est igitur prædictæ litteræ tenor sanctitati consonus, sed absonus plurimum et discors. Primo quia de illius litteræ et aliarum longe lateque dispersarum superaccumulatio non obstante non ex legis naturalis observandæ necessitate inducto scatet cataclysmus inconstantiae, audaciæ et procacitatis, etiam inverecunde mentiendi et fallendi diffidentiae cuiquam credendi, vel fidem adhibendi, et ex iis consequentium vitiorum [quorum] numerus Christianæ religionis puritatem, et socialis conversationis hominum tranquillitatem commovens et perturbans.

quem interficiet Dominus Jesus Christus spiritu oris sui, non est, nec esse potest, alterum genus peccati tam adversum et contrarium apostolorum doctrinæ et evangelicæ, et ipsi Domino Jesu Christo tam odibile, detestabile, et abominabile, et humano generi tam pernecabile, quam animas curæ pastoralis officio et ministerio vivificandas et salvandas, pastoralis officii et ministerii defraudatione, mortificare et perdere. Quod peccatum evidentissimis Scripturæ Sacræ testimoniis committere dinoscuntur, qui in potestate curæ pastoralis constituti, de lacte et lana ovium Christi suis carnalibus et temporalibus desideriis et necessitatibus prospiciunt, et pastoralis officii ministeria in æternam Christi salutem operandam debita non administrant. Ipsa enim ministeriorum pastoralium non administratio est, Scripturæ testimonio, omnium occisio et deperditio. Cum autem hæc duo genera peccatorum, licet dispariter, sint pessima et omne alterum genus peccati inæstimabiliter superexcedentia, manifestum ex hoc quod ipsa sunt duobus existentibus et dictis, licet dispariter et dissimiliter, optimis directe contraria. Pessimum enim optimo est contrarium. Quantum autem est in dictis peccantibus unum peccatum est ipsius Deitatis superessentialiter et supernaturaliter optimæ. Alterum vero Deiformitatis et Deificationis ex divini radii gratifica participatione essentialiter optimæ interemptio. Et quia sicut in bonis causa boni melior est causato, sic et in malis causa mali pejor est causato. Manifestissimum quoniam talium pessimorum interemptorum, Deiformitatis et Deificationis in ovibus Christi, in ecclesiam Domini introductores, ipsius pessimis interemptoribus sunt pejores, et Lucifero et Antichristo proximiores, et in hac pejoritate gradatim magis superexcellentes, qui ex majori et diviniore potestate sibi divinitus in ædificationem et non in destructionem tradita, magis tenentur ab ecclesia Domini tales interemptores pessimos excludere et extirpare.

Non potest igitur sanctissima Sedes Apostolica, cui a sancto sanctorum Domino Jesu Christo tradita est potestas omnimoda, testante apostolo, in ædificationem et non in destructionem, aliquid vergens in hujusmodi peccatum, domino Jesu Christo tam odibile, detestabile, abominabile, et humano generi summe pernecabile, mandare vel præcipere, vel quoquo modo ad aliquid tale conari. Hoc enim evidenter esset suæ potestatis sanctissimæ et plenissimæ vel defectio, vel corruptio, vel abusio, et a throno gloriæ Domini Jesu Christi elongatio, et in cathedra pestilentiæ pœnarum gehennalium duobus prædictis tenebrarum principibus proxima coassessio. Nec potest quis immaculata et sincera obedientia eidem Sedi subditus et fidelis, et a Corpore Christi et eadem Sancta Sede per schisma non abscissus, hujusmodi mandatis vel præceptis, vel quibuscunque conaminibus undecunque emanantibus, etiamsi a supremo Angelorum Ordine, obtemperare; sed necesse habet totis viribus contradicere et rebellare.

Propter hoc, reverendi, domini, ego ex debito obedientiæ et fidelitatis, qua teneor, ut utrique parenti, Apostolicæ sanctissimæ Sedi, et ex amore unionis in Corpore Christi, cum ea his quæ in prædicta littera continentur, et maxime quia præactum peccatum Domino Jesu Christo abominabilissimum, et humano generi perniciosissimum evidentissime vergunt,<sup>1</sup> et Apostolicæ Sedis sanctitati omnino adversantur et contrariantur, canonice, unice filialiter et obedienter non obedio, contradico, et rebello. Nec ob hoc vestra discretio quicquam durum contra me statuere, quia omnia mea in hac parte, et dictio et actio, nec contradictio est, nec rebellio, sed filialis divino mandato, debita patri et matri honoratio. Breviter autem recolligens dico Apostolicæ Sedes sanctitatis non potest nisi quæ in ædificationem, et non in destructionem. Hæc est potestatis plenitudo omnia posse in ædificationem. Hæ autem quas vocant provisiones non sunt in ædificationem, sed in manifestissimam destructionem. Non igitur eas potest beata Sedes Apostolica. Etenim caro et sanguis, quæ regnum Dei non possidebunt, eas revelavit, et non Pater Domini Jesu Christi, qui est in cœlis.

nerit in bonum qui solus bonus est, quia sanctuario repulit sacrilegum. Multum, mi carissime, in hac parte recommendari vobis opto causam Filii Dei, quem tam unice diligitis. Non video aliud hac vice signandum domino officiali. In facto domini comitis Simonis, licet ingratissima malignitas debita responsa detrectet, spero respondebit prospera supergraciosa benignitas. Illa sui militis sudores despiciet; ista sui supplicis obsequia respiciet. Molestiosa scandalorum perturbamina, licet agi non sinam silentio pacis cunctis optatæ mortalibus, necesse est ut veniant secundum veritatis assertionem, ut domus Dei unde impingitur ut corruat inde stabilietur ut persistat, et electorum animæ unde concutiuntur ne quiescant inde exercentur ne fatiscant.<sup>1</sup> Præstitit super hac re occasionem longi sermonis et interpretabilis quod in epistolæ vestræ calce apposuistis. Sed succinxit eum et mea insufficientia, et vitæ tædium inferens importunissima occupationum angustia; etiam loquendi seriem intercepit irruentium improbitas. Utinam, si comes fuerit vita, propter urgentissima salutis discrimina concedatur divinitus nobis vivæ vocis invicem frui colloquio circa instans festum Paschæ. Comiti Simoni, precor, ob contemplationem Altissimi, in verbis vitæ, consiliorum directiones impendere studeatis. Valet in Christo Jesu semper et beatissima Virgine.

<sup>2</sup> The passage stands thus: "quaternos fi mat's phie." The second word, which seems to have been intended for philosophia, is deleted by the dots underneath. The last word, if correct, must be a contraction for philosophia, and not prophetia. But to whom can the expression apply? Magistri philosophia would refer to Aristotle; matris prophetia might refer to St. Hildegardis.

tenebrarum harum, contra spirituales nequitas in cœlestibus, quasi jam soluto Satana, stragem animarum exercentes, et triumphalia castra moveret, et expeditas acies instrueret, et densos congressus constiparet: cum hæc, inquam, professio vel invita compellitur et caducis honoribus ambiciosius inhiare, mobilibus affluentis curiosius inservire, et fœdis voluptatibus deformius inhærere. Nonne ruina præsens, ut salva loquar, heu! heu! quorundam in manibus nefariorum principum conspicitur, et ingredientium pompaticæ domum Domini, et confidentium in monte Samariæ, et incubantium fictionibus lascivientium, propter quod migrabunt nunc in capite transmigrantium, secundum quod tam terribiliter juravit in animam suam Dominus Deus exercituum? Sed quid unquam tristius cogitari poterit, quam quod qui hoc gratulabunda laudatione non prosequitur, aut sævientium concutitur cruciatibus, aut insultantium vexatur contumeliis, aut subsannantium deridetur despectionibus? O Altissimæ Majestatis injuriam! O inscrutabilis sapientiæ contradictionem! O inestimabilem clementiæ contemptum! Numquid qui plantavit aurem non audiet, aut qui finxit oculum non considerat?<sup>1</sup> Absit! Propterea speluncam latronum constat quia non tardabit discutere Deus ultionis.<sup>2</sup> An putamus quod auris cœli, quæ audit omnia, non attendit voces clamantium sub altare Dei, "Vindica sanguinem nostrum, Deus noster"? An credimus quod Is, in cujus conspectu non est aliqua creatura invisibilis, videns videat afflictionem Ægyptiacam, et non descendit<sup>1</sup> liberare populum suum? Sed quorsum ista? an se iterum per scripturam vestris præsentaret aspectibus. Siquidem hæsitavi mecum deliberans an scriberem. Ignoravit enim perturbatæ mentis mœstitia quid scriberet. Scripsi tamen quoniam ad scribendum impulit exagitati spiritus nescio qualis impatientia, quam proferunt præsentis cartæ characteres, qui quæcunque remedium desperationis in facto Dei, quos indigni sermonis imperiti fragminibus æmulatione quælibet proloquor, mihi attulerunt, pro eo quod spiritualementer inter mortales concepi fiduciam de vestrum invicta virtute, de vestrum circumspecta industria, de vestrum fervida æmulatione ad consummationem salutis operandam. Propterea cum indubitanter acceperim quod piissimas animas fratrum nostrorum Londini commorantium Spiritus Sanctus ardentem professæ perfectionis desiderio vehementer inflammaverit, sit Dei Filio perenniter superexaltata benedictio, vestræ beatitudinis caritatem per vestræ salutis contemplationem exoro, per honorem beatissimæ Virginis invito, per rubricatum pio cruore vivificæ crucis patibulum adjuro, quatenus apud piissimum patrem ministrum nostrum, ex Dei patrocinio, per Angelorum subsidium in electorum suffragio, per omnem modum infatigabili laboris diligentia, ut ad gloriam Divini Nominis, ad nostræ salutis reparationem, ad ædificationem totius orbis, nullatenus differre consentiat illam desiderabilem vivendi formam, quæ toties auribus ipsius per simplicissimas obsecrationes est inculcata, memoratis fratribus instituere, divinitus deinceps observandam. Fratribus N. et N. salutem.

Non sine gratiarum actione fulgidæ caritatis vestræ A letter of spiritual exhortation. efficacem epistolam consolatoriam præferre disertitudinem avidis consideravi luminibus. Cujus tamen series nequaquam risum miscuit dolori. Sed multiplici proportionem contra sententiam Divinitatis, mixtionis legem excedens, illum in istius transtulit dominationem, ut vehementius extrema gaudii luctus occuparet. Inseruistis pio sermone exhortationem de non diffidendo, quia non est manus Domini abbreviata ut salvare nequeat. Omnimodis benefecistis. Quis enim locus erit diffidentiae cum dicat Dei virtus, Dei sapientia, "Confidite, quia ego vici mundum"? Vere quidem sic est sicut scripistis. Sed numquid hoc absterget omnem lacrynam ab oculis virorum gementium et dolentium super abominationibus, quæ fuerint in medio Jerusalem? De quorum numero efficiat nos ille, qui secundum tenorem excellentissimæ professionis nostræ juratam Spiritui Sancto ante terrificum tribunal formidandissimæ Majestatis electionem nostram in die ista vocat ad fletum et ad planctum, et ad calvitium et ad cingulum sacci, et dignos nos faciens in partem sortis sanctorum in lumine, et eripiens nos de potestate tenebrarum et transferens in regnum Filii dilectionis suæ. Putandumne est quod omnipotentis sapientiæ benignitas, quam necesse est in universo regno Dei perenniter et bona probare et mala reprobare et universa ordinare, aut nequeat aut nesciat aut nolit, et ruinas erigere et errores corrigere et prava dirigere? Numquid hoc et luctus prophetarum et patriarcharum lamentatio, et fletus Unigeniti et Apostolorum ploratus, et ultra lacrymosi sanctorum mœrores, tam anxie prosequi temporum sæcularium diebus non desistunt? Absit hoc a mentibus fidelium. Siquidem non defuit perfidia quæ desperabiliter istud autumaverit, sed virtutis oppugnationem, sed contradictionem veritatis, sed caritatis proscriptionem, sed exterminium fidei, sed confusionem<sup>1</sup> beatæ sanctificationis inexplicabili districtione comprehendant. Horum remedium, qui respicit orationes humilium et non spernit preces eorum, audit gemitus compeditorum et solvit filios interemptorum, ut annuntient in Sion limpida contemplationis nomen Domini, et laudem ejus in Jerusalem tranquillæ conversationis, solus novit, ut video; contra quod quanquam speravi, ego penitus ignoro; propter quod quid facto opus sit invenire nullatenus sufficio, nisi deinceps ut indignus peccator voces reprimat, exprimat lacrymas, et ad illud humiliato conetur silentio, per quod importunum attemptavit eloquium. Hoc mihi plurimum fore lugendum conspicio, quod et ineptis litteris et lingua despicibili illa non sum cumulatus<sup>2</sup> præsumere, a quo, heu mihi! mea in me . . . .<sup>3</sup> inconsideratio.

æternitatis.*

Amabilissima caritatis vestræ littera, quam nuper A letter of consolation. mihi vestri gratia transmittere voluistis, saucio cordi compassionis telum infixit. Sed quantacunque sit vis anxietatis, quia non contristamur sicut et cæteri qui spem non habent, vim doloris mitigat divinæ dispensationis pia consolatio, quæ flagellat omnem filium quem recipit; propter quod indubitanter confido, quod acerbior examinatio diuturnæ valetudinis et expiavit ut sit pura, et illuminavit ut sit clara, et sublimavit ut sit sancta, piam animam, quæ non dudum flagravat desiderio ad jucundas, ad luminosas, ad excelsas divinitus suscipiendas mansiones. Cum quanta exultatione quantumcunque temporaliter afflictis, illud ad æternam occurrit consolationem, quod scriptum est: “Hoc autem “ pro certo habet omnis, qui colit Te, quia vita ejus, “ si in probatione fuerit, coronabitur, si autem in tribulatione fuerit liberabitur, et si in correptione “ fuerit ad misericordiam licebit venire. Non enim “ delectaris in perditionibus nostris, quia post temptatam tranquillum facis, et post lacrimationem et “ fletum exultationem infundis. Sit nomen tuum, Deus “ Israël, benedictum in sæcula.” Absit a me ut erga suavissimam vestræ benignitatis affectionem qualiscunque parvitas meæ devotio, quæ vobis inter mortales nec immerito specialiter confitetur obnoxiam, aliquatenus aut minuat fidem amoris aut orationis affectum remittat. mentissimæ Virginis patrocinium absorbere debebit, ut multo amplius fidens conscientia lætificet, quam tremens exultatio contristet? Scio quod hæc superatur ab illa multum quidem per omnem modum, propter quod oro sit securæ menti jure convivium. Succingo sermonem, nolens eruditæ menti prolixitatis ingerere fastidium. Sufficiat sancto desiderio occasionem præstitisse. Recommendationes quas mihi injunxistis pro vobis faciendas, prompta voluntate per Dei gratiam facere curabo. Si cogens hoc non excluderet necessitas, jucundissimum mihi foret vobiscum vivæ vocis habere colloquium; sed necesse est ut quod locorum excludit distantia præsentia suppleat spirituum in Christo, qui ait, "Pater sancte, serva eos in nomine tuo, quos dedisti mihi, ut sint unum sicut et nos." Ad hæc, licet super corporali incolumitate metum incutiat anceps acerbæ valetudinis periculum, tamen securum pii Salvatoris adiutorium præstat fiduciam. Nempe ipse est qui percutit et sanat, vulnerat et medetur, castigat et morti non tradit. Ipsum denique contra cuncta qualiumcunque cruciatuum discrimina benedictum summæ salutis remedium diffinientem audiamus: "In patientia vestra," etc.<sup>1</sup>

An address to the Pope on the occasion of Henry III. assuming the cross.

Scriptum quod mihi conficiendum vestra imposuit dominatio, pro gravi occupationum varietate raptim, prout Divinitas concessit, aggregatum paternitati vestræ per puerum præsentis litteræ portitorem transmitto. Siquidem malo cassi laboris pigeat imperitiam, quam conscientiam accuset recusata præceptio. Igitur si quid in tractatu memorato reperiat ingeniosa discretio, quod rationabili proposito conveniat, bene quidem; sin autem, ponat scripturam, aut, sicut videatur, abjiciat. Nequit autem inerranter æstimari quod continet, nisi scrutabiliter relectam penset æquum rationis examen. Spero quoque quod in aliqua sui particula dabit occasionem sapienti, vestræ saltem occasionaliter servietur industriæ, secundum quod scriptum est, "Da occasionem sapienti et sapientior erit:" si tantum incultas horrentis styli sententias vestræ vestiat ornatus eloquentiæ. Non mediocriter cor saucium molestat dolor anxius, pro eo quod non tam propriæ quam Cantuariensi ecclesiæ personalem præsentiam vestram cum evidenti detrimentorum discrimine, si secus fieri potuisset, subducere concessistis. Concedat vobis, oro, propitia Divinitas habitare Christum per fidem in corde vestro, in caritate radicato et fundato, ut possitis comprehendere cum omnibus sanctis quæ sit latitudo, longitudo, sublimitas et profunditas, latitudo caritatis, longitudo æternitatis, sublimitas potestatis, profunditas veritatis; quo fiet ut quod sapienter mens concipit, efficaciter pronuntiet lingua sapientis.

Primum. Quod per divinam institutionem non nisi unicus et summus pontifex præsideat universis mundi nationibus.

Secundum. De immanitate malorum his diebus novissimis mundum perturbantium.

Tertium. De gratiarum actionibus Deo referendis pro summo pontifice præsentis temporis ad dispensationem salutis contra tanta discrimina universo orbi divinitus concesso.

Quartum. Qualibus sanctitatis eminentiis oporteat esse præditos ad imitationem summi pontificis eos, qui eidem assistunt in ecclesiarum regimine.

Quintum. De supernis paternarum illuminationum eventibus his temporibus divinitus concessis, quibus ad summi pontificis devotionem universus orbis excel-lenter animatur.

Sextum. Quod non nisi ad eum, qui nunc præsidet, summum pontificem in necessitatibus opportunitatibus orbem universum recurrere oportet pro remediis.

Septimum. Quod regnum Angliæ ejusque et principem, et clerum, et populum, inter cæteras mundi nationes prærogativa summus pontifex jugiter prosequi debeat benevolentia.

Octavum. Quam cogentibus rationum efficaciis pium regis Angliæ propositum pro cultu contra hostes fidei divinitus inspiratum, a summo pontifice sit diligentis-sime promovendum.

Nonum. Quia licet ad labores bellicos, quanquam contra perfidos sint excitandi principes Catholici, tamen nunquam prælatis ecclesiasticis est desistendum ad in-fideles ab exercitio prædicationum.

Decimum. Qualiter tam spiritualis gladius quam martialis ad sacerdotium ecclesiæ pertineat, ratione tamen dispari.<sup>1</sup>

CAP. I.

Quam sit adoranda sæculis omnibus Providentia non nisi deficiendo consideramus, per quam sicut unum prin-cipium in cælo tribus hierarchiis, singulis secundum ternos ordines distinctis, principatur, ita in terra præsul unus præsideat tribus hierarchiis secundum ternos ordines dispartitis. Quemadmodum enim astruit sanctus Dionysius se a beato Paulo Apostolo institore nostro didicisse, in prima quidem hierarchia primo Seraphin, secundo Cherubin, tertio Throni; in secunda, primo Dominationes, secundo Virtutes, tertio Potestates;

in tertia, primo Principatus, secundo Archangeli, tertio Angeli, sub uno divini principatus fastigio collocantur; ita cum Altissimus Pater unigenitum Filium de cœlis a regalibus sedibus introducens in orbem terrarum, ut qui solus novit ordinem cœli ad complementum beatitudinis poneret rationem ejus in terra, fieri præcepit tabernaculum secundum exemplar quod ei monstratum est in monte, quatenus juxta imitationem ecclesiæ triumphantis militantem ecclesiam tres hierarchiæ, per tres æternos ordines discriminatæ, sub unico summi pontificis principatu, integraliter constituent, ut sit primæ hierarchiæ primitivus ordo consistens in hominibus apostolicis, secundus in prophetalibus, tertius in patriarchalibus; mediæ vero primus in pontificalibus, secundus in sacerdotalibus, tertius in diaconalibus; postremæque primus in regalibus, secundus in popularibus, tertius in pœnitentialibus. Igitur divinas illuminationes cœlestes animi revelatis oculis in super-splendente ipsarum vertice limpidissime contemplantur, et a superioribus etiam in inferiores hierarchiarum ordines ordinatissime derivatas in hierarchicos ecclesiasticæ institutionis ordines, secundum suam capacitatem, per suam mediationem transfundunt; per quas ad Deum earundem Patrem illuminationum, conversio, sursum actio, communicatio, unio nostrorum animorum, manucentibus supernis spiritibus, et ab infimis usque ad summos promoventibus feliciter consummatur. Summas autem essentias supermundanæ hierarchiæ Salvatorem immediate docentem ostendit Isaias, cum easdem introducit de mysteriis redemptionis ad invicem disquirentes his verbis, "Quis est iste, qui venit de Edom, tinctis vestibus de Bosrah?" divinam Domini Jesu subinferens responsionem, cum dicit, "Ego qui loquor justitiam, et propugnator ad salvandum." Quod vero a superioribus cœlestium essentiarum inferiores ordines divinas recipiant influentias, loquitur iterum propheta Isaias, ubi refert "unum Seraphim clamasse ad alterum," ostendens plane quoniam ille qui clamavit eum docuit ad quem clamavit. Quia etiam manifestationes divini luminis, quod primo supernis essentiis ingignitur, per ipsas ad nos transferantur, ex sententia beati Apostoli ad Galatas insinuat, in eo quod scribitur "lex ordinata per Angelos in manu mediatoris," hoc insuper per illud præcipue confirmatur, quod beatissimæ Dei Genitrici super omnem creaturam cœlitus sublimatæ, Dominicæ Incarnationis mysterium, quod ipse a Domino didicerat, Archangelus nuntiavit. Ex his, itaque, quid evidentius quam quod summo unici pontificis sacerdotio totius orbis humanæ nationes ex Omnipotentis decreto subjiciantur? Exeundum etenim orbe ei, qui forte volet explorare quæ non ad ipsius curam pertineant. De summis namque sacerdotibus, principis apostolorum successoribus, nimis, ait, confortatus est principatus eorum, qui constituti sunt principes orbis terrarum. Eis tu, beatissime pater, successisti in hæreditatem. Ita tu hæres et orbis hæreditas.<sup>1</sup>

Annon de ecclesiastici culminis summo pontifice scribit legislator, dicens: "Qui superbierit, nolens obedire sacerdotis imperio, qui eo tempore ministrat Domino Dei et decreto iudicis, morietur homo ille, et auferetur malum de medio Israel; cunctusque populus audiens timebit, ut nullus deinceps intumescat superbia?" Quem nisi summum pontificem divinus alloquitur sermo, quo dicitur: "Ecce dedi verba mea in ore tuo; ecce constitui te hodie super gentes et super regna, ut evellas, et destruas, et disperdas, et dissipes, et ædifices, et plantes?" Cujus quoque nisi papalis excellentiæ illum mundi monarchum Assuerum figuram prætereundum putabimus, qui sic loquens invenitur [cap. xiii.]: "Cum pluribus gentibus imperarem, et universum orbem meæ ditioni subjugassem, volui nequaquam potentiæ abuti magnitudine, sed clementia et lenitate gubernare sub-efficacia non mediocris, quod discipuli navigabant et Dominus apparebat in littore, quodque jucundus erat in corpore redivivo. Sciensque Petrus quia Dominus est, in mare se misit, et sic venit ad ipsum, aliis navigio pervenientibus. Nempe signum insigne singularis pontificii Petri, cui vos in integrum successistis, quod non cæterorum habeat sua, vobis commissa est grandissima navis, facta ex hominibus, ipsa visibilis ecclesia toto orbe terrarum diffusa. Annon certissime com-

“ ‘tu omnia nosti; tu scis quia amo te.’ Dicit ei, “ ‘Pasce oves meas.’” Liquet nihilominus per irrefragabilem rationis efficaciam, quod cum concors unitas pacificæ tranquillitatis, quæ tam in superioribus rerum divinarum, quam in inferioribus rerum humanarum ordinibus, ad agendam felicis vitæ conversationem inevitabili necessitatis exigentia requiritur, nec nisi ex uno procedit, nec nisi per unum proficit, nec nisi in uno consummatur; non enim nisi ad unitatem unius ordinantis sequitur unitas ordinatæ multitudinis, cum ulterius nisi ab unitate in causa sit unitas in causato. Cum, inquam, sic sit, liquet luculenter quod Is, qui facit concordiam in sublimibus suis, pacificans per sanguinem crucis suæ sive quæ in cœlis, sive quæ in terris, quique jam vivificæ mortis ascensurus patibulum non tantum pro gente, sed ut filios Dei, qui dispersi erant, congregaret in unum, inter novissima salutiferæ dispensationis eloquia: “ Et ego,” inquit, “ claritatem, quam dedisti mihi, dedi eis, ut sint “ unum, sicut et nos unum sumus, ego in eis, et tu “ in me, ut sint consummati in unum, et cognoscat “ mundus quia tu misisti et dilexisti eos sicut et me “ dilexisti.” Sicut ipse Dominator unicus consortiis angelicis præsidet in cœlestibus, sic ipse dispensatorem unicum congregationibus humanis præfecit in terrestribus, donec evacuaverit omnem principatum et potestatem, aliasque oves, quæ non sunt de hoc ovili, adduxerit, tradiderit quoque regnum Deo et Patri, et fiat unum ovile et unus pastor.

Vel, si mavis, tumidi, inflati pervicacis; cæci, contenebrati stultitiis; voluptatum amatores magis quam Dei, subversi lasciviis; habentes speciem pietatis, veritatem abnegantes, fucati fallaciis. Quamobrem horribilius quam quibuscumque retro temporibus, per universa habitationis humanæ climata in præsentiarum grassari conspiciuntur evangeliorum evacuationes, contradictiones legum, ecclesiarum vastationes, depopulationes regnorum, sacerdotiorum concussiones, dejectiones principatum, clericatum conculationes, dissipationes militiarum, religionum profana-

Nonne propter tam desiderabiles circa vos et vobis assistentes jam dictas sanctimonias credendum est, O sacerdotum optime, quod divinitas propitia, quæ semper dat cum temptatione proventum, consolans nos in omni tribulatione nostra, cujus vicem in terra geritis, per eventus divinos, sub tanti Auctoris clementissimo gubernaculo, his diebus cœlitus concessos, orbem universum improvisa novitate ad præsulatus vestri dignissimam devotionem animare conspicitur! Cum enim ex debacchantibus Tartaris, ex Saracenis pervadentibus, ex Græcis dissidentibus, ex inimicantibus Latinis, ex subjectis aberrantibus, anxietatis inexplicabilis quinquifarius dolor considerationis vestræ sanctam mansuetudinem medullitus molestaverit, juxta quod generali concilio præsidens, subsidenti tibi<sup>2</sup> ecclesiæ lamentabili prosecutione pietatis vestræ planxisse recolitur beata paternitas, ita certe, ut celeritate præcipiti mundi statum labefactum iri cunctis pertimescentibus etiam piissima vox vestra pro universa Catholicæ fidei religione quasi Scripturæ lamentum assumeret, ubi ait:<sup>3</sup> “ Effuderunt sanguinem inno-

Ut quid natus sum videre contritionem populi mei, et contritionem civitatis sanctæ, et sedere illic cum datur in manibus inimicorum? Sancta in manu exterorum facta sunt; templum ejus sicut homo ignobilis; vasa gloriæ ejus captiva abducta sunt; trucidati sunt senes ejus in plateis, et juvenes ejus ceciderunt in gladio inimicorum. Quæ gens non hæreditavit regnum ejus, et non obtinuit spolia ejus? Omnis compositio<sup>1</sup> ejus ablata est; quæ erat libera facta est ancilla, et ecclesia sancta nostra, et pulchritudo nostra, et claritas nostra desolata est, et coinquinaverunt eam gentes. reor, quod quorsumcunque tendatur in totali orbe, aut ad orientem aut ad occidentem, aut ad septentrionem aut ad meridiem, nullis temporibus reperire possibile est unde tantis opum affluentis ecclesiasticæ sublimitatis honori serviatur. Quis enim sufficeret mirari ditissimas dotes cathedrarum, fertilissimas obventiones parochiarum, abundantissimas possessiones religionum, et præter stupendas annuorum provectuum exuberantias copiosissimas spontanearum præbitionum profusiones, et multiplicissimas impositarum contributionum præstationes? Ex quibus ecclesiasticorum ordinum auctoritas jugi juvatur sufficientia, ut sumptuum honestati convenientius provideat, et amicorum benevolentiam socialius conciliet, et inimicorum violentiam vigentius propellat. Quis ergo non videat, domine reverendissime, quod etsi eis, quos nunc designavi, dignationis vestræ benignitas plurimum sit necessaria eidem tamen eorundum subjectionis suæ humilitas non parum est opportuna? Quid est igitur, quod ipsis unquam vestræ sedulitatis provisiva bonitas negare valuerit, ubi interpellantibus suffragari cognoscitur aut justæ necessitatis coactio, aut veræ rationis requisitio, aut piæ utilitatis intentio? Prorsus sicut fieri assolet, tam gratæ filiationi gratiosa paternitas gloriosam gratiam rependere curabit, Illum imitata, qui dicit: "Quicumque honorificaverit me, glorificabo eum; qui autem contemnunt me, erunt ignobiles." Si quandoque subjectio filialis humanum passa paternali disciplinæ submurmuraverit, non tam veniam, quam commendationem meruit, quod celeriter ad cor reversa jussionibus paternis obtemperandi jugiter gerit promptitudinem. In exemplum venit filius evangelicus, qui postea quoniam patri contradixit, pœnitentia motus patris imperium adimplevit. Si non vererer voces importunas benignis auribus ingerere, honorabilem cœtum dominorum cardinalium precibus pulsare satagerem; sed novi quod sufficiat piis pectoribus tantorum sapientum occasionem præstitisse.

CAP. VIII.

Denique quum Christianissimus rex Angliæ, præ omnibus regibus terræ, sanctæ paternitatis vestræ filius devotissimus, Spiritu Sancto præventus, informatus ecclesiasticis prædicationibus, indulgentiis Apostolicis animatus, inflammatus cœlicis æmulationibus, de vestræ sublimitatis præsidio magnifice confusus, ad ulciscendam Salvatoris injuriam, ad regnum cœlorum sublimandum, ad exaltationem Catholicæ fidei, ad dilatationem Christianæ religionis, regalem humerum supponere vivificæ crucis vexillo irrevocabili pietatis proposito cogitavit, et secundum quod tanti, tam Catholici principis decet magnificentiam, profusas opum copias exponere, armare robustos castrorum exercitus, gravidas classium multitudines instruere, terra marique jus imperii Christiani distendere, subigere ecclesiastici principatus gubernationi credentes et incredulos, omnem quoque cordis magnanimi fiduciam in Ipsum projiciens, per quem reges regnant, per quem legum conditores justa decernunt, per quem principes imperant et potentes decernunt justitiam, de quo ille fidelium populorum validissimus propugnator ait, “ Non est differentia in conspectu Dei liberare in multis vel in paucis, quia non in multitudine exercitus victoria belli, sed de cœlo fortitudo est,” ad Terram Sanctam a profanis pervasoribus liberandam triumphalem animum magnanimiter accinxit. Et quid dicam? Annon terram felicissimæ possessionis, annon terram Divinis usibus gloriosissime dedicatam? Numquid non ipsa est terra quam benignus pater imprecans benedicto filio ait: “ Det tibi Deus de rore cœli et de pinguetudine terræ, abundantiam frumenti, vini et olei, et serviant tibi populi, et adorent te “tribus”? Numquid non ipsa est terra quam paterna pietas promittens populo filiali,<sup>1</sup> “Educam,” inquit, “te de terra illa in terram bonam et spatiosam, in terram quæ fluit lacte et melle”? Numquid non ipsa est terra de qua divinus Moyses ad plebem Domini dicit, “Terra, ad quam ingredieris præsidendam, non est sicut terra Ægypti, de qua existi, ubi jacto semine in hortorum morem aquæ ducuntur irriguæ; sed montuosa est et campestris, de cælo expectans pluviam, quam Dominus Deus tuus super immisit, et oculi Ejus in ea sunt a principio anni usque ad finem ejus”? Numquid non ipsa est terra de qua legis lator ad gentem legitimam dicit: “Dominus Deus tuus introducet te in terram bonam, terram rivorum, aquarumque et fontium, in cujus campis et montibus erumpunt fluviorum abyssi; terram frumenti, hordei et vinearum, in qua ficus, et mala granata, et oliveta nascuntur; terram olei ac mellis, ubi absque penuria comedes panem tuum, et rerum omnium abundantia perfrueris; cujus lapides ferrum sunt, et de montibus ejus æris metalla fodiuntur; ut cum comederis et satiatus fueris, benedicas Domino Deo pro terra optima, quam dedit tibi.” Numquid non ipsa est terra quam veridici exploratores sic describunt? “Terra, quam circuivimus, valde bona est. Si propitius fuerit Dominus, inducet nos in eam, et tradet humum manantem lacte et melle. Nolite rebelles esse contra Dominum, neque timeatis populum terræ hujus, quia sicut panem, ita possumus eos dovorare. Recessit ab illis omne præsidium; Dominus vobiscum est, nolite metuere.” Numquid non ipsa est terra, quæ Dei cultoribus subjecta conceditur conditione: “Transibitis Jordanem et habitabitis in terra quam Dominus Deus vester daturus est vobis, ut requiescatis a cunctis hostibus

“ per circuitum, et absque ullo terrore habitetis in loco, quem elegerit Dominus Deus vester, ut sit nomen ejus in eo.” Et iterum: “ Ponite corda vestra in omnia verba mea, quæ testifcor vobis hodie, ut mandetis ea filiis vestris custodire, et facere, et implere universa quæ scripta sunt in libro legis hujus; quia non incassum præcepta sunt vobis, sed ut singuli in eis viverent, quæ facientes longo perseveretis tempore in terra, ad quam, Jordano transmissa, ingredimini possidendam.”

Num putabimus quod Dominus præterfluentes mundi abundantias in electorum reputet retributionem? Nempe Ipse est de quo dictum est: “ Quasi momentum stateræ, sic ante Eum est orbis terrarum, et tanquam gutta roris antelucani quæ descendit in terram.” Propter quod ad contemptum mundialium et cœlestium amorem fideles invitans, ait: “ Operamini non cibum qui perit, sed eum qui permanet in vitam æternam, quem Filius Hominis dabit vobis.” Verumptamen æterna Dei sapientia tam exquisite rerum transeuntium eminentiis manifestis insistit, ut per illas ad rerum permanentium mystica charismata patefaciat, non ut illis citra<sup>1</sup> istas hæreatur infirmiter, sed ad istas per illas curratur alacriter. Hæc igitur terra, cujus nunc meminimus, quanta sit Catholicis universis æmulatione prosequenda, non segniter per subsequenda declaratur. Hæc est enim quam patriarcharum honoravit excellentia, quam illustravit sapientia prophetarum, quæ Dei Genitricem, Virginem virginum, produxit, quæ Dei Filium, Sanctum sanctorum, progeneravit. Hæc est quæ apostolorum sublimitatem protulit. Hæc est quæ evangelistarum auctoritatem exhibuit. Hæc est a qua ab initio splenduerunt documenta cœlestia, patuerunt exempla salutaria, emanaverunt divinissima sacramenta; et ut sit ad unum dicere, hæc est per quam Christus, Dei virtus, Dei sapientia, Dei sanctificatio puritatem, claritatem, sanctitatem ab origine mundi universitati mundanæ prærogavit. Hæc idcirco est per quam ruinam humanam reparavit, mundum terrenum reformavit, orbem æthereum melioravit, angelica damna restauravit, gloriam cœlestem sublimavit, et universum Dei regnum consummavit. Quis igitur, qui toto corde, tota anima, tota virtute, hoc est tota affectionis æmulatione, tota rationis industria, tota vigoris vivacitate anhelantibus ad terræ hujus ereptionem non assistit, nisi quem aut formidolosus horror ignaviæ, aut perniciosus error dissipientiæ, aut ignominiosus torpor lasciviæ pervaserit? Qualiter unquam sustinere poterit fervor fidelium, quod terram, a qua salutaris fidei cultus sumpsit initium, tam diu subjaceat profanata superstitionibus perfidorum? Quamobrem, O sacerdotum electissime, obsecramus per honorem Altissimi, deprecamur per salutem mundi, supplicamus per gloriam cœli, ut tam salvificæ devotionis negotiis, piissimæ sanctitati vestræ qualitercunque patefactis, benevoli favoris auditum inclinare non ducatis indignum, regi Anglorum illustri, supernis tam flagranter accenso desideriis, et vestræ post Deum potissime innixo elementię, pium patrocinium, justum adjutorium, gratiosum subsidium sedula sollicitudine curantes impendere.

Susplicari nequis poterit, quod sit suspendendum verbum et ferrum exercendum, quia sudores bellici laboris ad humani generis liberationem tanta videntur urgentia subeundi. Absit a cordibus ecclesiasticorum virorum tam nefaria deceptio! Numquid prædicatio silebit quousque durat prævaricatio? Quid respondimus? Sic ergo asseremus gladium spiritualem exercendum viro ecclesiastico, ut nullatenus ad eum pertinere fa-teamur materiale? Nequaquam; utriusque siquidem usus per ipsum est agendus, sed differenter. Quod ut pateat, attendamus verba sapientis præfati ad principem ecclesiarum directa: “ Hoc modo evangelizare pascere “ est: opus fac evangelistæ, et pastoris opus implesti.”
 “ Dracones,” inquit, “ me mones pascere et scorpiones, “ non oves. Propter hoc, inquam, magis aggredere “ eos, non ferro, sed verbo. Quid tu denno usurpare “ gladium temptes, quem semel jussus es reponere in “ etsi non tua manu evaginandus. Alioquin si nullo “ modo ad te pertineret et Is, dicentibus apostolis,

The popularity of the Archbishop's appointment.

O quam solemnibus gaudio, sit Altissimo Salvatore sæculis omnibus superexaltata benedictio! longe lateque passim audiuntur glorifica præconia dispensationis Dominicæ, quæ per provisivam miserationis immensæ clementiam ad regitivum Eboracæ metropolitanæ fastigium, maxime novissimorum dierum temporibus periculosissimis, sublimavit archipræsulem, tam desiderabiliter<sup>1</sup> expectatum, tam salubriter obtentum, cujus indies usquequam per effectuum evidentias universis clarescit illustrius et virtus invincibilis, et sensus infallibilis, et zelus intemerabilis, et actus infatigabilis, et regno cælorum, hoc est, regimini ecclesiarum et viribus defendendo, et legibus emendando, et moribus adornando, et cultibus ampliando, contra sævientium violentias, contra seducentium fraudulentias, contra assentantium blanditias, contra perurgentium obstinatias.

monia, ad proceres præsidium directionis, ad milites modestiam coercionis, ad plebes elementiam subventionis. In quibus evidentissime liquet, quod necesse est ad familiare subsidium evocari auxiliosos efficaces, consiliarios eruditos, ministeriales accuratos, correctores exercitatos, et idcirco excellentes potestate, fulgentes veritate, ferventes sanctitate, constantes stabilitate. Nempe necessario coram archipræsule, istis salutari cooperatione assistentibus, principes, episcopi, clerici, religiosi, proceres, milites, plebes totius provinciæ assidue stare habent judicandi, omnes etiam per archiepiscopi manuductionem et istorum diligentiam deducendi sunt per rectitudinem viæ, in lumine veritatis, ad patriam vitæ. Omnibus insuper per archipontificis illustrationem et horum provisionem ratio salutaris reddenda est, cuicumque poscenti de certitudine fidei, de dignitate morum, de pietate sacramentorum. Ex quibus etiam liquet quam præpollenter insigniri oportet virtutum istarum apicibus eum, qui vice metropolitani, in sede metropolitana, officium metropolitani super omnes assumptus in omnibus habet adimplere.

CAP. V.

Cum igitur tam evidenter hæc sint, quæ tenetur quisque metropolitanus in propria præsertim exhibere provincia, quis non videat, nisi quem Deus hujus sæculi penitus excæcavit, quod ad implendum dignitatis suæ ministerium necessarium sit, ut habeat excellentius omnibus genus vivendi compositum ex actuoso et otioso? Cum quidem sint, sicut vestra melius novit excellentia,<sup>1</sup> tria genera vivendi, secundum quod ex Scripturis eleganter ostendit sanctus Augustinus: viz., genus vivendi actuosum, genus vivendi otiosum, et genus vivendi compositum ex utroque. Actuosum dicitur vita activa; otiosum, vita contemplativa; compositum ex utraque temperatur ex duabus adunatis, sc. vita activa et vita contemplativa, quæ proprie pertinet ad eos, qui divinitus assecuti sunt superiorem locum regiminis in ecclesia Dei. Quia enim necesse est ut, præcipiente Domino, faciat omnia secundum exemplar quod sibi monstratur in monte, oportet ut cum Moyse nunc ascendat in montem, nunc descendat ad plebem, ut cum Angelis in scala Jacob vices ascendendi ad cælum et descendendi ad terram frequentet; quatenus vicissim se conferat modo ad otium amplexandæ divinitatis, modo ad negotium impendendæ humanitatis; illuc superascendens per jure desiderium, illuc<sup>2</sup> aliquando descendens per salutare ministerium. Exercetur autem genus vivendi actuosum in eloquiis veritatis, in exemplis honestatis, in sacramentis pietatis. Perficitur vero genus vivendi otiosum in purissimis orationibus, in clarissimis meditationibus, in sanctissimis contemplationibus. Etenim in illis tribus humanitati subvenitur, in istis tribus divinitati cohæretur. Quidni Reconciliator Dei et hominum, Pastor sc. animarum, et potissime Primas præsulum et Rector pastorum, per hos quasi sex gradus throni Salomonis ab infimis<sup>3</sup> velut senaria perfectione indesinenter sublimetur ad summa, et ut res expostulat a summis nonnunquam deponatur ad infima; et charismata potentiæ, sapientiæ, clementiæ, permanentiæ, quæ perficit<sup>4</sup> a summis potenter, sapienter, clementer, permanentiter communicet cum infimis.

auctoritas edocet Evangelii, inevitabili districtione præcipiens ut is tantummodo pascendis ovibus dominicis præsideat, qui indeficienti piæ sollicitudinis strenuitate, divino per omnia fretus patrocinio, satagit, primitus, ut pastor pascendis ovibus ovile dominicum non intret nisi per ostium; secundo, ut proprias vocet oves nominatim; tertio, ut emittat eas ad pascua; quarto, ut ante eas vadat; quinto, ut vocem ejus audiri ab eis efficiat; sexto, ut animam suam pro illis ponat. 1. Quid est autem intrare per ostium nisi per Christum introire, ipso dicente, "Ego sum ostium;" quod est in introitu Christo conformari in miti humilitate, in tenui paupertate, in salutari acerbitate? 2. Quid vero est proprias oves vocare nominatim, nisi singulos subditorum per motus suarum affectionum, per studia suarum occupationum, per discrepantias suarum fortunarum, cum benigno subventionis desiderio distinctius designare? 3. Quid etiam est eas emittere ad pascua, nisi de excessibus culpæ, de erroribus ignorantiae, de defectibus impotentiae, ipsas per piæ sollicitudinis adjutorium vitalibus reficiendas alimentis educere? 4. Quid est insuper ante eas ire, nisi a posterioribus ad anteriora præcedentem, sobrie, et juste, et pie vivendo, sobrie per pudiciorem munditiam, juste per innocentiores benevolentiam, pie per devotiores sanctimoniam, ipsis se imitandum exhibere? 5. Quid est autem<sup>1</sup> ut vocem ejus audiant efficere, nisi ad hoc idem et Dei patrocinium, et Angelorum præsidium, et Sanctorum suffragium, per indefessam orationis piissimæ jugitatem ipsis obtinere? 6. Quid est denique animam suam pro illis ponere, nisi per carnis mortificationem, per spiritus contributionem, per libidinum abdicationem præsentis vitæ jucunditatem ipsis vivificandis in se penitus interimere, sicque seipsum pro eis hostiam vivam, sanctam, Deo placentem,<sup>2</sup> perseveranter immolare? abbreviata sit manus Domini ut salvare nequeat. Audiatur, rogo, dispensatorum ecclesiasticorum fidelis obedientia, quid in hoc dicat Altissimus Dominator omnium, et animarum Amator piissimus, apostolico culmini et ordini ecclesiastico [Mat. IX.]: “Messis quidem multa, operarii autem pauci. Rogate ergo Dominum messis, ut mittat operarios in messem suam;” revera per operarios rectores, per messem regendos in hæreditate Domini signans. Numquid incomparabilis misericordia, veritas incommutabilis, quod commendat rogandum, rogata denegabit? Numquid si jubet ut petatur, cum petitur non exaudiet? Absit! Absit procul<sup>1</sup> ab animabus orthodoxis hæc dementissima perversitatis insanæ<sup>2</sup> perfidia! Nempe verissime constat quod quicquid præcipit postulari postulanti præstabit, si fidelis Deus seipsum negare non potest, potissime cum id sincero fervore flagitatur, pro quo dilectus Dei Filius placandæ Patris majestati per altitudinem divini consilii in ara crucis immolatur. Quid autem hoc est, nisi per ministros Dei, in populo Dei, operandæ salutis salutaris adimpletio? “Unde vocabis,” inquit, “nomen ejus Jesum. Ipse enim salvum faciet populum suum a peccatis eorum.” Quamobrem ait: “Si quid petieritis Patrem in nomine meo, dabit vobis.” Quis autem est, qui petit Patrem in Filii nomine, quod est Jesus interpretatum salutaris, nisi qui ex salutari conceptu, per salutarem affectum, in salutari obtentu, salvandis populis per salutaria ministeria, cum salutari Salvatoris reverentia, clementiam Patris salutarem interpellet?

Verum attendamus quæ sunt ea, quæ ab homine <sup>The requisites of faithful prayer.</sup> oraturo orandus Deus exquirat. Scripturam audiamus frequentius adjungentem orationi,<sup>2</sup> jejunium et eleemosynam. Unde est illud Tobie xii.: “Bona est oratio cum jejunio et eleemosyna, magis quam thesauros auri condere;” insinuans per jejunium austeram carnis castigationem, per eleemosynam anxiam spiritus compunctionem. Et alibi Judith ait: “Humilium et mansuetorum semper tibi placuit deprecatio. Deus cœlorum, Creator aquarum, et Dominus totius creaturæ, exaudi me miseram deprecantem, et de tua misericordia præsumentem.” “Mansuetorum,” inquam, secundum placidam lenitatem mansuetudinis; “humilium” quoque, secundum pavidam gravitatem humilitatis, ut veraciter ostenditur orationem non exaudiri, nisi quæ transigitur in austeriori severitate mortificationis secundum carnem, et in exactiori anxietate compunctionis secundum spiritum, et in devotissima gravitate humilitatis in Deum, et in benignissima lenitate mansuetudinis in proximum; exclusa per mortificationem carnis omni concupiscentia defœdantis illecebæ, per contritionem spiritus omni vitio depravantis nequitie, per suavitatem mansuetudinis omni affectione humanæ voluptatis, per devotionem humilitatis omni ambitione mundanæ vanitatis.

How allegorized in Scripture.

Operæ pretium esse videtur hic advertere utrum jam dicta signarentur per sermonem Domini ad legislatorem, ubi ait [Exod. xxx.]: “Sume tibi aromata, stacten, et onicham, et galbanum boni odoris, et thus lucidissimum; æqualis ponderis erunt omnia; faciesque thymiana compositum opere unguentarii mixtum diligenter et purum, sanctificatione dignissimum. Cunque in tenuissimum pulverem universa contuderis, pones ex eo in tabernaculo testimonii, in quo loco<sup>2</sup> apparebo tibi. Sanctum sanctorum erit vobis thymiana. Talem compositionem non facietis in usus vestros, quia sanctum est Domino.” (1) Est igitur stacten i.e. mirrha purioris naturæ custodiens contra corruptelas, etiam mortuorum corpora condita per ipsam conservans; (2) onicha, i.e. unguilla<sup>3</sup> coclea ostrei subtilioris facturæ est, caliginis illuminans; (3) galbanum, succus ferulæ, letiferas veneni perniciës exterminans; (4) thus, gummi perspicui candoris excellenter virtutem vitalem confortans. Potest ergo, sicut liquet studiosius consideranti spirituali examinatione singulas præsentium aromatum<sup>4</sup> proprietates, signari per stacten austera maceratio castigationis secundum carnem; per onicham, anxia contritio compunctionis secundum spiritum ; per galbanum, benigna suavitas mansuetudinis in proximum ; per thus, votiva luciditas humilitatis in Deum ; licet ista quatuor altioris mysterii eminentiori notitia valeant intelligi. Quæ quatuor omnia, juxta nunc dictum modum exquisite considerata,<sup>1</sup> sunt quatuor “aromata,” videlicet salutaria cœlestium appetituum spiramina ; “et erunt æqualis ponderis,” librata scilicet æqualiter pondere sanctuarii, quod est definitiva sanctimonie affectualis inclinatio. Ex quibus aromatibus fieri oportet “thymiama,” quod est sanctum salutaris orationis incensum, “compositum opere unguentarii,” scilicet Christi Domini summi Salvatoris, qui “ait : Sine me nihil potestis facere ;” qui quidem eo ipso verissime dicitur unguentarius, quod per Ipsius duntaxat operationem, ex supernis salutarium charismatum sanctimoniis, salvificum sanctæ conversationis conficitur unguentum, quo intellectualis creatura suo consecratur Auctori, a defectuum valetudine sanata divinitus ; propter quod ad Ipsum ait (Cant. i.). “Trahe me post te ; curremus in odorem unguentorum tuorum.” Mixtum est diligenter hoc thymiama cum præsentium quatuor spiritualium superum affectus velut incorporantur omnium in singulis per studiosam diligentie sagacis sedulitatem ; “purum” autem erit, cum a terrenæ delectationis fœculentia apud ipsum cœlica sinceritas fuerit expiata. Et ita, quia ab infimis ad summa sublimatum, “sanctificatione dignissimum,” necesse est universa in “ tenuissimum pulverem ” contundi, id est in subtilissimas examinis considerationes discuti, ut efficaciter in salubrem misceantur redolentiam per exquisitum sollertis industriæ scrutinium, ut fiat thymiama salutiferæ orationis adolendæ coram Domino. Et “ex eo thymiamate “ponendum est in tabernaculo testimonii,” quia, quod ex orationis sanctæ salutari pietate conficitur, in in-timo dilectionis cœliere domicilio, quod est tabernaculum testimonii, conservandum oportet collocari, ubi testimonium perhibens in divinæ adoptionis hæreditariam filiationem, et ideo est non tantum tabernaculum, sed tabernaculum testimonii. Deus ipse nobis apparet seipsum manifestans, secundum quod Ipse ait [Jo. xiv.]: “ Qui diligit me, diligetur a Patre meo, et ego diligam eum, et manifestabo ei meipsum.” Erit autem hoc thymiana videlicet, et sacrosanctum salutiferæ orationis spiramentum “ sanctum sanctorum ;” hoc est, cætera sanctitatum dona sanctificans, et super ea spirituali prærogativa præcipuum; et ideo talis compositionis mysticum thymiana tanta inhietur districtione ne fiat in usus humanos perversum, ad appetitiones temporalium, quod tanta Divinitatis diligentia conversum est in desideria cœlestium, quia ipsum, sicut cernitur ex his, quæ nunc tacta sunt, tam celebri pietate divinitus consecratum, sanctum est Domino.

Three degrees of prayer.

CAP. XIV.

 in mente; videlicet, et in vita sensus, et in vita spiritus, et in vita intellectus, ut fructum salutis obtineat.*

Oportet insuper quod oratio, cum ipsa sit intentæ Of the same.
 requisitionis intellectuale desiderium ascendens in Deum impetrandi gratia, non solum lingua, nec solum spiritu,<sup>2</sup> sed omnino mente peragatur, secundum apostolum dicen-tem [i. Cor. xiv.]: “ Si orem lingua, spiritus meus orat, “ mens autem mea sine fructu est. Quid ergo est? Orabo “ spiritu, orabo et mente, psallam spiritu,” etc., ut in oratione apex affectualis nullatenus subsistat quousque super linguam et spiritum in mentem conscendat, i.e.
 super vitam sensualem et vitam spiritualem in vitam intellectualem exurgat. Consistit autem integraliter homo vivens in his tribus vitæ differentiis, videlicet vita sensus, vita spiritus, vita intellectus; secundum illud Genes. ii.: “ Formavit Dominus Deus hominem de limo “ terræ, et inspiravit in faciem ejus spiraculum vitæ, “ et factus est homo in animam viventem.” Agitur autem vita sensus in susceptione specierum sensibilium, vita spiritus in effigiatione figurarum imaginabilium, vita intellectus in apprehensione formarum intelligibi-

lium, ut cum lego solitarius in codice [Luc x.], “Diliges proximum tuum sicut teipsum,” scripturam præsentem sensu percipio per speciem sensibilem, proximum absentem spiritu effugio per figuram imaginabilem, sed per formam intelligibilem. Ergo si ore tur lingua solum in vita sensuali, vel ore tur spiritu solum in vita spirituali, vel ore tur lingua et spiritu in vita sensuali et spirituali, nisi ore tur et mente in vita intellectuali, orationi fructus salutis nequaquam acquiritur. Igitur nec tantum oratio vocalis sine sensuali, nec tantum oratio imaginabilis sine spirituali, nec simul oratio utraque, vocalis sive sensuali, et imaginabilis sive spiritualis, sine rationali sive intellectuali, fructum salutis obtinet a Salvatore. Sed tertia per seipsam, vel cum alterutra duarum vel cum ipsarum utraque, plene sufficit ad salutem. Tres etenim, scilicet vita sensus, vita spiritus, vita intellectus, secundum Scetum. Augustinum, tres sunt cœli, quos insinuans apostolus [ii. Cor. xii.], “Scio,” inquit, “hominem in Christo ante annos xiiii, sive in corpore, sive extra corpus nescio, Deus scit, raptum hujusmodi usque ad tertium cœlum.” Ergo cum cor sit originale vitæ domicilium, secundum illud Proverb. x., “Omni custodia custodi cor tuum, quoniam ex ipso vita procedit;” nullus, quod fieri necesse est, orat Deum toto corde, nisi per cœleste desiderium cœlum vitæ sensuali superet, cœlum vitæ spiritualis transeat, cœlum vitæ intellectualis ascendat, et sic ad Deum Salvatorem, cœli intellectualis salvificum habitatorem, in oratione salutari proveniat, intrans in cubiculum suum ibidem, juxta verbum Filii, orantis Patrem suum in abscondito. Quod nullatenus fieri valet, nisi per superintellectualem summæ divinitatis operationem. Nunquam enim creatura, cum sit virtus finita, ad Creatorem, qui est virtus infinita, pertingere valet, nisi supersæculariter agatur ad hoc illius finiti defectio per Istius infiniti perfectionem. Propter quod ait [Jo. vi.]: “Nemo venit ad me, nisi Pater qui misit me traxerit eum.”

CAP. XV.

Quæ profecto si assunt superscripta universa, secundum jam insinuatam provisivæ Divinitatis institutionem, ad orationis piæ complementum, necesse est ex divina promissione nullatenus negari quod oratione sic perfecta supplicatur optimum.<sup>1</sup> Quod si quid eorum, quæ præscripta sunt, in oratione petitorio defuerit, quia divinis obveniendi mandatis per prævaricationem legis suæ Dominum inhonorat, comprobatur omnino nequaquam misericordiæ dignationem impetrare, sed provocare indignationem iracundiæ. Unde est illud apostoli Jacobi [iv.] “Petitis, et non accipitis, eo quod male petitis.” Quoniam enim malum est privatio boni, erit orantis mala petitio cum privata fuerit aliquo bonorum substantialium orationis, orationem essentialiter constituentium, et tunc prorsus istius orationis mortua petitio non est petitio, sicut mortuus homo non est homo. Sed erit orantis bona petitio cum privata non fuerit aliquo bonorum substantialium orationis, orationem essentialiter constituentium, et tunc profecto illius orationis viva petitio est petitio sicut homo vivus est homo. Unde liquet quod non abhorret a doctrina vivifici Salvatoris, ubi ait, “Petite et accipietis,” sententia sui apostoli, “Petitis et non accipitis.”

Verumptamen in tam nefariis damnatissimorum scelerum erroribus vecordi pertinacia quietius immorantes contra indeclinabiles ultionis divinæ districtiones sibi blandiuntur, confidentes in verbis mendacii, secundum illud prophetici sermonis directi ad principes domus Jacob et iudices domus Israel, sc. activæ luctationi et speculativæ visioni in ecclesiæ præpositos et prælatos, qui ad immunitatem vitæ suæ tam perditricis, tam flagitiosæ, tam facinosæ, propheticum illud inculcavit [Jer. vii.], "Templum Domini," etc.; confidentes, inquam, in verbis mendacii super illud Mich. iii.: "Et requiescebant super Dominum, dicentes, 'Numquid non Dominus in medio nostrum? non venient super nos mala.'" Sed contra nequissimam mendacium assertionum confidentiam sequitur Mich. iii.: "Propter hoc, causa vestri, Sion quasi ager arabitur, et Jerusalem quasi acervus lapidum erit, et mons templi in excelsa silvarum." Numquid profanantes templum Domini proteget contra justissimas vindictas ultionis divinæ,<sup>1</sup> quin vigilet Dominus super verbum suum, ut faciat illud: "In fulmineo splendore fulgurantis hastæ suæ reddens ultionem istis hostibus pervicacissimis, et his, qui atrocissime oderunt Eum, retribuatur, inebrietque sagittas suas in sanguinem, et gladius suus devoret carnes" carnis curam perficere semper satagentium in desideriis?

CAP. XXXII.

Quam rationabili divina dispensationis moderantia per prælatos et principes pax ecclesiæ temporalis continue conservari debeat.

Num ista dixerim ut suadere velim ne rectores ecclesiarum se accingere debeant contra tribulationes pacem ecclesiasticam perturbantes? Nequaquam. Etenim postquam Rex regum et Dominus dominantium, per supremum sui omnipotentatus arbitrium, et curvavit imperia mundi, et mundi regna inclinavit, et humiliavit potentiam mundi, et mundi gloriam prostravit, sub præcelsa ecclesiæ suæ sanctitate condita sunt jura tam canonica quam civilia, ex æternalibus decretis Altissimi, per ora prælatorum et principum divinitus promulgata, coercendis pacis ecclesiasticæ persecutoribus, immutabiliter statuendo ut in universis omnium ecclesiarum ordinibus jugiter conservetur sospitas quantum ad personas, utilitas quantum ad substantias, immunitas quantum ad operas, unanimitas quantum ad concordias. In his enim, sicut liquet evidentius, contra concussiones, contra calumnias, contra angarias, contra contumelias dumtaxat ecclesiæ sanctæ providetur, et dignitati, et libertati, et tranquillitati, et securitati protegendis indeficienter per patrocina sacerdotum et imperatorum adjutoria, ut ecclesia Dei placida suavitate salubriter vivat, secundum mandata, judicia, ceremonias, et promissa Dei, amplectendo feliciter mandata per formam bene vivendi, judicia per censuram recte judicandi, ceremonias per ritum pie colendi, promissa per profectum digne gloriandi. Quo fiat ut rete apostolicum magnos et pueros capiat, militia Christiana fortes et debiles colligat, familia dominica præcipuos et pusillos contineat, ecclesia sancta suprapositos et submissos comprehendat, ad beatam regni Dei consummationem, sub protectione Altissimi optabili pace pie conversando, nequaquam, licet paucitatem majorum semper examinet, minorum<sup>1</sup> multitudinem sæpe confringat persecutionum grassantium laxata vexatio. Quapropter quantum teneantur sacerdotes patrocinio, imperatores adjutorio pacis ecclesiasticæ beatificam dispensationem infatigabili stabilire vigilantia, liquere poterit consideranti prætaxatas eloquiorum divinorum sanctiones.

CAP. XXXIII.

But great discretion required in so doing.

Discerni tamen summopere oportet ab invicem in propulsandis vexationum injuriis magnificentias sollicitudinum. Etenim, sicut claret, et in mente cæcutientibus, prorsus discernendæ sunt persecutionum injuriæ, quæ directe vergunt in detrimentum æternale, ab illis quæ qualitercunque cedunt in præjudicium temporale. Pro illis enim est anima ferventius exponenda, in istis vero est anima moderantius exercenda, cum tamen ex salubri discretione illud oporteat facere, istud vero non omittere.

CAP. XXXIV.

penitus seipsos impendere, ob id tam despicabiliter designatos per vaccas Samariæ apud illud propheticum [Amos iv.]: “Audite verbum hoc, vaccæ pingues, quæ estis in monte Samariæ, quæ calumniam facitis egenis, et confringitis pauperes;” vaccas eos vocans, velut in posterioribus erectos, depressos in anterioribus; vaccas quoque pingues, fœminei sexus, et carneæ crassitudinis: ostendens per fœmineum sexum ad omnia valida fructuum spiritualium effœminatos; per carneam crassitudinem, ad omnia vilia carnalium operum dilatatos. “Quæ estis,” scilicet per amoris affectum mansive viventes, “in monte Samariæ,” id est in elatori opulentia pastoralis custodiæ. Nomen namque Samariæ sonat interpretatum custodiam. Cum ergo egenus sit qui non habet quod sibi sufficiat, pauper vero qui non habet quod alteri communicet, illum calumniatur, quem duris exactionibus spoliando attenuant; istum confringunt, quem sævis defraudationibus amaricando mortificant. Audiant calumniantes egenum et pauperem [Prov. xxii.]: “Qui calumniatur pauperem ut augeat divitias suas dabit ipse ditiori, et egebit.” Audiant confringentes pauperem [Eccl. xxxiv.]: “Panis egeni vita pauperum est: qui defraudat illum, homo sanguinis est.” Etenim ista nomina “pauper” et “egenus” sæpe pro se invicem accipiuntur, sicut nomina “sapientiæ” et “scientiæ,” secundum Sanctum Augustinum. Sic ergo per tam duras exactiones indebita sibi congerentes, et per tam sævas defraudationes aliis deputata sibi retinentes, vivendo tam nefarie proventus ecclesiæ, quod est patrimonium Christi, Christi sanguine egenis et pauperibus comparatum, transvertere non formidant, et præurgentis avaritiæ scelestissimam cupidinem, quod susceperunt de manu Domini sub tanta reddendæ rationis districtione, ad sublevandam dumtaxat, per fidelis prudentiæ dispensationem, fidelium suorum inopiam, secundum illud Salvatoris ad pastores ecclesiæ: “Quis putas est fidelis

 O piaculum cunctis viventibus exhorrendum! Atten-dendum est hic illud Apostoli [i. Cor. iv.]: “ Sic nos “ existimet homo, ut ministros Christi et dispensatores “ mysteriorum Dei.” Hic jam quæritur inter dispensatores ut fidelis quis inveniatur; dispensatores ait, non dominos. Non enim, secundum quod nunc insinu-atum est, memoratum Christi patrimonium, in tam pios usus tam districta lege deputatum divinitus, aliquo modo transferri valet in dispensatorum dominium, nisi usurpativo non tam furti quam latrocinii sacrilegio. Qui tamen dispensatores, dummodo si seminant spiritualia, legitime metent carnalia, ut ex eis habentes alimenta et quibus tegantur, his contenti sint. Qui vero non vult operari non manducet, dignus est enim solus mercede sua operarius. Patet ergo quam convenienter contra istos directus est sermo prophetalis: “ Audite “ hoc, vaccæ pingues, quæ estis in monte Samariæ, “ quæ calumniam facitis egenis, et confringitis pau“ peres.” His adjungendum putavi quod de talibus nominis usurpati pastoribus ille tantus evangelicæ pas-

Quamvis ergo hæc excogitata temptationum tribulantium vexamina nec immerito anxiam ingerant compassionem, tamen multo justius eximiam inducunt exultationem, dicente Scriptura inter innumerabilia in id ipsum testimonia [Heb. x.]: “ Rememoramini pristinos dies, in quibus illuminati magnum certamen sustinuistis passionum: in altero quidem opprobriis et tribulationibus spectaculum facti, altero autem socii taliter conversantium effecti. Nam et vinctis compassi estis, et rapinam bonorum vestrorum cum gaudio suscepistis, cognoscentes vos habere meliorem et manentem substantiam.” Et illud [i. Pet. i.]: “ Benedictus Deus et Pater Domini nostri Jesu Christi, qui secundum magnam misericordiam suam regeneravit nos in spem vivam.” Et infra: “ In quo exultabitis modicum nunc, si oportet contristari in variis temptationibus, ut probatio fidei vestræ multo preciosior sit auro, quod per ignem probatur?” Huc quoque accedunt quæ subjungo testimonia, videlicet illud [i. Cor. iv.]: “ Id quod in præsentem est momentaneum et leve tribu-

He is to rejoice thereat.

“ lationis nostræ supra modum in sublimitate æternam gloriæ pondus operabitur in nobis.” Et illud [Heb. xii.] : “ Flagellat Deus omnem filium, quem recipit.” Et illud [Isaiæ xxviii.] : “ Per omne flagellum erudieris<sup>1</sup> tu, Israel.” Et illud [ii. Cor. i.] : “ Sola vexatio dabit intellectum auditui.” Licet ergo tribulationum vexamina turbando contristent, tamen per Eum, qui consolatur nos in omni tribulatione nostra, lætificant, secundum Scripturas, et roborando ingentius et veracius erudiendo, et expiando sincerius et stabilius confirmando. Nempe commutabilium amorem ab ipsis avertendo mortificant, et vivificant convertendo ad ipsum amorem incommutabilium, non secus quam amara superlinita uberibus ablactandos avertunt a lactis suavitate, et ad soliditatem panis convertunt.

Si quid etiam coram sanctitatis vestræ dignissima prælatione lætificam expectationis securæ fiduciam, per Jesum Christum Salvatorem nostrum, potissime præstat fidelium æmulatio, quod ad honorem Dei, ad hominis salutem, ad liberationem ecclesiarum et vestri coronam sacrosanctam, archipræsulatus vestri ministerium, Divinitate propitia, per successum salutarem ad felicem exitum inspectabili gloria perducetur; hujusmodi, inquam, tam gloriosæ gloriæ præcipue securam præstat fiduciam, quod superclemens prædestinationis altissimæ dignatio invictis ecclesiæ suæ propugnatoribus, per varia succrescentium persecutionum molimina, triumphalem vestri certaminis agoniam associare decrevit, quorum unus ille principum invictissimus, “ Si consistent,” inquit, “ adversum me castra, non timebit cor meum. Si exurgat adversum me prælium, in hoc ego sperabo.” De quibus etiam scriptum est [Judith. viii.]: “ Memores esse debent quomodo pater noster Abraham temptatus est, et per multas temptationes probatus amicus Dei effectus est.” Sic Isaac, sic Jacob, sic Moyses, et omnes qui placuerunt Deo, per multas tribulationes transierunt fideles, Ipsius perpetim disponente clementia, cui dictum est [Tobiæ iii.]: “ Hoc autem pro certo habet omnis, qui colit Te, quod vita ejus si in probatione fuerit, ad misericordiam tuam venire licebit.  “ autem vestrum indiget sapientia, postulet a Deo, qui “ dat omnibus affluenter, et non improperat, et da“ bitur ei. Postulet autem in fide, nihil hæsitans.”

CAP. XL.

Vehementius vero exaggerat his diebus contra ecclesiam tribulationum pericula ut multum persecutio moderna duos gladios, de quibus senatus Apostolorum [Luc. xxii.], “ Ecce duo gladii hic,” copulans insimul ut noceat efficacius. Quorum uterque quidem est ecclesiæ, spiritualis scilicet et materialis? Propter quod spiritualis quidem causarum salutarium diligentissimus investigator ad summum pontificem de gladio materiali [Bernardi ad Eugenium libro quarto],<sup>1</sup> “ Quid,” inquit, “ denuo usurpare temptes, quem semel jussus “ es reponere in vaginam? quem tamen qui tuum “ negat non satis mihi videtur attendere verbum “ Domini, dicentis sic: ‘ Convertite gladium tuum in “ ‘ vaginam.’ Tuus ergo, et ipse tuo forsitan nutu, “ etsi non tua manu, evaginandus. Alioquin si ad te “ nullo modo pertineret, et his dicentibus Apostolis, “ ‘ Ecce gladii duo hic,’ non respondisset Dominus “ ‘ satis est,’ sed ‘ nimis est,’ uterque ergo ecclesiæ “ et spiritualis gladius et materialis; sed is quidem “ pro ecclesia, ille vero etiam ab ecclesia exserendus. “ Ille sacerdotis, hic militis manu, sed sane ad nutum “ etiam sacerdotis et jussum imperatoris.”

Horum ergo utrumque gladium exercet in ecclesiam Dei contra leges divinas vexatio periculosior, quos his diebus ad hoc simul adunavit astutia callidior vulpium demolientium vineam Domini, de qua per prophetam [Isaiah v.]: “ Vineam Domini exercituum domus Israel

“ est ” et adjungit, “ et vir Juda desiderabile germen “ ejus.”<sup>1</sup> Et quid est domus Juda nisi ecclesia Domini, et quid vir Juda nisi Christus Dominus? Igitur adversus ecclesiam Domini, et adversus Christum ejus, moderna persecutio solito vehementior efferari conspicitur in duobus gladiis, materiali sc. et spirituali, vulpium caliditate conjunctis, videlicet astutorum Sathanæ satellitum, clericatum arroganter profitentium, et clerum immaniter persequentium, jugiter quos conatu callido machinantium imperialem seducere celsitudinem, et sanctitatem circumvenire sacerdotalem. Proinde quis poterit æstimare discrimen in eo, quod una cum proprio dirus hostis civem modestum in gladio exorto per hostilem manum de manu civili letaliter invadere non desistit? Et quid si cœlestem potentiam gladii spiritualis solum impugnaret gladii materialis potentia sæcularis, quæ ratio posset esse formidandi?

CAP. XLI.

The greater the difficulty the more glorious the conquest.

Verum cum publicæ potestati potestas ecclesiastica præsidio existit ad confligendum, quis belli pondus sustinebit, nisi quem firmat et dirigit Christus Dei virtus et Dei sapientia [i. Cor. i.], “ sapiens corde et fortis robore ” [Job ix.]? Porro quanto difficilius est certamen prælii, tanto preciosior est laurea triumphi; et quis est locus hæsitandi de triumpho, ubi qui hæsitat in adjutorio Altissimi perseverantia finali legitimi certaminis Ipsum veraciter audit annuntiantem: “ Beatus vir, qui suffert temptationem; quoniam cum “ probatus fuerit, accipiet coronam vitæ, quam repro- “ misit Deus diligentibus se? ” cum allegationibus persequentium pro sua parte.*

Demumne per pontifices ad mandatum regium tribunali regio sistantur clerici, super personalibus actionibus et plerisque criminibus juxta præsumptam dierum aliquot corruptelam responsuri, ut melius novit pietatis vestræ sollertia. Venerandæ sacrorum canonum traditiones omnimodis obsistere non dubitantur. Super his autem abusio nibus, quia segnius actum est per prælatos quamdiu in ecclesia Anglicana, profecto difficilius corrigentur. Allegat enim in hac parte importunus dominus rex, cum consiliariis suis, pro se diuturnam consuetudinem, a qua si recederetur et dignitati regiæ et totali regno fieret enorme præjudicium, quam, ut aiunt, nec debet ecclesia Romana, nec ecclesia Anglicana aliquatenus immutare; litera etiam domini regis a vobis nuper recepta tenoris inconsueti pro pecunia domino regi ab Apostolica Sede concessa, ut eam certis die et loco habeatis per aliquem de vestris solvendam executoribus dictæ confessionis continere. Videtur etiam juxta rationum efficacias, in scriptura vestra mihi destinata expressas, manifestas institutionum canonicarum injurias, quamvis, sicut reor, dominus rex, cum illis quorum nititur consiliis, asserat se in causis hujusmodi potestatem regiam accommodare ordinationibus apostolicis adimplendis, et sic in nihilo ecclesiastica jura per eum violari, cum per ecclesiasticam auctoritatem satagat ex devotione regia ut jussiones apostolicæ peragantur, secundum quod ipsum executores a domino papa delegati vitæ ejusdem super hoc interpellant diligentius et requirunt.

CAP. XLIII.

Quod pii præules contra temporalia modernarum tribulationum vexamina sic studeant adhibere remedia ne per eorum remedialem vigilantiam ecclesie Dei æternalium perditionum incurrant detrimenta.

The remedies to be applied.

Verum cum ex his, quæ superius et modo dicta sunt, ecclesie videantur intolerabilia imminere gravamina, necesse est ut pii præules, zelo domus dominicæ fruentes, contra tanta discrimina opportuna studeant adhibere remedia, præcedentium patrum in omnibus sequendo vestigia. Cavendum tamen potissimum esse cognoscitur [Math. xiii.] ne forte colligentes zizania, eradicent simul cum eis et triticum, neque decimantes mentam et anethum et cimum, relinquunt quæ graviora sint legis et iudicium, misericordiam et fidem; sed nec excollantes culicem, camelum autem glutiant [Math. xxiii.] Absit! Hic illud quidem sequitur scilicet sermo sancti sapientis: "Vides omnem ecclesiasticum zelum fervere sola pro dignitate tuenda. " Honori totum datur, sanctitati nihil aut parum; de " placito Dei ultima mentio est. Pro jactura salutis " nulla cunctatio, nisi quod sublime est, hoc salutare " dicamus, et quod gloriam redolet, id justum." <sup>1</sup>

Sic igitur hic agendum ne, dum modica defenduntur amittantur maxima, ne dum corporibus momentanee providetur, animabus perpetue nocetur. Non desunt viri gloriosi utriusque Testamenti, tam ad regem quam ad sacerdotium pertinentes, divinitus in hoc ad imitandum propositi, qui secundum dispensationem salutarem interdum tolerarent hostes ne cives trucidarent. Nam si jam insinuata dierum istorum pericula, quid hodie dignius expavescitur quam si sacri pontifices aggressu præcipiti configere<sup>1</sup> temptaverint contra præfatas vitæ temporalis inquietationes, quod imperiali gladio sævienti sacerdotalis gladius afferat adiutorium in suspensionum et excommunicationum, privationum et depositionum severissimis additionibus; et sic contrito castrorum coelestium propugnatore, furentissimo sacrilegio sacratissimum sanctuarium contingat irrumpere instar leonum truculentissimos, instar luporum rapacissimos, instar serpentum callidissimos, instar dæmonum malignissimos, truculentia leonina, rapacitate lupina, calliditate serpentina, malignitate dæmoniaca destructuros civitates sanctorum, prædaturos patrimonia justorum, perdituros corpora fidelium, perempturos animas pauperum; latrones loquor immitissimos, sub usurpato nomine pastorum, et dignitates et præbendas, et parochias et monasteria, vastitate hostili in hunc eventum pervasuros. Itaque cum horrore summe lamentabili frustratur et victoria belli, et pro quo bellum initur, salus populi. Quaeso cernatur si alioquin hic intercidit ambiendi possibilitas?

tabilis insania! Est namque necessitas inevitabilis, ut ecclesiæ duces hostibus ecclesiæ virtute potenti patentis controversiæ continue resistendo contradicant, et contradicendo resistant. Sed melius nonnunquam hoc fiet, ut video, sub dispensativo moderamine quod in simplicitate mea, sicut æstimo, ex Scripturæ tam doctrinis quam exemplis, ad vestram jussionem ausus sum annectere. Suprascriptis sane perpetim intellecto quidem ad indefessam strenuitatem opportuna promptitudinis Redemptori animarum, animarum rectores obligatissime constringuntur, ut liberandis animabus proprias animas mortalis vitæ quibuscunque discrimibus incunctata sollicitudine festinent exponere, quotiens interpretores animarum animarum pervasionibus comperiuntur imminere.

London.

<sup>1</sup> This account is taken from an ancient Register of the Friars Minors in London, now preserved in the Cotton Library, Vitellius F. XII. The MS. is on paper, in a hand of the fifteenth century; and is the only one of the kind extant, as far as I can discover. A portion of it was translated by Stevens and published in his continuation to Dugdale, vol. i. p. 112; but the names were greatly disfigured. The MS. has been much burnt in the disastrous Fire, which destroyed so many precious monuments in this invaluable Collection.

De Aquæductu Fratrum Minorum Londoniis.

Aquæductum construxerunt infra scripti : Inprimis <sup>Their con-</sup> caput aquæductus contulit Willielmus Tylour, sartor <sup>duits.</sup> domini Henrici regis Tertii post Conquestum, ad instantiam fratris Willielmi de Basynges, qui totum aquæductum procuravit, et usque ad finem complevit. Sed expensas sive sumptus administraverunt, felicis recordationis dominus Henricus rex Angliæ illustris, supramemoratus, Salekynus de Basynges, optimæ indolis adolescens, dominus Henricus de Frowyke, et dominus Henricus de Basynges, milites.<sup>1</sup> Isti fuerunt cooperatores et coadjutores præcipui. Et postea Galfridus de Camera novam domum in secundo capite construxit, et antiquam melioravit ; et omnes defectus notabiles investigavit et correxit, et multa bona pro eodem procuravit et fecit. Cujus coadjutores præcipui fuerunt Alanus Gille, cum consorte sua, civis Londoniæ ; dominus Henricus Darcy, qui dedit centum solidos pro cisterna de bonis, Johannes Tryple, etiam coadjuvantes, opus compleverunt. Pro ejus etiam anima fratres minores habuerunt Londoniæ, omnibus computatis, c. et x. libras, et xvii. sol., v. d. quart. Cujus animæ propitietur Deus. Amen.

Primo, a limine portæ Johannis Sporon, spatio trium pedum, sub novo muro fratrum, porrectio canalís in vicum versus Newgate quærenti occurrit. Semper autem, dum in via jacet, aquilonarem partem viæ tenet, aliquando et minus domos approximans, secundum quod rectitudo positionis permittit. Sub porta de Newgate spatio xii. pedum profundatur, et directe extenditur sub muro cimiterii S. Sepulchri exterius, et ulterius secundum vici illius obliquationem obliquatur; juxta Lok Well<sup>1</sup> protenditur; ibi bivium pertransiens buttat se contra fenestram domus Johannis Muchcheth, ibique curvatur versus pontem de Holeburne, inter domum Willielmi Yrotheges et pontem; ponitur sub aqua spatio iii. pedum, ultra rivulum illius aquæ circa spatium viii. passuum, juxta pontis murum, ultra fracturam de industria factam, ubi aqua plateæ descendit in loco semper lutoso. Primum spurgellum latet sub terra, spatio vero iv. pedum lapide marmoreo coopertum. Inde directe usque ad Livrone-lane extenditur, ibique secundum rectitudinem venellæ illius vel vici requirat, ad aquilonem [per] occidentalem murum venellæ, positionem habens spatio dist[antiæ] iii. pedum. In fine autem illius venellæ, a læva, secundum spurgellum, altitudine fere vii. pedum. Et inde directe protenditur, campum transversando et sepes, ad molendinum Thomæ de Basynges, quod est proximum villæ, ubi spatio xviii. pedum profundatur. Ibi ex [parte] orientali molendini, a latere aquilonis, infra foveam tertium] jacet spurgellum. Inde spatium fere unius stadii ad occidentem, parum vergendo ad aquilonem, occurrit suleus unus viridius ab oriente in occidentem

In illo autem sulco, a capite orientali incipiendo, xvi. passus, non saltus, et ibi a medio latitudinis sulci, ubi signum ad hoc necessarium foret, verso vultu ad aquilonem, directe super terram Thomæ de [Basyn-] ges, spatio pedum xiv. latet, sub terra spatio iv. pedum, caput aquæ, quod propinquius est, unde pro majori parte aquam habemus, parum autem de capite remotiori. Ab illo autem loco directe extenditur ad caput, quod remotius est, versus occidentem, cujus domuncula lapidea a remoto videtur. Aqua autem istius capitis adducitur ultra foveam Thomæ de . . a parte occidentis, a latere aquilonis, aliquantulum spatio a domo capitis circa xv. passuum, juxta viam quæ dividit inter parochiam Sti. Schoke cum locutorio dispensa cum cameris, et alia ædificia necessaria constructa sunt de bonis communibus, sicut fieri poterant, quia parva erant . . . am et non multum sumptuosa, et in his morabantur fratres usque ad annum Domini [M.CCCLX . . . ]. Tempore vero prædicto multum crevit erga fratres et conventum devotio et affectio fidelium, et secundum eam consequenter crevit fratrum numerosa multitudo, in tantum quod aliquando centum, aliquando plures, et raro pauciores conventuales fratres Londoniis habebantur. Et loca constructa, quæ pro paucis sufficiebant, postea tam multis sufficere non poterant; et idcirco nova et ampliora fideles inceperunt ipsis construere, prout inferius declaratur.

Memorandum quod frater Johannes Stanford, aliquando minister, intelligens paupertatem ecclesiæ Sti. Audoeni Londoniæ, in cujus parochia est locus fratrum minorum, pietate motus et gratia speciali, procuravit quod dominus Matthæus, quondam rector ecclesiæ sanctorum Cosmæ et Damiani Londoni, dedit dictæ ecclesiæ Sti. Audoeni annuum redditum xx. solidorum in perpetuum, quem prior et conventus de Hestyngepyll solvunt annuatim.

Memorandum quod executores domini Henrici de Galeys, quondam maior Londoniæ, dederunt et assignaverunt duos marcatu annui liberi et quieti redditus, pro anima ipsius, de quodam tenemento, quod Thomas Brauncester tunc tenuit, in parochia sancti Matthæi de Fridai-stret, quod quidem tenementum situm est inter tenementum Willielmi de Causton ex parte orientali et tenementum Adæ de Halyngebir ex parte occidentali, solvendum in perpetuum pro quibusdam areis, quas fratres minores occupant Londoniis; videlicet monialibus de Clerkenwell xv. sol. ii. d., canonicis sanctæ Mariæ de Sothwerke viii. sol. vi. d., canonicis Sanctæ Trinitatis infra Alegatis iii. sol.; in quibus patres supradicti pro locis prædictis tenebantur. Cujus memoria in bene-

Fundatores Novæ Ecclesiæ.

Ad perpetuam memoriam fundatorum et coadjutorum Foundation of the new church.
 hujus ecclesiæ, et ad tollendum admirationem quorundam ignorantium, qui admi[rantur] opus et unde expensæ illius administrabantur ;

In primis sciendum quod anno Domini M.CCCVI. illustrissima domina, domina Margareta regina et uxor Edwardi Primi, secundo incepit ædificare chorum et ecclesiam. Ad cujus constructionem contulit in vita sua duo millia marcarum, et c. marcas in suo testamento le[gavit] ad idem opus. Quæ sepulta est coram magno altari in eodem choro.

Memorandum quod Willielmus Walden, miles, posuit primum lapidem, in die Lunæ, in fundatione novæ ecclesiæ, in nomine reginæ prædictæ, anno Domini M.CCCVI.

Item navem ecclesiæ ædificaverunt alii amici, dantes singuli secundum devotionem suam, viz. dominus Johannes de Brytania, comes Richemondiæ, specialissimus pater et amicus fratrum minorum, dedit in subsidium ecclesiæ dictorum fratrum circa ccc. libras sterlingorum, calicem aureum preciosum, vestimenta varia preciosa, tapetia, et alia multa bona, quæ numerari non possunt, pro victu et necessitatibus fratrum ; cujus animæ propitietur Deus. Amen.

Domina Maria comitissa Penbrochiæ, neptis domini Johannis de Brytania prædicti, dedit etiam in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ septuaginta libras sterlingorum, et multa alia bona, et magnum honorem fecit fratribus; cujus memoria in benedictione sit. Amen.

Domina Margareta comitissa Gloucestre, soror dicti Gilberti, dedit pro quodam altari construendo in ecclesia prædicta viginti sex libras, tredecim solidos, quatuor denarios

Domina Alianora le Spencer, soror ejusdem Gilberti, dedit pro quodam altari construendo xv. libras.

Domina Elizabeth de Burgh, alia soror dicti Gilberti, dedit decem ligna bona pretii decem librarum, et quinque libras sterlingorum, in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ.

[Dominus] Arnaldus de Tedemar, civis Londoniæ, legavit in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ c. libras sterlingorum, de quadam domo vendita in Tamesestrete, pro ædificiis construendis, areis emendis et ampliandis, ac redditibus redimendis, qui eam tali modo vendendam legavit, ut certis portionibus solutis, prout in testamento continetur, residuum cederet in usum fratrum minorum Londoniæ. Anno Domini M.CCCII. regni regis Edwardi filii regis Henrici III., fratre Hugone de Hertepoll ministro fratrum minorum in Anglia, fratre Georgio custode Londoniæ, fratre Henrico de Suttone gardiano conventus Londoniis, in quadragesima receperunt procuratores fratrum minorum Londoniæ. Cujus anima merito sit fratribus perpetuo intime recommendata. Nec debent prædictæ c. libræ, de assensu et ordinatione totius conventus, in alios usus commutari.

Item frater et dominus Robertus Lyle baro de Lyle, et postmodum post mortem uxoris suæ habitum religionis sumpsit, et in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ ccc. libras sterlingorum, et multa alia bona fecit fratribus in speciali et in communi, sicut in instrumento in parte patet inde confecto. Quia multa alia bona habuerunt fratres post mortem suam per multa tempora, per manus executorum suorum, quæ in prædicto instrumento non continentur. Cujus animæ propitiatur Deus. Amen.

Item Bartholomæus de Alemania, mercator, dedit in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ xl. libras sterlingorum, et x. libras pro conventu.

Post hæc venit illustrissima domina, domina Isabella regina, mater Edwardi Tertii, et inveniens ecclesiam, quam regina Margareta, amita sua, incepit, nondum perfectam, sed incompletam, septingenta libras et amplius circa eam expendit.

Idem domina Philippa, Dei gratia regina Angliæ et uxor Edwardi III., dedit in subsidium ecclesiæ prædictæ xlviij. lib. xiii. sol. iv. d. Et ad cooperimentum ecclesiæ xiii. lib. vi. sol. viij. d.

Item Robertus Lovelyn v. libras, et Johannes Enfeld xx. marcas. Et sic per hos et alios devotos completum est opus prædictum in annis xxi.; inceptum enim erat M.CCCXXVII.

(Lelandi Collectanea iv. 341.)

Ordo Minorum incepit A.D. 1206.

Anno D. 1224. anno 8<sup>o</sup>. Henrici III. venerunt Minores in Angliam, quatuor scilicet clerici, et quinque laici. Clerici fuerunt frater Agnellus Pisanus diaconus; 2. frater Richardus de Kingesthorp, natione Anglicus, sacerdos & prædicator, ætate provecior, qui primus extitit qui citra montes populo prædicavit in ordine; 3<sup>s</sup>. Richardus Devoniensis, natione Anglus, ordine acolitus; 4<sup>s</sup>. Gulielmus Esseby novitius, Anglus etiam.

Conduxerunt sibi domum Londini in Cornehul, & construxerunt sibi cellas:

Frater Richardus Ingerwrde & Richardus Devoniensis S. Albæ. conduxerunt sibi domum Oxonii in parochia S. Albæ.

Jactis fundamentis religionis iidem profecti Northamptonam conduxerunt domum in parochia S. Egidii.

Primus Gardianus Oxonii Wilhelmus Esseby adhuc novitius.

Cantabrigiæ primus Gardianus frater Thomas de Hispania. Thomas de Hispania.

Frater Joannes de Gernemuta, vir magnæ sanctitatis, qui postea obiit Notinghamiæ, et sepultus est inter canonicos Selfordiæ.

Adam de Exonia post ingressum profectus est ad papam Gregorium IX. a quo missus est ad prædicandum inter Saracenos, sed apud Barlete obiit.

Intravit autem Adam de Marisco apud Wigorniam.
Post hos intravit frater Jo: de Reading, abbas scilicet Osneiaë.

Post hunc Mr. Richardus Rufus, tam Oxoniaë quam Parisiis fama clarissimus.

Primo receperunt<sup>a</sup> Cantabriaë fratres villaë burgenses, assignantes eis veterem synagogam, quæ erat contigua carceri.

Apud Salisbury dedit aream fratribus Dominus rex Henricus, ecclesiam vero ædificavit quidam burgensis, nomine Richardus.

<sup>s</sup>
++
ubi nunc sunt.

Frater Hugo de Baldok, Philippus de London, Wilhelmus de Esseby, primi ex Minoribus prædicabant in Anglia.

Promovit autem plurimum prædicantes adventus fratris Haymonis de Faversham, qui cum tribus aliis magistris apud S. Dionysium famosus prædicator intravit.

<sup>s</sup>
Primo custos fuit Parisiis, postea lector: <sup>c</sup> conu po-situs est. ++

Bononiaë et Paduaë. In legatione quoque in Græciam ad <sup>d</sup> Natacm principem a piaë memoriaë Gregorio ++
missus est.

Venit autem in Angliam cum fratre Haymone frater Wilhelmus de Colevylle senior, ejus germana post-modum in ecclesia cathedrali Cicestriaë pro castitate observanda sævissime jugulata est.

<sup>a</sup> Sic in Autographo Lelandiano.
Sed Cantabrigiaë in Apogr. Galeano.

<sup>b</sup> Sic, cum S supra P, et signo sub u.

<sup>c</sup> Sic, cum S supra u, et signo sub linea.

<sup>d</sup> Sic, cum virgula supra lin. et signo infra.

Richardus Rufus cum Haymone profectus est in Franciam, et ad curiam contra Helyam turbatorem ordinis.

Venit et tunc temporis Radulphus de Rosa, magnus Prædicator et familiarissimus Henrico, postea Gregorii papæ pœnitentiarius. Obiit in curia plenus dierum.

Venit & tunc frater Henricus de Resesby, qui postea datus fuit in Ministrum Scotiæ cum esset vicarius custodis Oxoniæ, sed præventus fuit morte. Mortuus est Leycestriæ, cui successit Joannes de Kechene, Gardianus de London.

Sub fratre Haymone in nonnullis locis facta est arearum ampliatio.

Sub fratre Wilhelmo de Abyngdon mutatus est locus Ebori, locus Bristolæ, locus de Brugewater, locus de Grymmesby, et locus Oxoniæ.

Frater Agnellus fecit scholam honestam ædificari in usus fratrum Oxoniæ, ubi legebat Grostest, postea episcopus Lincolnæ. Cui successit in lectione Mr. Petrus, postea episcopus in Scotia. Deinde Mr. Joannes de Weseham, qui postea decanus fuit Lincolnæ et episcopus Coventrensis. Post quem legit magister Thomas Walleus, postea episcopus S. Davidis.

Unde minister generalis Helias misit pro Philippo Wallensi, & fratre Adam de Eboraco ut Lugduni legerent.

Fratrem quoque Vincentium de Coventre frater Albertus in adventu suo lectorem Londoniæ germanumque fratrem suum Henricum Cantuariæ lectorem constituit. Et sic paulatim per diversa loca positi sunt lectores, scilicet frater Wilhelmus de Leycestria Herfordiæ, frater Gregorius de Bosel Leycestriæ, frater Gilbertus de Cranford Bristolæ, frater Joannes de Weston Cantabrigiæ, frater Adam de Marisco Oxoniæ.

Frater Haymo, Anglicus, sextus ab Helia fuit minister generalis. I. e. totius ordinis Franciscani. Lelandus.

Haymo Romæ commendatus papæ per Richardum Somerton Cardinalem.

Romæ in capitulo quo depositus fuit frater Helias, minister generalis, Haymo electus fuit in ministrum totius Angliæ. Postea electus fuit in ministrum generalem. Lelandus.

Mortuus est Haymo senex Anagninæ, ad quem visitandum dignatus est venire Innocentius IV.

Floruit Gul. de Notingham Oxoniæ tempore Joannis de Parma, octavi ministri generalis; cui successit Bonaventura, magnus ille theologus.

Consueverunt in ipso die ingressus, si vellent, profiteri. Sicque fecit frater piæ memoriæ Rogerus Bacon.

Frater Gul. de Notingham & frater Petrus de Tewkesbyri ostenderunt Domino Papæ Innocentio quæ suus statuerat prædecessor.

Frater Haymo per unum annum ministravit in Anglia, et postea in generalem electus est. Successit autem ei vicarius suus frater Gul. de Notingham.

Frater Nicolaus, qui, cum laicus esset, literas didicit in Anglia, postea confessor Innocentii IV. et episcopus Assisii factus est. Si recte memini, S. Franciscus natus fuit Assisii. Lelandus. Nicolaus Anglus, episcopus Assis-iensis.

Frater Eustachius de Merc, vir famosæ religionis.

Frater Robertus de Turnham, gardianus Linniaë, tanquam signifer cum cruce signatis in terram sanctam profectus est.

Frater Augustinus Gul. de Notingham germanus Innocentio IV. familiaris, postea episcopus Laodicensis. Augustinus Notingham
episcopus Laodicensis.

Igitur postquam circiter quatuordecim annos idem Wilhelmus provinciam Angliæ rexisset, in capitulo Metensi absolutus est, pauloque post Januæ ex peste obiit. Gul.
Notingham
obiit Genuæ.

The Testament of St. Francis.

(From Cotton MS. Faustina D. iv.)

[This early English translation of the Testament of St. Francis is taken from a rare little MS. on vellum, of the 15th century, formerly belonging to a Franciscan Friar, whose name it bears.<sup>1</sup> It appears to have been a portuary or manual; perhaps, the only one of the kind that has been preserved.]

Here begynneth the Testament of owre holy fadre Seynt Frauncis.

OWRE Lord gave vnto me brother Frauncis thys to begynne and doo penaunce, for why when I was in the bondage of synne yt was bitter to me and lothesomme to se and loke uppon persounys enfect with leopre; but that blessid Lord browghte me amonge them, and I did mercy with them, and I departyng from them, that before semyd bittre and lothesome was turned and changed to me in to gret swetnesse and comforte bothe of body and of soule, and afterward in this state I stode and bode a lytle while and thenn I lefte and forsooke the worldly lyf; and our Lord gave to me suche faithe and devotion in his churchis that thys symply and mekely I wurshipped hym, and prayed and sayd: "We wurshipe The most blessid Lord Jesus Crist here, and at alle churchis whiche be in alle the worlde; and we thanke The for by thy holy crosse Thou hast bowghte and redemyd this worlde." And then afterward our Lorde gave unto me suche faith and confidens in those prestis whiche live accordynge to the forme or ordynance of the holy church of Rome, for the ordre of them that if they did trowble and pursue me I wold returne and haue recourse vnto them. And yf I had as muche wysedome as Salomon had, and shall happen to fynde the poor symplest prestis of this worlde I wolde not preche in ther parisshes wherin they dwelle contrary to ther wille. And thos and all other prestis I wille fer and dred, love, honoure, and have in reuerence as my lordis and souerayns. And I wilnot considre nor espie eny synne in them; nor I wille not thynke that they be rechiles and synfulle, for I considre them and take them as my lordis and masters; and this I doo for this consideration, for in this worlde I se nothyng with my bodily yes of the moost hiest Sone of God, but his most holiest and most blessid bodie, and his moost holy and preciusse blode whiche they reseeyve, and thei only mynister those most holy sacramentis to other men. And wher soeuer I fynd his most holiest namys and wordis writen in inconuenient placis I wille take them and gather them to gethers. And I desire that they be takynn upp and gatherid to gether, and that thei be put and kept in conuenient, clene, and honest placis. And alle divynes, and alle thos that mynister to vs the deuyne seruice, and shew vs the worde of God we sholde honour and haue them in reuerence as those that minyster to vs the spryte and the lif, or as those of whome we haue oure spirituuelle and gostly foode and the sustenaunce of our sowle. And after that our Lorde had sent too me bretherne, no man told me what I sholde doo, but that most hiest and gracious Lorde shewed to me by revelacion that I sholde lyve after the forme and the wordis of the holy gospels. And I in fewe symple and playne wordis caused the fourme of our lyf to be writtenn, and our holy fadre the Pope confirmed hyt vnto me, and they that camme to reseeyve this forme or maner of lyvyng departed and distributed that they had and myght haue too powre people. And we were content with oone coote pesyd bothe within forthe and without forthe with a corde and a femorall, and we wolde nat haue any more. Oure dyvyne seruyce the clerkis saide as other clerkis, and the lay bretherne said ther pater noster. And we fulle gladly dwelte and taried in pour deserte and desolat churchys, and we were content to be taken as ideotis and foolys of euery man, and I did exercyse my self in bodily labour. And I wille labour, and yt ys my wille surely and stedfastely that alle the bretherne occupie and exercyse themself in labour, and in suche occupation and labour as belongethe to honeste. And those that haue no occupation to exercyse themself with alle, shall lerne not for covetis to resceyve the price or hier for ther labour, but for to give good example and eschewe and put away idleness. When we wer not satisfied nor recompensid for our labour, we went and had recourse to the bord of oure Lorde, askyng almes from dore to dor. Our Lord by reuelation tawghte me to say this maner of salutation, "Our Lorde give to this his peace." And my bretherne must be welle ware and welle aduysed in any wyse that they resceyve no churches nor dwellynge placys, or any thingis, but yf they be as semythe holy pouerte, the whiche in our rewle we haue vowed and promised, always longyng and abiding ther in those placis but as pilgrymys and straungers. I commaunde also stedfastly and straytely by obedience vnto alle my brethrene, that whersoer they be and abide, that they be not so bolde or so hardy other by themself or by any other meane persone, to desire or axe or to gette or purchase any letter or writyng from the court of Rome, nother for the church nor for any other maner of place, nother for prechyng nor vndre that colour, nother yet for the persecution of ther bodies; but whersoer they be notte receiued, they may flee away and departe thens to another place to do penaunce with the blissynge of God. And I wille in alle thyngis stedfastly and surely obey and be obedient to the generall minister of this fraternite. And to what someuer warden hit shalle plesse hym to geve me or to assigne me ; and in suche wise I wilbe takynne and yelded and resigned in to his handis, that I may nother doo nor say other wise then yt is his wille, for he ys my lord and soffrayne. And thoꝝ I be but simple and not lernid nor letterid, and seke and vnstedfast and feble, yit neuertheles I wille haue a clerke whiche shalle say the devyne seruice vnto me like wyse as yt is expressyd and containyd in the rewle. And alle the other bretherne are bounde also too obeye vnto ther wardens, and too saye ther divyne seruyce after the rewle. And yf eny of the bretherne be fownde that say not ther devyne seruyce after the rewle, or that wolde varye and change ther office ony other wey, or say ther seruyce ony other wise, or after any other vse, or that they be not stable and stedfast in the Crysten feithe, alle the bretherne arre bounde by obedience, wher soeuer they fynde suche a brother, too brynge hym and to present hym to the next custodie or wardene to that place wher as thei fynde hym, and that custos or wardene ys bounde stedfastly and straitly by obedience to kepe hym surely and strongly as a man in holde and in bondis as a prysoner bothe daye and nyghte so that he maye be delyverid to the hondis of his mynister. And his mynister is bounde stedfastly and straitely by obedience too send hym by suche bretherne, the whiche shalle kepe hym day and nyghte as a man in holdē, untill that they brynge hym and present to the lord Hostience, the whiche is lord protectour and correctour of this fraternite and brothered. And the bretherne shalle not say that this is a newe rewle, for this ys a rehersalle or a recordyng and a remembraunce and admonicyon or exhortatioun, and my testament and last wille whiche I brother Frauncis, your yongelynge and your pour seruauant make and leve unto you my blessyd bretherne to that intent that the rewle whiche we have vowed and promysed to our Lorde we may herby the more surely and faithefully obserue and kepe. And the generalle minister and alle the other minysters and custosis and wardennys be bownde by obedience in these wordis nothyng to adde hertoo nor mynyseche nothyng here of, and alweys they shalle haue this testament in wrytyng with them by the rewle, and in alle their chapters and capituler congregacions that they have or that they make when they rede the rewle, they shalle rede these wordis, or this my testament containyd in this word. And I commaunde by obedience vnto all my bretherne, bothe clerkis and also laye bretherne, that they put or make no glose on the rewle, or on this my testament containyd in these wordis, saying that thus hyt shuld be undrestonde. But like wise as oure Lorde gave me or graunted me grace simply and purely or playnelye to say or to shewe the rewle, and these wordis soo sympilly and purely without any glose, you that be my bretherne shall undrestonde them and with holy operation and with frewtefull werkis and holy conuersatione ye shalle obserue and kepe them vnto your lyves ende. And who soeuer trewly obserue and kepe he shalbe fulfilled with the blessinge of the most hiest Father in hevyne, and here in erith he shalbe fulfilled with the blessinge of his most best and swetest Sonne, with the moost Holiest Goste. And they shalle afterward be also accomplysshed with alle the orders of angellis and withe alle sayntis, abidyng alweys in ther holy, blessinge, and joyfulle company in the kyngdome of hevyne. And I, brodre Frauncis, youre yongelyng and your pour seruaunt, how muche soeuer I may or as for furthe as I cann or may establishe and conferme vnto you within forthe and withoute forthe this forsayd most holiest benediction and blessinge.

VII.

(From the same, p. 34.)

Saynt Frauncis in the IIIIth chapiter of his rewle saith these wordis that folowe: I commaunde stedfastly to alle my bretherne that in noo wise they reseive coyne or money by them self or by eny other mene persone; neuertheles for the necessitees of them that bee seke or for the bretherne too be clothid by them that be spirituuelle frendis, the minister shalle haue dilygent cure and charge. But now or euer this be declared we may move a question and aske whether the freer mynor be bownd to obserue and kepe all the Hole Gospelle of oure Saviour Jesu Crist by his profession, to the whiche question I answere and say as oure holy fadre Pope Nicholas saithe in his declaration upon the rewle he that wilbe professid he determynith what thing he purposithe to profes and bynd hymself to, the which ys sum certen thyng. An example, as thus I am a man of the worlde I cum to the ordre of Saynt Frauncis whole rule, I propos too professe, and so doying, I am not bownd to eny other thing but to that whiche I haue promissyd, yf it be so, the freer minor that hathe made his promis to kepe the rewle of Saynt Francis ys not bownd to kepe alle the Gospelle of Crist but to those thingis that be commaundid to hym in his rewle, to kepe commaundmentis as commaundmentis, counsels as counsells, exhortacions as exhortacions, and nat to kepe alle the Gospelle of Crist, the whiche, as the Pope declarithe, withoute a specialle grace of God were vnpossible to kepe. But now let vs turne to the declaration of the IIIIth chapiter of our rewle, the which intendethe of holy pouertie, in the whiche chapter Saynt Frauncis shewithe II. thinggis. The first ys, he forbiddithe vs to resceiue money; the secunde is, he shewthe a mene for that be seke or diseasid. As towelng the fyrst poynt of rescivyng mony we must knowe what yt is too resceiue moneye. The IIII<sup>or</sup> masters answeere and say, that there be certenn thingis that be resceiued for proprete and nat for the vse, and this ys forbiddyn to the bretherne, for they may resceiue nothing for propertye. Also ther be somm thingis that be resceiued for the vse and propertee bothe as is to resceiue money, the whiche may be for the vse and propertie to, but thys maner is forbiddenn to them, also as yt apperithe manyfestly in the rewle; also ther be some thyngis that be resceiued to the vse and for no propertie, and this allonly is graunted to the bretherne, as too haue bookis and clothinge, and other thingis necessarie for them. But how is this vnderstode that they shalle resceiue no mony by them self or by eny meane persone? The forseid masters say that he resceiveth money by hymself that turnythe yt to his propre vse, and he resceivethe money by a meane persone that substitutythe and ordeynithe an other persone in his name to resceiue the money that he may kepe, laye hyt owt for his owne propre vse whenn it shalle please hym, and this maner is forbidden too the bretherne. And thoo that the bretherne maye receive no moneye by them self, neuerthelesse the rewle grauntethe that for the necessiteis of them that be seke and for bretherne to be clothid, the mynisters and custocis shalle haue dilygent cure and charge too procur or provide for suche necessiteis, about the whiche provisione or procuracion, III. thinggis owghte to be takyne hede of princypally. The first is, that we sholde take hede of the thing that we procure solutyon or payment for. The II<sup>de</sup> ys, that the bretherne in suche maner of procuracion kepe a certen maner and forme. The thrid ys, how that the bretherne owghte to be haue them self in suche maner of almes and abowte the persons that kepe the almes. As tochyng the first principally we shall take hede of V. thyngis. The fyrst ys that we owghte to take hede that the thyng that we procure payment for be verie nedefulle. The II<sup>de</sup> is, that the necessitee of the bretherne be present or ellis at hond, and nat for longe tyme to comme. The III<sup>de</sup> ys, that the necessite be alonly for the bretherne of the same ordre, and of none other strangers. The IIIIth is, that when we procure eny suche payment ther be no almes, the whiche be indifferent. The V. is, that the thyng that we procure payment for be of suche qualytee that it cannot be conueniently gottynn by begginge; all these V. toche the first principalle. The II<sup>de</sup> principalle ys, that the bretherne of ther parte owghte to kepe a certene way and forme in suche procuracion, the whiche oure holy father Pope Nicholas shewithe in his declaratioun, and they be VI. in nombre. The firste ys, that the bretherne choppe and chaynge not with seclars, nor yet put any mann in ther name so for too doo. The II<sup>de</sup> is, that when they goo abowte eny procuratyoun that in noo wyse they may present eny personne to whom the almyns may be gevynn, for and yf they doo they resceiue money by a mene persone, therfor when they go for suche almyns they shall exhorte them that gevith hit he wille wytsaff to doo the almes them self, or ellis to commyt yt to a nother, the whiche may do hit in his name; but yf it wille nat please hym soo too doo then the bretherne may name a personne, the whiche in his name that gevethe yt may doo the almyns, as Pope Nicholas saith in his declaration. Also they owghte to taake hede that when they go for suche almyns they suffer no man to go withe them for to resceiue the almyns; neuertheles when they for other necessiteis as to begge chese or appullis in the contrey, and specially in placis there as they be nat knowynne

they may have wone that may go withe them, so that he rescieve no money. The thrid is, that when they go aboute suche procuracion of payment yf the person happenn to aske of them for what necessitees they wold haue yt the bretherne shold telle them ther necessiteys, the whiche Pope Nicholas in his declaration semythe to conforme, saying in this wise yt is lauffulle for the bretherne to shew and specefie ther necessiteis. The IIIIth is, the bretherne be ware when they procure suche payment, that in noo wise wilfully they procure more then their necessite shall draw to after ther estimation, and yf peradventur moore remayne of the almys, that shalle suffice for ther necessite what that is the ouerplus the bretherne haue not to doo with yt without his licence that gave it; therefore Pope Nicholas desyryng the clerenes of the bretherne conscience, saithe, that the bretherne shold aske lycens of hym that gevythe the almys, that and yf he geve more then the necessite shalle comme too that it wil please hym that the ouerplus may be turnyd in too other necessiteis. The V. is, that when any almys ys laide or put in eny mannys hond for the necessiteis of the bretherne, the whiche necessiteis yf they require long tyme or euer they can be gottynn, then the bretherne shold make protestacion to him that gevithe the almys that as longe as this almys is not spent he maye take hit as his owne and revoke yt at his pleasure ayen. The VI. is that the almys is laid downe to the bretherne ozte to obteyne lycens of hym that gevithe yt if nede be he substitute or ordeyne a nother man in his name to doo the almys.

The VI. toche the second princypall.

The thrid principalle ys that the brethren of ther parte must kepe a certen waye and forme as touching the almys, and also them that kepe suche almes, in the whiche princypalle III. thinggis ar to be notid principally, here folowyng. The first is, that in no money that is geveyne too them that maye haue noo lorde shipe, actione, or administracion, or dispensatioun ther in, nor yit in wille to haue suche lorde shipe. The II<sup>de</sup> is, that how so euer he behauythe hym self that kepith the money in hit they cannot trouble hym out of the lawe in any wise, other by action or by eny other mene, nor yet axe a cownte of the forsaide money, nor yet, as Pope Clement declareth, to kepe a keye of the cheste ther as the money is. The thrid is, that as long as the money shalle remayne at eny persone that in no wise thei shewe eny tokyn in worde or in dede wher by it may appere that they haue eny pour or yet despensatioun in the forsaide money. Also they shalle not bere yt nor thinke hyt in their harte, but allonly yt is graunted untoo them to shew ther necessiteis and to procure almys for them and payment. And yf they that kepe the almys be neclygent and wille not fulfill the mynde of hym that gave yt they can do nothyng untoo hym but alonly exorte hym to be ware of his conscience, and that he behaue hymself as a trewe man shold doo in that thing that ys committed to his fidelite and trust.

A certen generall constitution forbiddith that in no wise vppon good fryday or ellis in other tymes when the seclars be wont to cum and kysse the crucefixe of ther deuotion that they be not sufferd to haue eny place wher in they may offer money: and her is to be notid that by money is nott alonly undrestond coynne, but all thynge that may be solde for money, and yf it shold happyn that eny suche were offerid upp yt may not be spent in the vse of the bretherne, for yf they so do they doo ageynst the rewle and agenst the declaration of Pope Clement. A nother ys to be notid, that in sum placis seclars whiche be callid bretherne too the bretherne of our ordre vnder the coloure of deuotione wille begge indyfferently money in the market or in the strete for our bretherne, and wille cum to them sayinge in this wise, "Come to me when " hit please you, for I haue almys for you," the whiche yf they knewe that ye were so gottyn they shalle not resceiue yt, for it is agenst ther state for they resceiue money by a mene person. Also yt is forbiddyn in the rewle that the bretherne in no wise shalle enter in to the monasteries of nonnys, the whiche Pope Nicholas declarith, saying in this wise, "Yt is nat alonly forbiddyn " to go too the sisters of Sent Clare, but also generally " to go to eny other monastery of nunnis; for in no " maner of wyse they may go vnto the systers of the " orde of Sent Clare, thoꝝ that in ii. casis yt is " grauntyd to them to go too other monasteriis," and that is for to say, other for to preche the word of God or ellis for to begge and that alwaies with the licence of ther prelate, so that in no wise thei go eny forther thenn the seclars may go by the lawe, that is to saye, they enter in to the cloyster or any other inward parties of the monastery.

Finis. Deo Gratias.

The first is that, the bretherne shalle not haue mo then onn cote with a hode, and a nother withoute a hode, and thoughe that the rewle say soo, neuertheles Pope Nicholas saithe that the bretherne may haue mo yf they haue nede, and alweye with the licens of theire prelatiis. The II<sup>de</sup> is, that the bretherne shalle were no shone. The III<sup>de</sup> is, that the bretherne shal not ride withoute a grete manifest necessitee. The IIIIth is, that the bretherne shallé haue vile and cowrse garmentis. The Vth is, that they shalle fast from Alhallowtyd vnto Cristmas and euery friday. The VI. is, that the clerkis shal saye the devyne servis after the vse of the Chirch of Rome. The VII. is, that mynisters and wardyns shalle diligently take hede untoo them that arre to be clothyd. The VIII. is, that yf eny brodre be seke the other brotherne owghte too serue hym as they wolde be saruyd them self. The IX. is, that the bretherne preche not in the bisshoperiche of eny bisshope yf he be forbidden of hym. The Xth is, that the bretherne shalle not preche but yf they be examenyd of the generalle mynister. The XI. is, that the bretherne shalle knowe themself nat able to kepe the rewle spiritually they sholde haue recours to ther ministers. The XII. is, that alle thingis that arre put in the reule as tochinge the fourme of the habyt aswell of the noyce as of the profest bretherne; but yf it shalle seme otherwise necessarie in the habyte of the novys too them that resceyve them.

Thes beene the articles aforeseid.

Finis.

For asmoche as saynt Frauncis saith in his rewle that the bretherne shold beware that they medle nat with the temporalle goodis of novicis, Pope Clement asketh here iiii. questions whiche be thes that folowe:—

The first is, whether the bretherne may resceive eny thinge of ther goodis yf they gyve them eny, and he answerithe and sayth, that they may resceive if they haue any necessite, so that they that geve yt too them as to other poure peopulle, neuertheles he sayth that they shold beware that thei resceive no gret somme lest somme sclaunder maye cum therof. The II<sup>de</sup> is whether they maye enduce them too geve them any thing, and he saith naye. The thrid is, whether they may geve them counselle in distributing of ther good, and saithe also naye, but they shold them send to somme parsones that ferith God as oure holy rule saithe. Also yt is to be notyde that after our rewle we may haue recours to our spirituell frendis but in ii. causis, that is to saye, for them that be seeke and for them that be to be clothid; but oure holy fadre Pope Clement declaring this passe of the rewle saithe, that we may haue recours to them also yf that we shold happyn to lacke mete and drynk.

The generalle Statutis made in the generull Chapitre callid Bereynonde hathe ordeynd that no man shalbe received to the Ordre but he have these thingis that folowe.

The first is, that he beleve of the Catholyk feith; the II<sup>de</sup> is, that he be suspecte of no erreure; the III<sup>de</sup> is, that he be not bounde to matrimony; the IIIIth is, that he be nat unlaufullly begotten; the V. is, that he be hoole of body; the VIth is, that he be prompte of mynde; the VIIth is, that he be not in det; the VIIIth is, that he be not a bonde man borne; the IXth yf he be clerke at the leste that he be goynge of XVI yere of age; the Xth that he be of good name and fame; the XIth that he be competently lernyd, or ellis that he be of suche condition that he maye profete the bretherne by labour; the XIIth that he be of such condition that his reception maye be grete edification to the peple. Also hit is ordeynd that no mann shalbe received to the

ordre for a laye brodre withoute he haue at the lest xx<sup>ti</sup> yeris of age, and at the most he passe nat xl<sup>ti</sup> yere, but yf it be so, that he be so notable or noble a persoun that throwghe his reseivinge grete edification may comme too the peple. Also we forbydde that none of the ordre of mendicantis maye be reseived to this ordre; and if the contrary be done, yt is voide and of none effecte. We warne and exhorte the bretherne that in tyme congregre they geve them self to deuotion, therfore lest the spirite of deuotion be put out throꝝ inquietnes, we ordeyn that sylens be kept after that complenn be done till the first pele to pryme of the next day folowinge be runge. Also they must kepe sylence in the qwere in the church, in the cloister, in the refectory, bothe at the first dynare and at the II<sup>de</sup>. Also from Ester to the fest of the Exaltation of the Cros, after the II<sup>de</sup> dynare, after the frater belle be ronge till the first pele be runge to none. Also we exhorte the brethern that they wille speke softe and religiusly in euery place, and specially in the dormitory. And that the silence may be the better kept, we wille that the bretherne shalle not pas the church, the oratory, the cloyster, the lybrary, the dormitory and the secrete place after that compleyne is sayde till the first pele be ronge to prime in the mornynge except them that be seke, and they that sarue them and straungers. As towching our habite and clothinge, yt is ordeyned that the breddithe of the hode pas not the sholder boone, and that the lenghte thereof pas not the coorde behinde; and the lenghte of the habit shalle nat pas the lenkithe of hym that werethe yt, and the breddith therof haue nat past xvi. spanmys at the most, nor les then xiiii., but yf the gretnes of the brodre require more after the mynd of the warden, and the lenghte of the slevis shall cum ouer the vtter joynt of the finger and no further. And the brethern may haue mantellis of vyle and course clothe, not curiously made or pynched aboute the necke, nat towching the graund by a hole spanne. Also the bretherne shall neuer slepe withoute ther habyte corde and fernal; and he that dothe the contrary shall ete his dyner at the next refection without his habite. Ther corde shalbe vyle and rewde, alle curiusesnes put awaye, or yf eny brodre toche or handle any mony or coyne or kepithe hit in his selle, yf he amende hym nat after the first warnyng, he shalbe putt in presoun. Also yt is ordeynd, that the fast enioyned to vs by the rewle shalbe fastid in lentyn mete; also the vigellis of the apostillis shalbe fastid bothe within and withowte, except Philippe and Jacobbe, Saynt Johne the Euangeliste, and Saynt Barnabas; and as for Saynt Bartilmewe evon shalbe fastid, and the feste kept after the vse of the countrey ther as the bretherne be. Saynt Frauncis evyn must be fastid. And when the bretherne ete flesche, let them kepe goode temperance, and at nyghte the bretherne that be hole and in ther couent shall not ete flesche but yf sumtyme the prelatys of a resonable cause wille dispence with that. And the wardens diligently must take hede that a resonable cause they geve noo lycence to ther bretherne to ete from the communte. Also euery brother shalle haue a confessor assigned hym by the wardene, to the whiche he shallbe at the lest in the weke be shrivyn ii. tymes, and ons in fourtynyghte too be howselyd in the high mas, but yf he be dispensid withalle of the presedent. Also for the vtter counversation of the bretherne, yt is ordeynd that no brother shalle goo owte without a felowe, nor yet bide in eny place without a felowe. And when thei go in the towne that they goo into none other place then they be sent vnto but for a resonable cause, and to be schewyd to ther prelat at ther commyng home. Also the bretherne shalnat ete nor drynk in no place where we haue a couent, but yf it be with grete estatis or prelatis, or in religious houses; and yf any doo the contrarye an hole day he shall drynk nothings but water. Also we ordeyne, that no brother of lower degree then the provincialle may assoyle any brodre that is inhobedient presumptuously or of proprietary, nor of the synnes of the flesch or of thefte, or eny notable thinge or vile or litle thingis oftene stollenn, or of laying violently hondis one a brother, or of beryng fals witnes, iugement or of makyng of any bille of diffamation or slawndre or of counterfetyng any sele of any notable personue or of falsly accusyng any mann to his diffamation, and he called inhobedient presumptuously that after iii competent warnynggis abidethe in his stordynes a hole day naturalle. Also no confessorre may assoile any brother of vnclenly towchinge or of steryng of ther self knowleginge too the synne of the flesshe withoute he haue pour to assoile in the synne of the flesshe. Also, if any brother counterfete or breke opynne any letter of a prynce, or counterfet or breke the sele of a generalle or provincial manifest, yf it be lawfully knowyn and prouyd, he shalbe prisonyd, and yf it be the generallis letter or sele or his commissaries he shalnat be delyuerid out of prisone withoute his special licence. Also, the bretherne shall shewe to the wardenn preuely after they haue benn forthe the notable defawtis of ther felowe. Also for the chosinge of newe officers yt is ordeyned that the wardens shalbe chosynn by the bretherne of the place, in the whiche electione noo laye bretherne shalle haue a voice. And the confirmation of the same pertayneth to the generalle or the provincialle. Also, yt ys ordeynd that iii tymes every weke shalbe kepte chapter in eury couent. Also eury lay brother shalle saye eury weke an c. paternosters, and as meny aveis for alle Cristene sowllys and for alle the bretherne that be ded in the ordre. And yf they may nat say it in one weke they may saye it in a nother. Also yerely for the brethern and other speciale frendis that be dede the whiche were recommendid in the generalle chapter a c. paternosters, and as many aveis, Also for that be alive a c. paternosters and as many aves. Also for oure benefactours, the whiche resceive vs as we go by the weye every laye brother must saye within the octaue of Seynt Francis a c. paternosters with as many aveis. Also it ys ordeynd that for the cardinalle protectoure of this ordre yf he dye in the tyme of his office, every lay brother shall saye ccc. paternosters, and as many aveis, like as many for the generalle yf he dye in his office. And for our benefactours and for owre bretherne that bed, and for them that he buried in our placis three tymes in the yere, the sayd bretherne shall saye a c. paternosters, &c. Hit is too say the day before Marie Maudleyne day, the day before Michelmas day, and the munday after Septuagesima. Also the last day before Advent, the laye bretherne shall say c. paternosters, and as many avis for the faders and mothers of the bretherne. Also yt is ordeynde, that for every brother that dieth in the office of a warden or custos or provincialship, every lay brother shall saye a c. paternosters, and as many aveis, and likewise a c. paternosteris the laye bretherne must saye for every brother that diethe in the couent ther as they be, &c. And thowghe that the statutis bynde vs no more, neuertheles a lawdabulle custome that for every brother in what covent so euer he diethe in, shold be said for his sowle a c. paternosters. Deo gratias. Amen.

(From the Sloane MS. 1986. f. 193. vell.)

THOUGH entitled Ordinances for the Household of Bishop Grostete, this is evidently a Letter addressed to the Bishop on the management of his Household by some very intimate friend. From the terms used in the Letter, it is clear that the writer must have been on confidential terms with the Prelate. I cannot affirm positively that the writer was Adam de Marisco, although to no other would this document be attributed with greater probability. No one else enjoyed such a degree of Grostete's affection; none would have ventured to address him with so much familiarity. Besides, the references made more than once by Adam de Marisco in his letters to the management of the Bishop's household, greatly strengthen this supposition. See pp. 160. 170.

The MS. is a small quarto on vellum, in the writing of the 15th century. It is in all probability a translation from a Latin original.

Incipiunt Statuta Familie bone memorie dompni Roberti Grossetest Lincolnie episcopi.

Let alle men be warned that seruen 3ou and warnynge be 3eue to alle men that be of howselholde to serue God and 3ou trewly and diligently and to performynge or the wyllynge of God to be performed and fulfyllydde.

Primus
arl<sup>o</sup>.

Fyrst let seruauntis doo perfyteley in alle thyngis youre wylle and kepe they 3oure commaundementis after God and ry3thwysnesse and with oute condicioun; and also with oute gref or offense. And say ze that be principalle heuede or prelate to alle zoure seruauntis both lesse and more that they doo fully, reedyly and treuly with oute offense or ayenseying alle youre wille and commaundement that is not ayeynys God.

The secunde ys that ze commaunde them that kepe and haue keypyng of zoure howselholde a fore zoure meynye that bothe with in and with oute the meynye be trewe, honest, diligent both chast and profitabulle. [2<sup>us.</sup>]

The thrydde, commaunde ye that no mann be admittyd in zoure howse holde nother inwarde nother vtwarde but hit be trustyd and leuyd that ze be trewe and diligent and namely to that office to the whiche he is admyttyd. Also that he be of goode maners. [3<sup>us.</sup>]

The fowreth, be hit sowzht and examined ofte tymys yf ther be ony vntrewman, vnkuunyng, vnhonest, lecherous, stryffule, drunke, lewe, unprofitabulle. Yf there be ony suche yfunde or diffamydde vpon these thyngis that they be caste oute or put fro the howselholde. [4<sup>us.</sup>]

The fyft, commaunde ze that in no wyse be in the howselholde men debatefulle or stryffulle but that alle be of oonn a corde; of oonn wyll euen lyke as in them ys oon mynde and oon sowle. [5<sup>us.</sup>]

The sixte, commaunde ze that all tho that seruen in ony offyce be obedient and redy to them that be a bofe them in thyngis that perteynynn to there office. [6<sup>us.</sup>]

The seuenth, commaunde ze that zoure gentilmen yomen and other dayly bere and were there robis in zoure presence, and namely at the mete for zoure worshyppe and not oolde robis and not cordyng to the lyuerey, nother were they oolde schoon ne fylyd. [7<sup>us.</sup>]

The viii, commaunde ze that zoure almys be keypyd & not sende not to boys and knafis nother in the alle<sup>1</sup> nothe outh of the halle ne be wasted in soperys ne [8<sup>us.</sup>] dyners of gromys, but wisely, temperatly with oute bate or betyng, be hit distribute, and the<sup>1</sup> departyd to powre menn, beggers, sykefolke and febulle.

[Nonus.] The ix, make ze zoure owne howseholde to sytte in the alle as muche as ye inow or may at the bordis of oon parte and of the other parte and lette them sitte to gedur as mony as may, not here fowre and thre there; and when youre chef maynye be sett then alle gromys may entre, sitte and ryse.

[Decimus.] The x, streytly forbede ze that no wyfe be at zoure mete. And sytte ze euer in the myddul of the hyc borde that youre fysegge and chere be schewyd to alle menn of bothe partyes, and that ze may see lyzhtly the seruicis and defawtis; and diligently see ze that every day in zoure mete seson be two men ordeyned to ouer se youre mayny; and of that they shalle drede zou.

[11<sup>us</sup>.] The xi, commaunde ze and yeue licence as lytul tyme as ye may with honeste to them that be in zoure howseholde to go home. And whenne ze yeue licence to them assigne ze to them a short day of comynge a yeyne under peyne of lesynge there seruice. And if ony man speke ayen or be worthe say to hym: "What wille ye be Lorde: ye wille that y serue you after zoure wille." And they that wille not here that ze say effectually be they ywarnyd and ye shall provide othir seruantis the which shalle serue you to your wille or plesynge.

[12<sup>us</sup>.] The xii is commaunde the panytere with youre brede and the botelare with wyne and ale come to gedur afore you at the tabulle afore gracys, and let be there thre yomen assigned to serue the hyc tabulle and the two syde tabullis in solenne dayes. And ley they not the bossels deseruyng for ale and wyne uppon the tabulle but afore you. But be they layid under the tabulle.

Cotton, Cleop. B. II.

[The following curious poems, all in the same hand, and evidently by the same author, are found in an early paper MS. containing several Tracts connected with the history of the Franciscan order. How they should have come into such company, for which they were evidently not designed, the MS. affords no clue. The poems are in an earlier hand than the rest of the MS., and not later than the close of the 14th or beginning of the 15th century. They have been scored through in somewhat darker ink. Probably by the same hand.]

Of the author, who had been a novice in the Order of St. Francis, and had abandoned it to become a follower of Wicliffe, nothing is known beyond what he has chosen to communicate respecting himself in these poems.]

§ I.

Heu, quanta desolatio Angliæ præstatur,
 Cujus regnum quodlibet hinc inde minatur,
 Et hujus navigium pene conquassatur !
 Regnum nec exsilio nec ope juvatur.

With an O and an I, præ dolore vent[r]is 5
 Meum jam consilium jacet in vi mentis.
 Sed ad pœnitentiam convertat Deus gentem,
 Et dirigat divinitus nostri regis mentem,
 Ut tortuosum lucide cognoscat serpentem
 Monachis et fratribus hypocrisim latentem. 10

With an O and an I, ne istis attendat, Sanctorum oratio ad cœlos ascendat.
 In nos pestilentia sæva jam crescit
 Quod virorum fortium jam populus decrescit.
 Quæ diversis partibus adhuc invalescit 15
 Cum noster jubilus totaliter recessit.

With an O and an I, huic finem ruinæ, Addat qui supremus est, auctor medicinæ.
 In maligno positus nunc est mundus totus,
 A viris Angligenis non est Christus notus ; 20
 Pro peccato populi venit terræ motus,
 In religiosis jam nullus est devotus.

With an O and an I, debacchantur servi
 Et in servos Domini nimis sunt protervi :
 In hoc terræ motu ab hora diei, 25
 Quia tunc convenerant scribæ, Pharisæi,

Cum summis sacerdotibus contra Christum Dei.
Vultus iræ patuit divinæ faciei.

With an O and an I, sanctos diffamarunt,
Per hæreses et schismata, quæ falsa patrarunt. 30
Heu, jam mala plurima de nobis sunt scita !
Per ventos et flumina jacent grana trita.
Ab antiquis patribus hæc sunt inaudita ;
Qui campos conspicitis, scitis quod est ita.

With an O and an I, causam si quæeratis, 35
Dico quod hoc accidit nobis pro peccatis.
Si status conspiciamus, nullus excusatur,
Quod in shopis venditur male mensuratur,
Quilibet perjurio vel fraude lucratur,
Sed quod sic acquiritur acquirens furatur. 40

With an O and an I, res male quæsitæ,
Ut indies conspiciamus, sæpe vadit ita :
Clerici, qui speculum forent laicorum,
In fastum libidinis multi laxant lorum ;
Rectores jam rapiunt bona subditorum : 45
Scitis quod hæc omnia signa sunt dolorum.

With an O and an I, sic est mundus versus,
Qui luceret aliis, tenebris est mersus.
Ultra si progredimur, ubi sunt prælati ?
Nescio, sed certum est, multi sunt elati 50
Sed prece vel pretio vel penna sublimati.

With an O and an I, libens scire quare
Penna viros erigens facit non volare ?
Quid dicemus præter hæc de religiosis ? 55
Primo mendicantibus falsis et mendosis,
Qui se fingunt similes actu rubris rosis,
Cum mores odoriferos,<sup>2</sup> exemplum morosis,

With an O and an I, rosæ mercuerunt, Instar sterquilini saporē dederunt.	60
Hi domos conficiunt miræ largitatis Pollitis lapidibus, quibusdam quadratis ; Totum tectum tegitur lignis levigatis. Sed transgressum regulæ probant ista satis.
With an O and an I, facta vestra tabent, Christus cum sic dixerat, foveas vulpes habent. Qualiter ædificant vere non est mirum : Ingens opus construunt quasi magnum Tyrum. Qualitercumque fuerit circumvallant gyrum, Si decretum verum sit, est totum delirum.	65     70
With an O and an I, destructis fundatis Nova statim construunt <sup>1</sup> pecuniis paratis. Non est monasterium tam possessionatum, Nec rex, nec episcopus, ut satis est probatum, Habens opus aliquod tam cito paratum, Sicut qui cotidie vadunt mendicatum.	    75
With an O and an I, vel sunt furatores, Vel faciunt numismata, regni proditores. Se mendicos publicos clamant cunctis horis. Non tamen dedecoris sed magni honoris Habitu se protegunt, panni <sup>2</sup> melioris Tunicis, pellicis, frigus claudunt foris.	   80
With an O and an I, dicunt Pharisæi, “ Ecce quanta patimur pro amore Dei ! ” Si quis impugnat hoc, dant responsum gratum, Quod ad usum proprium nobis est hoc datum. Bonum vident intime, non accedunt statum, Sed præceptum regulæ sic est vacuatum.	  85

Minores induerent pannum viliorem,
 Et de corda cannabi induerent cinctorem.
 Sed ut locum teneant fastis altiozem,
 Semetipsos induunt regium colorem.

With an O and an I, exun<sup>1</sup> de paradiso 95
 Absconditur sub modio, Papa sic deriso.
 Inter fratres griseos sic est ordinatum,
 Quod nullum velle mortuum post erit mutatum.
 Si conventum videant penuriis gravatum,
 Non donabunt aliquid, sed monstrant legatum. 100

With an O and an I, Helmebrigge testatum Firmum stat cum Fraunces dicunt dispensatum.
 Isti fratres prædicant per villas et forum,
 Quod si mortem gustet quis in habitu Minorum,
 Non intrabit postea locum tormentorum, 105
 Sed statim perducitur ad regna cælorum.

With an O and an I, habitu cum zona<sup>1</sup>
 Adquiritur ab Helmebrigge fratribus annona.
 Si dives in patria quisquis infirmetur,
 Illuc frater properans et currens monetur, 110
 Et statim cum venerit infirmo loquetur,
 Ut cadaver mortuum fratribus donetur.

With an O and an I, ore petunt ista,
 Dum cor et memoria simul sunt in cista.
 Quod si pauper adiens fratres infirmetur, 115
 Et petat ut inter hos sepulturæ detur ;
 " Gardianus absens est," statim respondetur ;
 Et sic satis breviter pauper excludetur.

With an O and an I, quilibet est negans
 Quod<sup>2</sup> quis ibi veniat nisi dans vel legans. 120

Fratres in capitulis solent<sup>1</sup> compilare
 Litteras, suffragia quas solent vocare.
 Vere sed naufragia debentur nominare,
 Viros cum præcipitent in profundum mare.

With an O and an I, quod Papa non audet, 125
 Falsus frater annuit et spe lucri gaudet ;
 In his sunt participes omnium missarum,
 Et precum similiter, et abstinentiarum.
 Num personæ dignæ sunt, curant valde parum.
 Numquid tales litteræ sunt de usu Sarum? 130

With an O and an I, tot partes dederunt,
 Quod ipsis non aliquæ credo remanserunt,
 Tam vivis quam mortuis tales partes dantur.
 Sed blasphemi publici doctores probantur.
 Hæc et his similia fratres operantur ; 135
 Quæ restant gravissima, hic non recitantur.

With an O and an I, vos, fratres, valete.
 In vos capiet pravos si quis trahet rete.
 Quid dicam de monachis S<sup>ti</sup> Benedicti ?
 Dicti per antiphrasim, sed sunt maledicti. 140
 Nam non servant regulas quibus sunt astricti ;
 Ab antiquo Mamona minus sunt defecti.

With an O and an I, leporem venari Malunt quam Jeronymi vitam contemplari.
 Nulli<sup>2</sup> sunt in sæculo qui magis se dederunt, 145
 Quam illi qui sæculo renunciaverunt.
 Ut canes ad vomitum tales redierunt :
 Manus dantes aratro retro respexerunt.

With an O and an I, hoc peccato rei
 Nullo modo dicti sunt apti regno Dei. 150
 Monachus qui proprium solet abnegare
 Obbam die quolibet vult appropriare ;

| <sup>2</sup> Nulli MS.

Nec vult ciphum socii, sed proprium portare,
Et ni discus plenus sit hic vult minitare.

With an O and an I, fuit dictum prisco 155
Monachus mundo mortuus vivens est in disco.
Hæc ego qui feceram monachus aggressus,
Per hos rasmus fueram, sed nondum professus ;
Sed de magnis otiis cito fui fessus,
Et ad Christi regulam statim sum egressus. 160

With an O and an I, de visis in domo
Cum juratus fuerim nunquam sciet homo.
Tantos motus intuens Dominus in mari Quosdam viros nobiles fecit magistrari,
Ut fides ecclesiæ possit restaurari, 165
Wyclif et discipulos voluit vocari.

With an O and an I, hi sunt viri nautæ Ducentes a Domino navem Petri caute.
Hi doctores monachos solent increpare,
Quia nolunt proprias regulas servare, 170
Injungentes monachis otium vitare,
Et dant per quod medium debent laborare.

With an O and an I, monachi pinguatibus
Laborare manibus hoc non possunt pati ;
Tunc fratres ulterius probant delirare, 175
Nullo modo validi debent mendicare ;
Sed aptantur regula manu laborare,
Quia quam accipere beatius est dare.

With an O and an I, Fraunces laboravit,
Ut posterius sic facerent primus exemplavit, 180
Tacto laboritio ; fratres furiebant,
Et ex parte propria monachi timebant.
Monachi tunc proprie fratribus mittebant,
Qui læti de nuncio læti veniebant.

With an O and an I, sit Deus beatus, 185
 Hic amici facti sunt Herodes et Pilatus, Armacanum, quem cœlo Dominus coronavit,
 Discordes tantomodo fratres adunavit;
 Sed magno miraculo Wyclif coruscavit
 Cum fratres et monachos simul collocavit. 190

With an O and an I, consortes effecti Quovis adversario dicunt sunt protecti.
 Factum est cum monachis simul concordarent,
 Atque falsas fabulas fratres prædicarent,
 Et doctores ordinum scholas doctrinarent 195
 Per quas famas floridas<sup>1</sup> in sonitum migrarent.

With an O and an I, viri veritatis Multum diffamati sunt in dictis contractatis.
 Tunc primus determinans est Johannes Wellis, Sanctos viros reprobans cum verbis tenellis; 200
 Multum conversatus est ventis et procellis;

With an O and an I, in scholis non prodest;
 Imago faciei monstrat qualis hic est.
 Hic promisit in scholis quod vellet probare 205
 Wyclif et Herford similiter dictis repugnare.
 Sed cum hic nescierat plus argumentare
 Nichol solvens omnia jussit Bayard stare.

With an O and an I, Wellis replicabat,
 Sed postquam Nichol solverat tunc Johannes stabat, 210
 Tunc successit alius, Goydon<sup>3</sup> nuncupatus,
 In monachis egregius et vir magni status;
 Propter meum dicere nemo sit iratus,
 Hic non erat clericus sed laicus literatus.

<sup>1</sup> Sic.<sup>2</sup> Sic. Qy. ut ?<sup>3</sup> Qy. Goddam ?

With an O and an I, sub veste monachatus 215
 Goydon fere laicus est clam piliatus.
 Hic dixit quod monachi non debent laborare,
 Sed quod fratres validi debent mendicare ;
 Sed ejus asserere vel suum negare
 Non est factum aliquod liquide probare. 220

With an O and an I, majus audax pecus
 Quod in bija cernitur, exstat Bayard cœcus.
 Tunc Crophorne accesserat omnibus ignotus,
 Non Anglicus, non Gallicus, non Francus, non Scotus,
 Non claustro sed sæculo se donabat totus ; 225
 Apostata jam publicus, a nobis sit remotus !

With an O and an I, a claustro sic dempti
 Christi non sunt ; quare sic ? quia sunt adempti.
 Tu, Crophorne stultissime, credo quod insanis
 Ut quid scholas occupas frivolis et vanis ; 230
 Dicta tua non valent unum stercus canis,
 Quamvis isti monachi coaxant cum ranis.

With an O and an I, dixit bufo crati, Maledicti desuper sint tot dominati.
 Facto fine monachis frater sequebatur, 235
 Doctor de junioribus, qui Mertone vocatur ;
 Sed quia balbutiens tanquam corvus fatur,
 Nihil quod proposuit tunc reportabatur.

With an O and an I, sileat ut mutus,
 Donec per Franciscum sit loquelæ restitutus. 240
 Tunc processit Whappelode fere cerebrosus,
 Non arguens, sed garrulans, et nimis mendosus,
 Cujus labor quamlibet est infructuosus,
 Cum sit pro mendaciis omnibus exosus.

With an O and an I, talis frater fictus 245
 Est frater æquivoce, sicut frater pictus.

Tunc accessit alius, Stokis nominatus,
 Rufus naturaliter, et veste dealbatus,
 Omnibus impatiens, et nimis elatus,
 Et contra veridicos dirigens conatus. 250

With an O and an I, sub tam rubra pelle Animus non habitat nisi unctus felle.
 Hic per dies plurimos doctor laboravit,
 Nihil ad propositum quod argumentavit ;
 Allegans quod fœminæ Christus imperavit 255
 Ut potum porrigeret, ipsa ministravit.

With an O and an I, si tunc tacuisses,
 Tu nunc stulto similis, philosophus fuisses.
 Si legas a sæculo non erat inventum,
 A quibus hæc religio cepit fundamentum, 260
 Pollinudum primitus habebat indumentum,
 Sed cur hæc despicitur est magnum portentum.

With an O and an I, fuerunt Pyed Freres
 Horum quidam prædicant quod sunt ex Maria, 265
 Alii tunc asserunt quod sunt ex Helia, Cum istorum quilibet discordet a via ;
 Nullus talis veniet cœli monachia.

With an O and an I, si fundator detur,
 Ipse dedit regulam quæ rogo monstretur. 270
 Post hæc die postera Nichol veniebat,
 Et ad tacta singula clare respondebat,
 Et Philippus Repyndone omnia solvebat,
 Quæ Petrus sic Apocrofus<sup>2</sup> in schola tangebatur.

With an O and an I, postquam sic voluerunt 275
 Fratres tunc et monachi vultum depresserunt,

Monachi cum fratribus pariter videntes

With an O and an I, pro quæstu sanctorum Largas dant corrigias de bonis aliorum.
 Post hæc simul adeunt metropolitanum,
 Nichol Herford asserunt hæreticum, prophanum,
 Et Philippum Repyndon proclamant insanum, 285
 Profusis pecuniis liniantes manum.

With an O and an I, pecuniis placatus,
 Quicquid fratres cupiunt, dicit, " Sum paratus."
 Tunc ipsos episcopus et fratres citabant,
 Contra quos, cum venerant, nihil allegabant, 290
 Qui multis injuriis ipsos aggravabant ;
 Qui visis periculis ad Papam appellabant.

With an O and an I, Filius et Flamen
 Hos cum Patre dirigant in agendis. Amen.

(Of his return with Adam de Marisco from the Council of Lyons, and the death of Alexander ab Hales.)

Veros non moleſtat amicos, ſed magis conſolatur quicquid ſapienter et ſalubriter diſponit Is, quem vera amicitia complectimur. Quapropter cum veri ſitis amatores et amici Dei, non poteſt vos quicquam moleſtare quod Ipſo fit ordinante. Ipius autem providentia, quæ omnia ſapienter diſponit et ſalubriter, frater Johannes ſocius fratris A. laborat quartana, qua ægrotare incepit in reditu noſtro apud Beluacum, quem diebus interpolationis duximus uſque ad Nogent, et illinc per aquam Sequanæ uſque ad Parisios fecimus eum nos præcedere. Quia autem non videbatur nobis neque fratri Adæ ſecurum quod ſequeretur nos inde uſque mare, nec quod Parisiis moraretur propter aeris ipſius loci infectionem non ſalubrem, elegimus ut per aquam iret Rothomagum, fratre Adamo uſque illuc eundem comitante, qui nullo modo voluit ab ægrotante recedere donec notis sibi fratribus in loco salubri illum commisisset, et sic ad mare tandem nobis occurreret. Verumptamen cum venissent ad urbem quæ vocatur Manta, invalescente debilitate dicti fratris Johannis, non ausus fuit frater A. illum ulterius ducere, nec propter ipsius debilitatem ab ipso recedere, ut nobis secundum condictum occurreret. Quia igitur apud dictam urbem Mantam ambo remanserunt, supplicamus omni qua possumus affectione quatenus fratrem P. de Theokesbyria cum aliquo vel aliquibus fratribus qui cum fratre Johanne possent commorari donec statum ipsius Dominus emendaverit, fratre P. cum fratre A. redituro, ad prædictam urbem mittere non tardetis; hoc enim utrique fieri desiderant et supplicant.

Valete semper in Domino.

Dominationi vestræ notum facimus, nos per Dei gratiam et liberos nostros sanos esse et incolumes, quod de vobis scire toto cordis et animi affectu desideramus. Regiæ majestati vestræ significantes, quod electus Cantuariensis præterita die nuncios suos, cum litteris suis, nobis destinavit, et per ipsos nobis significavit, quod quorundam relatu didicerat nos pro facto suo de episcopatu Cycestrensi contra ipsum fuisse commotas, et petiit quod super hoc non molestaremur, nec contra ipsum moveremur. Cui per nuncios et litteras nostras significavimus, quod non fuit mirum si contra ipsum moveremur, cum vos super hoc offendisset, nec posset aliquo modo nostram habere benevolentiam dummodo vestram sustineret indignationem. Quibus etiam auditis et intellectis, in propria persona ad nos accessit, nobis significans quod super prædictis et omnibus aliis vestram pro posse suo adimpleret voluntatem, cui persuasimus quod vestram adimpleret voluntatem si nostram vellet sedare indignationem; quia dum discordia inter vos et ipsum duraret, nostram iram nec indignationem eidem ullo modo remitteremus. Excellentissimæ igitur dominationi vestræ omni qua possumus affectione supplicamus, quatenus statum vestrum, quem Deus prosperum faciat et felicem, et vestræ voluntatis beneplacitum, nobis crebro, si placet, significare dignemini.

Valeat excellentia vestra semper in Domino.

THE DATE OF THE ARRIVAL OF THE FRIARS.

See p. 5.

Two narratives from different sources, apparently referring to different events connected with the arrival of the Minorites in England, have been preserved in the Chronicle of Lanercost and the Liber Conformitatum. I give them here, as they supply an omission in Eccleston's text:—

“A.D. 1224. The rule and life of the Friars Minors was this year confirmed by our Lord Honorius the Pope. And in this year, after the Feast of the Nativity of the glorious Virgin, the Friars Minors landed in England at Dover; four clerks and five laymen, simple men and despised, because at that time idiots (omnes fatui nativi) scarcely differed from them in the form of their dress. One who was a parabolist said of them, ‘If they are inwardly what they show outwardly, I take them to be better than any others who traverse the earth.’ Of their contemptible appearance at their first coming take two instances. When they entered England they asked entertainment at a nobleman's house near Dover in the guise of mendicants, and received it as strangers. For he locked them up in a strong chamber, and barricaded the entrance, that he might take counsel in the morning with his neighbours, and examine who they were. They all weary as they were betake themselves to repose until daybreak, and then, thinking to depart, found the doors locked. They wait patiently, until later in the day they are brought out before a multitude of spectators, who inquire of them who they are, and with what intention they had entered the island. When they alleged their pious purpose, one of the magistrates replied that they were spies and robbers. Thereupon a friar offering his cord with a smile, ‘See,’ said he, ‘if you take us for robbers, here is a halter ready to hang us with.’ Upon which the judges, returning to their senses, confessed that they could not have any sinister purposes who thus freely offered themselves to death.

“Another instance occurred not far from Oxford, at the new settlement of the Friars there. There was a knight who hated their mode of life, and had used them bitterly, blackening their good name whenever an opportunity offered. It happened on Christmas day that he who ruled over the Friars assembled them to sow the saving seed of the Lord in the land. As two of them were going into a neighbouring wood, picking their way along the rugged path over the frozen mud and rigid snow, whilst the blood lay in the track of their naked feet without their perceiving it, the junior said to the elder, ‘Father, shall I sing, and lighten our journey?’ and on leave being granted, he thundered forth a Salve Regina misericordiæ. It so chanced that the soldier, by no means in good humour with them, was following the same road, without their knowledge. Now when the hymn was concluded, as the soldier saw the prints of the blood from their naked feet in the wood, he who had been the consoler said with a sort of self-congratulation to his companion, ‘Brother, was not that antiphonal well sung?’ Whereupon the soldier, breaking in upon their talk, ‘Yes, by the Lord, it was; and may the Lord bless and prosper you, who, like the Apostles, are patient in necessities, and rejoice in tribulation.’ And at this word he slipped from his horse, and asked pardon on his knees for the harsh judgments he had passed upon them.”—Chron. de Lanercost, p. 31.

In the Liber Conformitatum of Bartholomew of Pisa, written towards the latter end of the 14th century, and therefore of less authority than Eccleston or the Chronicle already quoted, the following tradition has been preserved of the English mission:—

“At Oxford lies Friar Agnellus de Pisis. He was the first minister in England; glorious for his life and his miracles. He was the first who built a convent at Paris, and was Custos there. Whilst he was only a deacon he would not advance to priest’s orders without licence from a general chapter. He was eventually appointed by St. Francis the first Minister to England, and sent there with four brethren, in which number was Friar Albertus de Pisis, who, after Agnellus, was Minister of England, and was indeed third General Minister after St. Francis.

“This Friar Agnellus, with his aforesaid companions, going to England, entered that land on the third day of May, and were received at Canterbury most devoutly, in the bowels of charity, by the Friars Preachers who dwelt there. Then wishing to go to Oxford, about eventide they arrived at a grange belonging to the Monks of Ambidon (Abingdon), in a vast wood between Bath and Oxford; and not being able to proceed on their journey, as the floods were out, they asked hospitality at that late hour of the day, for the love of God, of the monks living in that grange, lest they should perish from hunger and the wild beasts in the wood. The porter told the Prior, who was there with four monks, sc. the sacrist, the cellarer, and a novice; who seeing them, and taking them for mummers, and not God's servants, drove them away reproachfully, and thrust them out of the gates. But the youngest monk had compassion on them, and said to the porter, 'When the Prior and monks are gone to bed, do you, for love of me, send those poor men into the hay-loft, and I will provide for the rest.' And when they were let into the loft, and rested among the hay, the young monk brought them bread and beer, commending himself to their devotions. On the following night, whilst he was asleep, he had a dream. He beheld Jesus sitting on a marvellous throne in the oratory, and all summoned before his judgment seat. Then cried the Judge with a terrible voice, 'Let the guardians of this place be summoned.' And when all were brought before him, there came a certain poor man, humble and despised, in the habit of those poor Friars, and he cried with a loud voice, 'O, most impartial Judge, the blood of my brethren (fratres) which hath been shed this night crieth unto thee. The guardians of this place have refused them meat and lodging, although they have left all for thy sake, and were now coming here to seek those souls which thou hast redeemed with thy blood; they would not, in fact, have refused as much to jesters and mummers.' Then Christ with a terrible voice exclaimed to the Prior, 'Of what order art thou, O Prior.' And he said of the Order of St. Benedict. And Christ said to St. Benedict, 'Benedict, does he say true?' And St. Benedict replied, 'He is the destroyer of my Order, and his companions who are with him; for I gave directions in my rule that the Abbot's table should always be filled with guests. Whereas they have refused food and shelter contrary to my rule.' Then the Judge commanded them to be hanged on the elm that stood in that cloister." The writer then proceeds to state that in the morning the monk found his dream verified in the sudden death of the offenders, and went and told the news to the Abbot of Abingdon. The Friars upon entering Oxford presented themselves to King Henry, who liberally granted them a piece of land there; and not only this monk, but the great Bishop of Erfurt Dns. Rodolphus and an Abbot<sup>1</sup> entered the Order, and behaved with so much humility that both carried water, and sand, and stones for the building of the place aforesaid.

“ This Friar Agnellus received English lads into the Order, and setting up schools for the poor was zealous for study; but afterwards had reason for regret, when he saw the Friars bestowing their time on frivolities and neglecting needful things. For one day when he wished to see what proficiency they were making, he entered the schools whilst a disputation was going on, and hearing them wrangling and questioning Utrum sit Deus, he cried, ‘ Woe is me, woe is me. Simple brothers enter Heaven, and learned brothers dispute whether there is a God at all!’ Then he sent 10*l.* sterling to the Court to buy the Decretals, that the Friars might study them, and give over frivolities.”—Lib. prim. f. 79 b.

The Hospitale Sacerdotum, referred to by Eccleston as the place where the Friars Minors were first entertained on their landing in England, is evidently “ The Hospital of Poor Priests,” afterwards the Bridewell of the town of Canterbury. It was founded by the Archdeacon Simon Langton, brother of the celebrated Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury. Both were great favourers of the Friars Minors.—See Somner, p. 71.

DISPUTE RESPECTING THE LIVING OF THAME.

Epist. Adam de Marisco, p. 185.

“ In these days [1241] there sprung up a serious feud between our Lord the King and the Bishop of Lincoln (Grosetete,) because a certain clerk of the king’s, prudent and loyal, by name John Mansel, by the favour and aid of the king, and by reason of a provision obtained from our Lord the Pope, was admitted into the possession of the church of Thame. This church my Lord the Bishop had conferred during its vacancy on a clerk named Master Simon of London, the pœnitentiary of the Bishop of Durham. The bishop, incensed at the king’s proceeding, diligently admonished his Majesty, then staying in Wales, by his Archdeacons of Huntingdon and Leicester, that, in gratitude to God for his unexpected victory, he should hasten to amend so enormous a trespass, lest perchance the Lord in His anger should turn his laughter into mourning. To this the King replied, ‘ I answer heart-free; because an appeal has been lodged; and no change ought to be made pending an appeal. I have attempted nothing except upon the advice of the learned in the law, and on the strength of Apostolical authority.' Then said one of the archdeacons, 'My Lord the King, our Lord the Bishop of Lincoln has a privilege from the See Apostolical whereby he is exempted from providing for any one by apostolical mandate, except there be special mention made of the privilege. But in the tenor of this Papal mandate, which the foresaid John relies on, and by reason of which he has, with your aid, thrust himself into the said church, there is no mention of such a privilege. Therefore, the Bishop of Lincoln is not bound in this case to answer him, specially in the collation of the Church of Thame, which he has conferred already on another person during its vacancy. And supposing the bishop had no such privilege, it is unreasonable that any one should thrust himself into the possession of a church without leave of the diocesan; more than all, against his will; no, not even though he were supported by the authority of the Pope, since our Lord the Pope desires that all things should be done decently and in order. But what need is there for dissension, why attempt in this way? Our Lord the Bishop of Lincoln will be easily inclined, on your and his own petition, to provide for Master John, according to his deserts, as an excellent, wise, and competently-learned man, a benefice as rich or even richer; and the collation will then be in both cases lawful and honest. And that it may be so, our Lord the Bishop humbly and devoutly requires; for he is prepared to fulminate the sentence of anathema on all the spoilers and invaders of his Church's dignity.' When the aforesaid John had heard this, as well as the King and his councillors, he said, 'My Lord the King, far be it that discord or disturbance should arise on my account between such noble personages. I patiently resign my right. The Lord will at his good pleasure provide sufficiently for me so long as you are alive.'"<sup>1</sup>

The chronicler then proceeds to state that, as the King delayed compliance on his return to London, Grostete made his appearance, ready to pronounce sentence of excommunication upon Mansel and his adherents. Upon which the latter, in great terror, absolutely resigned the living of Thame into the hands of the King. This must be the resignation to which Adam de Marisco refers. Hereupon the King, fearing that if he held out any longer, Grostete would resign his bishopric, and go into voluntary exile, as he was prepared to do, mitigated the rigor of his determination, and the dispute was compromised by bestowing on John Mansel the Church of Maidstone.—M. Paris in an. 1241.

WILLIAM DE BEAUCHAMP.

This William Beauchamp of Bedford, son of Simon, a nobleman of great power and authority, had adhered to the barons in the wars against King John. "And as," says Dugdale, "this William de Beauchamp had been an active person in those turbulent times against King John, so did he continue against King Henry the Third, as is manifest from his being taken prisoner in the Battle of Lincoln, 1 H. III. But submitting to obedience before the end of that year, as most did, he had restitution of his lands, which were seised upon for that transgression.

"In 2 Hen. III., he paid sixty-one pounds sixteen shillings, upon levying the first scutage of that King, for those forty-five knights fees and a half, a fifth and twelfth part, which he then held, and was the same year in the King's army at Newark.

"In 7 Hen. III., being with other great men in that expedition then made into Wales, he had scutage of all his tenants in the counties of Middlesex, Hertfordshire, Bedfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Huntingdonshire, and Berkshire, and deserved so well for that service, that the next year following, after the King had caused the castle of Bedford to be wholly demolished, and the ditches thereof to be filled up, he obtained a patent for the site thereof, with liberty to erect a mansion upon it, and to inclose it with a wall, not exceeding the height of that which was for the lesser ward, but to be without any battlement.

"In 10 Hen. III., being in the King's army at Grosmund in Wales, against Richard, Earl Marshal, then in rebellion, he suffered with the rest of the King's forces, who were, by a sudden surprise from the Welsh, despoiled of all they had there.

"In 19 Hen. III., he was constituted Sheriff for the Counties of Buckingham and Bedford, in which year he obtained a charter to himself, and Ida his wife, who was the King's cosin, that the Mannor of Newport, of her dowry, should thenceforth be exempt from suit to the county, or Hundred Court, aid to the sheriff, and view of Frank-pledge.

"In 20 Hen. III., at the solemn nuptials of that King, he performed the office of almoner for the same day. And in 21 Hen. III. executed the office of sheriff for the counties of Bedford and Buckingham.

“ In 36 Hen. III., at the instigation of his wife, he much afflicted the monks of Waton in Bedfordshire, and diversly oppressed the canons of Newnham, whom he ought to have cherished and favoured, as my author saith. And in the 37 Hen. III., gave a fine of one hundred pound to the King that he might be excused from attending him at that time into Gascoigne.

“ In 41 Hen. III., being grown aged, he settled all his estate upon William his son, whose homage thereupon the King received, ratifying that grant; and the next ensuing year received command to be at Chester upon Monday next preceding the Feast of S. John the Baptist, well furnished with horse and arms, to oppose the hostile incursions of Lewelin, Prince of Wales. It seems he was then in person there, for by a special writ he was acquitted for his scutage upon that expedition; and died in 44 Hen. III., leaving an honorable fame behind him for many great exploits, but especially for his munificence to divers religious houses.”—Dugdale’s Baronage.

HUGH MORTIMER.

See p. 298.

This Hugh Mortimer was first, as I said, official of Canterbury, Boniface being Archbishop elect, and taking ship to go for Rome, commanded the woods belonging to his archbishopric to be cut down and sold, and certain taxes and impositions to be levied upon the lands, and instituted Mr. Hugh Mortimer, a native of the Province of Poitou, his official, who diligently executed his commands.” He continued official very long, it seems, for in the year 1270 I find a decision of his as official in a controversy wherein the monks of Horton Priory in Kent were interested, recorded in the Leiger of that house. It seems he was also chancellor or vicar-general to the Archbishop; for in the year 1258 he sends his mandate of induction to the Archdeacon’s official for the inducting the Abbot of St. Radegund into the parsonage of Alcham. Afterwards, to wit, about the year 1271, he became archdeacon, which place he held about fourteen years. Archbishop Boniface died 1270, at which time Hugh Mortimer was in possession of the archdeaconry, and had been so (as is most probable) two years before the death of that archbishop. . . . In which time, to wit, in the vacancy of the archbishopric by the death of Boniface, I find him play the diocesan, in appropriating by authority or ordinary to the Hospital of Poor Priests in Canterbury the parish church of St. Margaret in Canterbury, with consent of the patron, the Abbot of St. Austin’s. . . . His challenging of this and the like power, in the time of the vacancy, begat a quarrel between him and the monks of Christ Church, the like to that between his predecessor, Simon Langton, and them, both in the nature and end of it.—Somner's Cant. p. 157.

Electus Cantuariensis naves ascensus jussit nemora archiepiscopatus abscidi et vendi, et quasdam tallias et collectas in terris suis fieri, et constituit quendam suum officialem, natione Pictavensem, magistrum Hugonem de Mortuo Mari, qui diligenter mandata sua exsequatur.—Florilegium [ad an. 1245, p. 189.]

“Whilst these events were in the course of occurrence, Boniface, Archbishop elect of Canterbury, and the Bishops of Hereford and Worcester, who, of all the prelates of England, were the most special friends of the Pope, and the most suspected by the English, suddenly set sail to go to the Pope on some secret business. . . . The said Boniface also, after careful examination, declared the Church of Canterbury to be irremediably shackled with debts to the amount of 15,000 marks. Therefore, at his departure, when about to embark at Dover, he ordered the woods belonging to the archbishopric to be cut down and sold, and heavier collections and tallies to be made amongst the clergy and the laity.”—Mat. Paris ad an.

JOHN AND ALEXANDER, THE MINORITE COLLECTORS.

See p. 313.

“Whilst fortune was deceiving the world with such illusions, two friars of the Minorite order, named John and Alexander, Englishmen by birth, obtained from the Pope the power of extorting money for the use of his holiness, and were sent by him into England. Armed with many papal bulls, and hiding under sheep's clothing the rapacity of wolves, they presented themselves to the king with down-cast looks, and flattering speech; begged his permission to wander through England, collecting alms for the Pope, asserting they would use no coercion. Obtaining permission from the king, who saw nothing sinister in their proceedings, the said friars now transformed into sophisticated legates, and elated with the gifts of the king's clerks, set out from the court mounted on palfreys, with gilded housings, adorned in costly raiment, booted and spurred like knights, to the injury and discredit of their order and profession. They took on themselves the functions and exercised the tyranny of legates; demanded procurations and thought nothing of exacting 20 shillings on every such occasion. They visited first the higher order of the clergy demanding money for the Pope, under a grievous penalty, allowing but little time for reply or payment. Coming to Grostete, the Bishop of Lincoln, who had been a special friend and favorer of the order, so much that he had once conceived the idea of entering it himself, he was overwhelmed with astonishment at beholding such a monstrous transformation in the habit, behavior and office of the friars Minors. As they pressed him with great urgency for a small sum from his diocese, viz., six thousand marks, in compliance with the papal mandate, the bishop replied with grief and astonishment, "Brother, this demand, saving the Pope's reverence, is unexampled and dishonorable; to obey it is impossible. It does not concern me alone, but the clergy, the people, and the kingdom in general. Until I have obtained the advice of the community of this realm I cannot think of giving a precipitate answer on so arduous and perilous a business."—M. Paris, A.D. 1247.

COUNTESS OF ARUNDEL.

About the same time, whilst the king was still staying at London, there came to him in his chamber, Isabella, Countess of Arundel, relict of H. Earl of Arundel, a kinswoman of the king, to plead her rights in a certain lordship to her belonging. The king assumed at first a look of calmness, but afterwards harshly rated her, refusing to listen to her request. Upon this the countess, though a woman, replied with dignity more than a woman. "My Lord the King, do you turn away your face from the right? Justice can no longer be obtained in your court. You are the appointed mediator between the Lord and us; but you govern neither us nor yourself well; and you scruple not to vex and trouble the church in many ways; and this you have shown not only now but upon divers occasions. Without fear and compunction you oppress your nobles in various ways." On this the king, with a sneer and a grin, said, with a loud voice: "Ho, ho, my lady countess, have the noblemen of England granted you a charter, and struck a bargain with you to become their spokeswoman and prolocutress because of your eloquence?" "My liege," replied the countess, with a firmness beyond her years, "the nobles have made no charter, but you and your father have made a charter, and you have sworn to observe it inviolably, and yet, many times have you extorted money from your subjects after promising to keep your word, and after all shown yourself a shameless transgressor. Where are the liberties of England, often reduced to writing, so frequently granted, so often redeemed? I, though only a woman, and all your natural and faithful subjects, appeal against you, to the tribunal of the awful Judge of all. Heaven and earth shall be our witnesses, and may the Lord of “vengeance judge our quarrel; since you refuse us justice.” Upon this the king was silent and confused. At length he said: “Do you not ask this favor because you are my kinswoman?” To which she replied: “How can I hope you will grant me that as a favor which you deny me as a right? I appeal before the face of Christ against those who are your advisers, who infatuate and bewitch you.”—Mat. Paris, A.D. 1252.

DISPUTE RESPECTING THE HOSPITAL IN SOUTHWARK.

In the year 1252, about the octaves of St. Martin [Nov. 18.], a priest intruded himself into the wardenship of St. Thomas's Hospital, in Southwark, with the consent of the Bishop of Winchester, in whose diocese that hospital stands. But Master Eustace de Len, the Archbishop's official, considering his dignity affronted, because his consent ought first to have been asked in reference to the patronage, admonished the priest to retire, once, twice, and a third time. The priest, who is also the prior, refused, sticking fast to possession. The official excommunicates him on the ground of contumacy, and under this sentence the prior remained for forty days, redoubling his threats and his abuse. The official considering such pride to be intolerable, commanded the priest to be arrested as a contumacious offender. Hereupon the prior took sanctuary in the church, in his sacerdotal vestments, but the officers sent to apprehend him, spared not to arrest him, as he was excommunicated, and had done despite to the keys of the church. So the official gave orders that he should be brought to Maidstone, a manor of the Archbishop's, until deliberation had about this matter; because it was said that the Archbishop would soon be there.

When the Bishop elect of Winchester heard this, he fumed red hot with rage, unbecoming a bishop; and deeming himself to have suffered a very grievous affront, he made a complaint to his brethren. Elated by their aid and advice, he assembled a band of soldiers, and with a large company at his heels, sent them in quest of the authors of this violence, intending to have them arrested. With a mighty fury and tumult they came in hostile array to Southwark, expecting to find the guilty party. But after they had pried into every hole and corner, without any result, they hurried off to Maidstone, resolving to liberate the prior, detained there as a prisoner. Breaking bars and bolts, and examining every corner, as they could not discover the object of their search, who had been carefully stowed away, they called for fire, proposing to burn the whole place to ashes. After much mischief done, not finding him whom they were in quest of, and hearing from some tale-bearer in the neighbourhood that the official was at Lambeth, near London, they hurried off there in a body, and wrenching the gates from their hinges and battering them down with levers, they lay violent hands on the official, as he was sitting down to dinner, never anticipating any such proceeding, and drag him off, like the vilest offender taken in a larceny, and set him on a scurvy horse and carry him off at their pleasure; not so much as allowing him to hold the bridle. Oh, rash presumption, oh, inexcusable irreverence, to treat and vex with so much ignominy so authentic a man, so excellently learned, so clearly famous; above all, one who was the representative of the Archbishop! * * * So after they had done all that their anger, or rather fury, suggested, they dragged off the official by the bridle to Farnham, until they should be certified of the restitution of the prior. At length they let him go. He is driven away as a caiff. The official, though an old man, flew away like a bird to Walerlee [Waverley?], a Cistercian house, rejoicing for that time that he had escaped their crooked and hooked hands and claws, without daring to look behind him, lest he should suffer the doom of Lot's wife. And when the monks saw him they marvelled what mishap could have driven him there a solitary and a fugitive. There he took breath and received consolation.

The party of the Archbishop who had received this wrong lodged a heavy complaint before the Archbishop of this presumption, with many sighs and tears, exaggerating great offences into greater, and of grave ones making still graver. Stirred with anger more than I can tell you, the Archbishop exclaims: "These are sharp tidings on my first arrival:" then taking with him the Bishops of Chichester and Hereford, he started for London. There with the two mentioned bishops in full pontificals, in the presence of an innumerable assemblage of people summoned to attend by the voice of the crier, thirty days' indulgence being granted to those who came, the Archbishop excommunicated, in St. Mary the Arches, with excessive horror and solemnity, all the contrivers and abettors of this rash act, except our Lord the King, and the Queen, with their children, Earl Richard, the countess his wife, and their children. And he wrote besides to all his suffragans in virtue of their obedience to the see of Canterbury, strictly charging them to do the same in their churches every Sunday and holiday.

On the other side the Bishop elect of Winchester commanded the Dean of Southwark and some others of his subjects to withstand the Archbishop and denounce to his face that his excommunication was null and void. "Yes," said he, "it is empty and frivolous, and in the wrong-doer a mere foxlike shuffle."

However, the Archbishop treasuring up the fire of his hate under its ashes, as Master Eustace, who was more hurt and more indignant, instigated him to revenge for so enormous a transgression, directed his steps to Oxford, and summoning a convocation of all the scholars then resident there from all parts, he propounded to them publicly this nefarious act seriatim; that by their reports an offence so enormous might not be hidden even from distant nations. As he approached the town there went out to meet him on high horses, in their best array, an innumerable multitude of the clergy, doing honor, as they ought, to an archbishop and primate of all England. And as he sat down to a sumptuous dinner they looked on. Now when the Archbishop and his scrambling clerks saw the sçavoir faire, the staidness of demeanor, the style, the address, the sternness of their morals, he was compelled to acknowledge that the University of Oxford was a worthy rival to the University of Paris. So on the day after St. Nicholas [Dec. 7th.], before all the clergy assembled at the sound of their common bell, the Archbishop caused to be read aloud the presumptuous temerity and temerarious presumption of the Bishop elect of Winchester, who had conceived this audaciousness from his proximity to the King, and of his brethren and his accomplices, and he published the names of the transgressors, and intimated the sentence he had passed on them before.—Mat. Paris, in an. 1252.

THE MINORITES AT SCARBOROUGH.

See p. 406.

The obscure allusion to Scarborough is explained by a passage in the letter of Grostete. It is addressed to the Cistercian abbot and convent there, an order notoriously unfriendly to the friars.

“I have received,” he says, “a letter apostolic, to the effect, that on the authority therein contained, I should have the buildings of the Minorites of Scarborough demolished, if they be of such a nature as is described in the aforesaid letter. I have accordingly summoned the friars, and on their appearing by proxy legally constituted, before my official acting on my behalf, during two days’ litigation, it was objected on their part against the said letter that there was a flaw in its construction, and they exhibited a faculty (privilegium) to the effect that the friars could not be convented by letters apostolic except express mention were made of the said indulgence, and of their order. After much altercation on these and other points, on the third day the friars appeared by their proctor before me sitting in my own person, and one of their order said as follows: That although, notwithstanding their profession, they thought they might innocently defend themselves in this behalf, by contending that they were supporting their own rights before me, not in temporal matters, but the salvation of souls, arising from their inhabiting the said place, and that in such a cause, as they alleged, ordinary law and right must give way to the salvation of souls; yet because (as the same brother asserted) their profession is the gospel, which bids us not to resist evil, but to him that strikes us on the right cheek to offer the other also, and because the authority of St. Paul requires us rather to be defrauded than to strive,—therefore they would freely recede from their right, and abandon the place which had given occasion to this dispute, forbearing the least offence to you, whom they regard as their most holy fathers and abundant benefactors. And the same brother, prostrating himself at the feet of your proctor and others of your fraternity then present before us, humbly requested pardon for his Order, inasmuch as for two days of the trial the foresaid friars, guided by the spirit of evil counsel, had, as it were, in defence of their own right, offended your charity. The proctor also of the said friars of Scarborough ratifying the same, expressly renounced on their behalf the foresaid exemption and privilege, and all other defences thereto belonging. But we,<sup>1</sup> with your proctor and others of your fraternity then present, considering, or rather being assured, that if the aforesaid friars should hereupon depart from Scarborough, as according to the assertion of their proctor they professed themselves with all humility prepared to do, it would not redound to the credit of your Order, but rather blacken your reputation, as your discretion, without any suggestion on my part, may readily understand, with the advice and assent of your said proctor and fraternity have tolerated the stay of the Friars Minors of Scarborough in that place, until we had given you notice of the premises, and received your determination by Letters Patent as to their abiding there, or their departure from the same, &c.”—Brown’s Fasc. ii. 383.

JOHANNES DE S. EGIDIO.

See p. 132, 172.

John de St. Giles here spoken of was a Dominican friar of no mean repute, and the intimate friend of Bishop Grostete. He was born (according to Bale) near St. Alban’s, studied at Paris, became an eminent physician, was appointed Professor of Medicine in the University there, and enjoyed the favour and patronage of Philip Augustus. After a successful career at Paris and Montpellier, he applied himself to theology at the time when the Order of St. Dominick made its appearance in the University of Paris; and he was the first Englishman who embraced that profession, and the first of that profession who publicly taught theology in the schools. According to Touron,<sup>1</sup> he succeeded Roland of Cremona in the Chair of Theology at Thoulouse about 1231, where he was exposed to the hostilities of the Albigenses; and shortly after held the Chair of Theology at Oxford. It was here that he became acquainted with Grostete, then reader to the Minorite Friars, with Robert Bacon and Richard Fishacre. To this account of him, found in most works which speak of this Order, we can now add the information furnished by the letters of Grostete and De Marisco. Among those of the former there is an earnest supplication to Jordanus, the Prior General of the Dominicans,<sup>2</sup> in which the writer, after mentioning the intimacy existing at Oxford between himself and the Prior General, proceeds to say, "Your charitable discretion is well aware that our diocese is much larger and more populous than any other in England, and therefore I need more effectual aid in the preaching of God's word, in the hearing of confessions, in the enjoining of penance, more prudent counsel in the various and new emergencies which continually start up, a sound and healthy determination according to the meaning of Scripture. I know of no man who can be so effectual a coadjutor in these respects as Friar John de St. Giles, whose soul, perceiving my need and great necessity in these respects, is graciously pleased to accede to my requests if it meets with your charitable approval. Wherefore, at the feet of your benignity, I, prostrate, supplicate you with humble devotion, and adjure you by the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ, and by the compassion of his beloved Mother, that you would mercifully grant my request, and license Friar John, or rather enjoin him, to help me, a prop to my weakness, a supplement to my insufficiency, &c."

This request it seems was complied with. Grostete bestowed on him the prebend of Leighton (see p. 132,) and the archdeaconry of Oxford (172,) from which preferments he requested to be released, as Adam de Marisco informs the Bishop. He outlived his friend however; for Mat. Paris states that in 1253, during his last sickness, Grostete summoned to his bed-side John de St. Giles, "skilful in medicine, in theology learned and refined," to receive comfort from him both in body and soul.
